Of the costumes perhaps the handsomest was a seal brown silk, combined with cream-colored brocade; but an elegant one was of invisible green silk and velvet, and a charming one of cameo-tinted silk, with brown velvet and ostrich feather trimming. The evening dresses are not all designed, but one is a mass of Valenciennes lace and puffing over pale blue silk, and another is a black lace with embroidery, and fringe of mother-of-pearl—a costly novelty in trimming. A lovely crepe overdress, to be worn with tea-rose silk, and trimmed with trails of small jardiniere roses, was noted for the beauty of the netted fringe bordering, and the opera cloak for the white softness of the plush and satin stripes which harmonized so admirably with a rich fringe of chenille, knotted with silk. As intimated in the beginning, description could be extended ad-infinitum; but a carriage cloak of heavy black silk, fur-lined, with large silver clasps, must be noticed; also a choice seal-skin set, and two of the plainest, but most sensible articles of the whole—one a simple dress of very rich black silk, no overskirt, trimmed with broad silk braids, the other a mantle of fine navy blue cloth, handsomely trimmed with braid, also of various widths and styles, combined most effectively.

How can sixteen years bear the weight of so much style and elegance?

En passant, it may be remarked that cloaks of heavy silk, fur-lined, which were so fashionable last year, promise to be in still greater demand during the coming season. The early inquiry has induced the enterprising house above mentioned to import a silk for the purpose, known as "Cathedral" silk, used abroad for surplices, and only manufactured by one person, Tapissiere, and rarely imported. It is, however, really cheaper for cloaks than the ligater silks of ordinary width; for although it is twelve dollars per yard, it is fifty-four inches wide, and cuts to such good advantage that it costs no more than a twenty-four inch silk at three and a half, while the superb quality is that of a six dollar silk of ordinary width, or a nine dollar silk three or four years ago. An imported cloak of this kind costs from two hundred and fifty to three hundred and fifty dollars, but by purchasing the silk and having it made an equally handsome one can be gotten up for from one hundred to one hundred and fifty dollars, which is quite a difference in these hard times.

—The Pittsburg, Texas, Mugnet makes the following announcement:

The young ladies will bear in mind that the handsomest, most courteous, and genteel clerk in town can be found at the store of G. W. Davis. It affords him much pleasure to show his goods to the fair. Willie will be glad to see any of his friends around.

—"Where do people go who deceive their fellow men?" asked a Sunday school teacher of a pupil. "To Europe," was the prompt reply.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges.

—An innocent bit of Tennessee news has begun to go the rounds in this shape: "A Tennessee murderer selected his victim at a spelling bee and ballasted him with buckshot while he was climbing over a five-barred word. The people have given the murderer a pair of mules and a farm, and will send him to the Legislature."

—Oskaloosa is about ready to go on with that artesian well again. It is so deep now that by placing his ear at the mouth of the well, and holding his breath, the listener can hear the people on the other side swearing in Chinese.—Hawkeye.

—"Shingle weddings" are now coming into fashion. This novel wedding takes place when the first born is old enough to spank.

—A noted negro, "Jack" Campbell by name, has just died at Madison, Ga., aged eighty years. His reputation as a broad humorist extended throughout the State of Georgia and lasted for many years. He was a slave owned by an innkeeper in Madison, and brought great prosperity to the establishment with which he was connected. His name appears in the "Statistics of Georgia," and "Major Jones' Courts hip," and many of his jokes and witty sayings have appeared in the publications of the Harpers. At one time Mr. P. T. Barnum offered the owner of Jack the sum of $10,000 for him.

—They were husband and wife, and as they stood before the Soldiers' Monument she asked:

"What's that figger on top?"

"That's a goddess," he answered.

"And what's a goddess?"

"A woman who holds her tongue," he replied.

She looked side-ways at him and began planning to make a peach pie with the pits in it for the benefit of his sore tooth.—Detroit Free Press.

Weak Lungs, Constipation, Lameness, Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Paralysis, Poor Blood and Kidney Troubles.

LOWELL, MASS, July 20th, 1874.

T. W. LANE:—I have used one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, am glad to state in my case they have proved all that you claim for them. I have been troubled with Bad Blood and all its consequent diseases, and have tried several kinds of Bitters and Pills without receiving much benefit, until I tried the CONDITION PILLS, and they have nearly cured where all else failed. Please send me another package as soon as convenient.

Yours, very truly,
J. D. WHITAKER.

Testimony of a Clergyman---Liver and Kidney Troubles.

EAST TILTON, N. H., April 14, 1875.

MR. LANE.—Dear Sir:—DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS are not only the best, but the very best I ever used. My wife has been troubled with Kidney Complant many years; one half of a package has cured her, so that she feels as well as ever. I have been troubled with Liver Compaint for many years; one-half of a package has done me more good than all the Pills I ever took. One of my neighbors took them, who has been troubled with Liver Complaint for many years: three Pills have helped him. Your Pills, where used, commend their virtues. Please send to my address one package.

REV. JOHN DAVIS.

Liver Compaint and Rheumatism so that he Could not Sleep Nights.

I was born and always lived in Pittsfield, N. H.; am now 50 years old; been troubled with Liver Complaint for 30 years, and Rheumatism for 20 years, sometimes so I could not sleep nights. I have taken one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, and they have done me more good and relieved more suffering than all the medicine I have taken during my life.

Pittsfield, N. H., Dec. 17, 1874. S. S. RING.

Fever and Ague.

INEW BOSTON, N. H., Feb. 1, 1875.

T. W. LANE,—SIR:—Last month I sent to you for a package of DR. QUAIN'S PILLS. I had tried five so-called ague cures, and I received more benefit from five of your pills than from all the "Cures" "Cholagogues," "Quinines," &c., that I have taken in two years. I cannot recommend it too highly for diseases resulting from long standing Fever and Ague.

Yours, most respectfully,
MRS. C. GARLAND.

Scaly Humor Cured by One Package---Liver Complaint Helped.

NORTH SALEM, N. H., Jan. 5, 1875.

MR. LANE.—Dear Sir:—Your Pills are all they are recommended. I was troubled with a Scaly Humor on my legs; I took one package and my legs are quite smooth. My wife was troubled with Liver Complaint; she took one package and they helped her greatly.

Yours, with respect,
JOHN H. BLAKE.

From a Leading Citizen of Rindge.

WEST RINDGE, Cheshire Co., N. H., November 17, 1874.

THOS. W. LANE:—After taking three packages of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, I am prepared to say they are the very best, for I have tried a great many kinds, and faithfully too, believing they would help me, to no effect.—These I do believe are the very best ever made; just the kind a man needs. May they be spread all over the wide world, and Dr. Quain's name a household word.

Yours truly,
ASA STICKNEY.

Felt Better, Stronger and Gained Flesh in One Week,

AFTER TAKING DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS.

ROLLINSFORD, N. H.

THOS. W. LANE:—I commenced to take DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, and in one week I was heavier, felt better, and was stronger than before, and any one troubled with BAD BLOOD can find sure remedy in these Pills.

Nov. 3, 1874. L. M. YEATON.

CHESTER, N. H., Feb. 24, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have been out of health for some time, and I took a very bad cold and it left my lungs in a very weak state. I received Dr. Quain's Condition Pills and took them according to the directions, and my lungs are some better. I can recommend them to any one who is troubled with weak lungs, for they have done me good, and I think another package will cure me. Dr. Quain's Pills ought to be known throughout the world. Please send me another package as soon as convenient.

Yours, &c., CYRUS LANE.

HILLSBOROBRIDGE, Feb. 25, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—Dr. Quain's Condition Pills are the best I ever used for lameness and pain. The first dose I took removed the pain and lameness that I have been troubled with for several years. Others have used quite a number of the pills besides myself. Please send another package by return of

MRS. DANIEL KIMBALL.

GILMANTON I. W., N. H., Feb. 25, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have been taking Dr. Quain's Condition Pills, and can recommend them as far ahead of common pills for constipation of the bowels; they do not have the debilitating effect of common purgatives I have taken.

MRS. J. B. GOODWIN.

NORTHWOOD CENTRE, March 1, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I saw Dr. Quain's Condition Pills highly recommended, and sent for a package, and I feel that they have done more for me than all the medicine I have taken for years, and can freely recommend them to others, as a good and sure medicine. Please send me another package as soon as possible.

MARTHA NORCROSS.

BRISTOL, N. H., Feb. 27, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have made a fair trial of those Condition Pills, and liked them very much. I think they are all they are recommended. They are a good Liver invigorator.

N. F. DANFORTH.

SALEM DEPOT, N. H., March 8, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE:—I think those pills (Dr. Quain's Condition Pills) are all they claim to be; my wife and I are both victims of Liver and Kidney Complaint, and general debility. We have taken about half that package you sent me, and find a marked improvement in our health. I want four packages to give away in the north part of Vermont, to friends up there. I enclose $2.00, and if you can, send me four Packages.

ROYAL SCOTT.

SOUTH PLATTSBURGH, N. Y., March 11, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE:—I have given Dr. Quain's Condition Pills a trial, and find I can honestly recommend them, they having materially improved the soreness and lameness with which I have been afflicted since getting upon my feet after the Paralysis of left side that I suffered last October. I desire you to send me another package as soon as convenient, as I am anxious to continue their use. Though not now a resident of New England, I have lived in Central Vermont more than fifty years, and trust Dr. Quain's Pills will not long be new in that section.

MOSES SHELDON.

THOS. W. LANE:—I have been troubled with Billiousness, Headache, and Dizziness, for a long time, and had the Dyspepsia so bad there were but few kinds of food my stomach would bear at all. I commenced taking your pills, have taken most of one package, and now enjoy eating as well as I ever did, am not troubled with dizziness unless by taking cold, and have been greatly benefited by the use of them.

A. L. PAGE.

FRANCESTOWN, March 13, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE:—I have found Dr. Quain's Condition Pills to be all you claim for them in Kidney Complaint, poor blood, and weak nerves. May they be circulated over the land and found in every household where medicine is needed. I enclose 50 cts. for another package as soon as convenient.

JOHN T. FELCH.

Better Health than for 10 Years.

CHESTER, N. H., Oct. 17, 1874.

MR. LANE:—I have taken one package of Condition Pills; find them in my case all they are recommended; have not enjoyed so good health for the last ten years as I have since I commenced taking the Condition Pills. Shall be happy to recommend them to others. WILLIAM H. FELLOWS.

Parties desiring to act as agents must accompany their application by a letter of recommendation as to character and responsibility from and signed by the Editor of a newspaper published in the town or county for which the agent proposes to act The agency is to sell the bonds of the Industrial Exhibition Company.

BONDS, $20 EACH.
HALF BONDS, $10 EACH.
QUARTER BONDS, $5 EACH.

The Industrial Exhibition Company will furnish agents with circulars, etc., etc.

Each newspaper published in the town where an agent is located will, as soon as the agency is established, be given an advertisement, advertising such agency and the Company, and fully explaining the plans, purposes and objects of the Company. Such advertisement will continue in such papers as long as an agency is successfully conducted.

The Industrial Exhibition Company is the first to adopt the plan so long in use by the European governments of issuing bonds when the principal is made secure and not risked, but where there is a chance for a large premium, an investment of $20 is sure to return to the investor $21—one dollar more than cost—and the holder of a $20 Bond may obtain a premium either of $50, $100, $200, $500, $1,000, $2,000, $5,000, $10,000, $25,000 or $100,000. The interest, which is ordinarily distributed to all the bond holders pro rata, is in this loan distributed by chance. The purchaser of a bond knows he will receive back his investment, with a small rate of interest, he has a chance in the above named premiums, which are simply the distribution of interest on the whole loan.

Each bond participates in four drawings each year, until it has drawn a premium, when it is surrendered, the premium paid, and the bond cancelled.

The Industrial Exhibition Company, under a special charter granted by the State of New York, is given authority to issue these bonds. The Legislature of the State, recognizing the great benefits which will arise from the success of this enterprise, have exempted all the real estate and property of the Company from taxation and assessments for five years, and has also conferred other great privileges.

Every American who understands the purposes of this Company will, of a necessity, feel a pride in aiding it to a successful termination.

Each individual who buys a bond becomes an owner and an interested party, and when he views the structure erected with his money can say, "I aided to erect in our country the most magnificent building the world has ever seen, a palace which, in truth, represents the industry, energy and mechanical genius of the American people."

The manufacturers and the inventors of America are peculiarly interested in the success of this enterprise, for the reason that it is to be their home, where all their inventions and manufactures can be exhibited and sold.

The building will contain 5,320,000 square feet of space.

Purchasers desiring Bonds before an agency is established where they reside, will communicate direct with this office, from where they can be supplied.

Parties desiring to act as agents or to purchase bonds will address

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the hurried trying climate of New England,

USE

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or Inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

A Merited Tribute.

[N. Y. Engineering and Mining Journal.]

At a recent visit to the works of the National Tube Works Company at McKeesport, Pa., we witnessed the operation of making lap-welded tubes of such a size and quality as to call for notice. The Company makes these seamless tubes or pipes of any size up to fourteen inches diameter. And as every length is tested by hydraulic pressure before leaving the works, their strength and quality is fully guaranteed. They have been found admirably adapted to carrying water for the hydraulic mines of California, Nevada, and other Western States, and for waterworks which do not require larger mains than 14 inches. The Company has just completed an order for the Virginia City and Gold Hill Water Company, of Nevada, of seven miles of 10-inch pipe, the most extensive order that, we believe, has ever been given in this country. These seamless pipes, even without coating, are more durable and are also less expensive than the riveted pipes; but the company applies a patent enamel to them that, it is claimed, makes them almost indestructible, and, indeed, the company is willing to guarantee their durability for any length of time. The appended reports by Dr. S. Dana Hayes, Massachusetts State Assayer and Chemist, and Otto Wuth, of Pittsburgh, Pa., fully establish the claims of this pipe to durability. We commend it not only to our gas and water companies, but also to our mine owners and others who have to use or convey impure water, such, for example, as in many anthracite mines. These large pipes would make excellent screen shafts for our coal breakers, and the enamel would doubtless be of great advantage for coating the exposed iron work about the mines.

In bringing the matter to the consideration of "those whom it may concern," we believe we are doing consumers as well as manufacturers a service.

REPORTS.

"I have recently made a series of tests of your enameled pipe, for the purpose of ascertaining its value as a service pipe for conveying water and other fluids, and now submit the following brief report of the results obtained:

Portions of the enamel covering itself were first removed from several pieces and submitted to chemical analysis, to determine the presence of deleterious substances; but the results of these analyses are entirely negative, as there is nothing of this kind present. The pipe is made of wrought iron, covered inside and outside, with an elastic, enamel-like material that does not contain any unwholesome or objectionable ingredients.

Its durability was then tested, by exposing different pieces of the pipe to the solvent action of hard, soft, and sea waters, alcohol, and other fluids, for many days, and finally those fluids were boiled in the pipe for several hours in each case—the object of this boiling being to obtain, as nearly as possible, in a comparatively short time, the effect produced in the pipe by long-continued usage. These tests have been very complete, and I am quite surprised at the durability and power of resistance of the enamel covering determined in this way. It has not failed in any trial with natural waters in my laboratory, and it has withstood the action of boiling corrosive fluids for a longer time than specimens of other water pipes now in common use.

I commenced this investigation with some doubts about your enameled pipe, but the severe tests which I have employed prove that it is perfectly harmless and possesses great durability, these being the properties of most importance in water pipe.

S. DANA HAYES,

State Assayer and Chemist, Mass."

"I have made a complete series of tests in order to ascertain the quality of your patent enameled pipe, and found that the onamel, covering perfectly both the inside and the outside of the wrought iron pipe, is not in the least affected by the action of alkalies, acids, salts of any composition, alcohol—in fact, any liquids which in practice are apt to be conveyed through the pipe. The enamel itself contains no deleterious substance whatever, and even if it did it would not make any difference, as not a trace of it will become soluble. Pipe so enameled is specially adapted for water and gas. O. WUTH."

News and Notes.

Major General Benjamin Franklin Butler has been elected a delegate to the Massachusetts republican State convention from Gloucester. Will he make things lively, or calm the angry storm?

Things are getting pretty badly mixed, remarks the Philadelphia Times, when Massachusetts democrats are putting up a republican for Lieutenant-Governor, a soldier who fought heroically for the Union throughout the civil war, and on the very same day the republicans in Maryland nominate, for the second place on their ticket, a copperhead, whom the Government thought necessary to incarcerate as a treasonable disunionist while the Massachusetts democratic candidate was in the field.

The two light houses on the East and West shoals, at the entrance of Matagorda bay, were swept away by the recent storm, and the keepers and families lost.

Class races combined with athletic sports will come off at Dartmouth College this Fall, about the 13th, 14th and 15th of October. The various class crews which have been selected are now in active training, and will keep things lively on the river until the races.

The bank commissioners of this State have issued a circular directed to savings banks, requiring them to tax all deposits which exceed $2000 made in the name of any one person.

Allen-Cary stock has quite perceptibly declined within the last few days. All the signs portend a brilliant republican victory in Ohio on the 12th of October.

The currency question has, if not solved, been satisfactorily stated from an inflationist point of view by an orator at Ironton, O., who proposes to "make the greenback so —— poor that the men who've got it wont want to keep it, but will put it in circulation."

Horace Gee of East Lempster says that the Sunbeam potato suits him well enough, as the six he used for seed last Spring, brought him six bushels of fine large potatoes.

Hazelton Rich's dwelling-house at Winchester was burned, Saturday, but the furniture was saved. Loss about $600; partly insured.

Barque Forest Queen, Capt. Burns, laden with wood and spars, from Port Ludlow for Havre, foundered at sea off the Rio de la Plata, and the Captain was killed by the rolling of the spars. A boat containing the first mate and six men put off from the wreck, and another with the second mate and five men followed. The latter was soon lost sight of by the steward, who was in the first mate's boat. On the fourth day one of the men died from exposure. The second boat is still missing.

The Turkish government is inclined to make no concessions, and the foreign consuls, who have attempted to effect some arrangement with the Northern Provinces of Turkey, have failed.

They have an "elastic paper currency" in Hayti, and it is worth three cents on the dollar. Bill Allen, when defeated in Ohio, can put a little burnt cork on his face and carpet-bag to that country.—Washington Republ.

Steamer City of Berlin has made the passage across the Atlantic, from Queenstown to New York, in seven days, twenty-three hours and seven minutes, the fastest time on record.

The financial condition of Peru grows worse from day to day. The government has called upon the banks for an additional loan of $8,000,000 which has so far been refused, the banks being able or willing to advance only $1,000,000. In this predicament the government threatens to issue paper currency. According to the official balance sheet the entire indebtedness of Peru, July 31, last, was $275,394,615.57.

Thomas A. Kerchival, republican, is elected Mayor of Nashville, Tenn., by a majority of 162, over Spencer Eakin, the regular democratic nominee.

In the Circuit Court, Saturday, the case of Abel Barker vs. the city of Nashua, a claim for damages caused by a defect in the street crossing of the Concord Railroad, his wife being thrown from a sleigh in February, 1873, was decided, $5000 being awarded to the plaintiff. The referee, who first decided the case, awarded $1200.

A thief entered David Sawyer's house at Belmont, Friday, and stole $100 from a trunk, overlooking Government bonds and personal notes that were in the same trunk.

Governor Cheney and his staff have received an invitation to attend the military reunion of the veteran organization at Manchester, October 12, 13 and 14, and the Governor has accepted the invitation. The staff will appear in the new regulation uniform.

George Jameson, reported missing from Bow, is in the house of correction for drunkenness, having been convicted under the assumed name of James S. Hutchinson.

Interviews with business men in the various branches of trade reveal the fact that there has been a fairly active movement of merchandise, and that, although the margin of profit is small, the Fall's season promises to be quite as satisfactory as could be expected, all things considered. Wages are low, the ranks of the unemployed are full, money is far from plentiful with the masses, and there is everywhere manifest a disposition, on the part of consumers, to worry through the Winter with as little expense as possible. Economy, a rare virtue during the "flush" times that were, is a common practice to-day, in many cases from necessity, in some from force of example. Still, the actual wants of the public must be met, people must eat and be clothed, and these demands constitute a basis for a very considerable business.—Boston Transcript.

Governor Tilden, of New York, has pardoned seventy-five convicted prisoners within seven months, including Ingersoll. His last performance is to pardon and restore to citizenship William Conroy, a profession al burglar, and the well known leader of the most daring gang in New York city. Conroy is needed to secure the burglar vote. This is a most attractive sample of democratic reform.

A good movement is that lately originated in Massachusetts in the interest of the free school system and good government. It proposes to enlist the interest of all good men in politics, and the nomination of men of character and principle for office. When good men stay from the polls, designing and unscrupulous politicians control elections with greater ease; and any tendency to overcome the distaste which thousands feel to taking an active part in the government of State and Nation can but be rejoiced at by all friends of order and good government.

The Ohio contest is so exciting that votes are taken frequently on railroad trains passing through the State, showing generally a large preponderance in favor of Hayes, the republican candidate for Governor.

As the democrats of North Carolina have but two majority in the Constitutional convention, the Charlotte Observer hopes some of the republican members may "find it convenient to pass in their checks." And already two attempts have been made to assassinate one of the republican members, Mr. McCabe, of Edgecomb, but both shots missed him.

The three railroad depots at Rochester were robbed by burglars, Thursday night. They netted twenty-six cents.

It is safe to say that few if any democratic papers will chronicle the fact that Postmaster General Jewell is conducting his department on business principles, and has prevented an estimated increase in the cost of mail transportation and reduced the cost $48,000.

The inflationists of the West and South have thrown off all disguise and openly declare that they are determined to carry their point in the next National democratic convention. They laugh at the idea that the Ohio contest has no national significance. Thus the Evansville Courier of Indiana says: "The greenback policy is invincible. Indiana was the first State to throw down the gauntlet to the money power and precipitate the inexorable conflict between the people and the National banks. Ohio adopted the Hoosier platform with scarcely a single change. The majority of the opposition (among which we class the independent voters) was nearly 40,000 in this State. It was 18,000, as we have said, in Ohio. We have nominated stronger men frequently. It was the platform that won the day, and nothing is more certain than that the greenback policy will sweep the country."

The Richmond (Va.) Whig says that all it asks to be assured of a soft-money plank in the National democratic platform is a good majority for Governor Allen in Ohio.

The Manchester Dispatch says of the veterans who are to have a reunion there on the 12th October: Come one, come all, the "lame, sick and lazy," as well as the hardy ones,—we've room enough, and you'll find plenty of "cousins" in Manchester to take care of you. Surgeon's call every morning at 8:30.

The Cole Manufacturing Company of Lake Village contract to equip the Boston, Lowell and Nashua Railroad with Miller platforms.

Two suits have been commenced against the Portland and Ogdensburg Railroad, one by the town of Littleton, and the other by George B. Redington, to compel the company to desist from building its road through the towns of Whitefield and Dalton, instead of through Bethlehem and Littleton, according to the terms of their charter. Two injunctions to stop its building have been obtained on the Company's officers.

Bill Allen incautiously mentioned Governor Hayes' name, in his Toledo speech, and the vociferous fashion in which it was cheered by the audience indicated to William that, in October, he will not rise up so much as he will sit down.

John E. Moore, formerly of Lancaster, is an extensive farmer in California. He has raised 10,000 bushels of wheat the present season, milked upwards of 100 cows, and keeps 1,500 sheep, which number he proposes to double soon.

John V. Barron of Lake Village died on the 25th, aged 89. He served in the war of 1812 as Lieutenant in the 11th U. S. Infantry, was wounded in the leg at Chippewa Plains and carried the ball till his death. He was highly esteemed.

Mr. Eugene Cook left Gates' cottage, Shelburne, at five o'clock in the morning, walked up Mount Washington, arriving at noon, rested one hour and a half, and returned, reaching his home at eight o'clock same day, having walked forty-three miles, including the ascent.

The republican State Committee of Pennsylvania have telegraphed to Col. John W. Forney to come home and assist them in the campaign. They have also engaged ex-Senator Schurz to go through the State, after he has finished in Ohio. Schurz' support of the platform of the republicans in Ohio, is regarded by them as a complete return to the republican party. Leading politicians from Pennsylvania state that everything in their State depends on the result in Ohio; for Pennsylvania will follow in the latter's footsteps.

The democratic papers regard it as approving the infamous course of Gov. Weston and his Council, that Natt Head has had his name legally changed. But with the case of Frank (lin) Jones on the same record, and precisely like Head's, and decided exactly opposite by the very same Council, any decent democrat, should for shame be the last to allude to the matter.

A Chicago dispatch of Saturday says that the prominent dry goods jobbers of that city report a larger business the past week than has ever before been transacted there in that branch of trade in the same length of time. The Fall trade is proving to be heavy. Country merchants throughout the Northwest are buying freely, and the outlook in business is more promising than it has been since the panic.

Ex-Treasurer Spinner is out in a letter in which he advises the national banks not to get too much excited over the assessment put upon them to meet the expense of redeeming their circulating notes, lest they wake up some morning and find they haven't any circulating notes to redeem.

The fine old Arkansas gentleman is being deprived of his nearest and dearest rights. Because he landed a load of shot in the person of a Sheriff recently, who was making some seizures, thereby compelling that official to take his meals off the mantelpiece until he gets well, old Col. Thompson was fined $50 by an insensate and heartless Judge.

George M. Pinney, late chief clerk in the Purchasing Paymaster's office at San Francisco, has stolen from the Government $200,000 by means of false vouchers, and has fled in a British vessel.

The World says that the democratic party is "the only body of men in the country which is showing honesty, wisdom, energy and good leadership." Exactly. Its honesty is seen in the repudiation platform of Ohio and Pennsylvania; its wisdom in putting the Empire State into the hands of a railroad attorney who befriended Tweed and pardoned Ingersoll; its energy in the slaughter of negro republicans in Mississippi, and its good leadership in the choice of eighty ex-confederate officers to Congress.—N. Y. Com. Adv.

It is reported that the directors of the Cocheco Manufacturing Company have ordered a reduction of 10 per cent. in the wages of all the operatives in the employ of the Corporation, to take effect on or about the 1st of October.

Neal Dow recommends that taxes be paid in installments in this country, as a relief to the tax-payer.

The mother of little Mabel Young, the victim of the belfry tragedy, has lost her reason and is an inmate of a private lunatic asylum.

A plague has broken out among the Fijians, and 40,000 persons have been swept away.

The late hurricane was very destructive on all the windward islands of the West Indies. Many marine disasters are reported, with much loss of life. British ship Codfish lost twelve of her crew, and British steamer Carribean lost part of her crew.

The mills at Fall River partially resumed running on Monday, but there were riotous proceedings on the part of several thousand operatives who would not sign an agreement required by the owners.

"What mysterious property," asks the Toledo Blade, "is there in a United States bond which immediately transforms its purchaser into a fiend, a villain, an oppressor of poor men, a fattener upon the tears of widows and orphans?"

The resignation of Mr. Delano, the Secretary of the Interior, which was sent to the President on the 5th of July, has been accepted by the Chief Executive in a kind and complimentary letter, expressing the fullest confidence in the retiring Secretary.

Plans of the Bonapartists.

The Bonapartist Council which met in secret session at Arenenburg, Switzerland, at the chateau of the Empress Eugenie, for the purpose of determining the future policy of the party, resulted in the following programme: The Prince Imperial shall undertake in person the exclusive direction of theImperialist policy. The Empress, who is unpopular with a large section of the party on account of her pronounced Ultramontanism, has abdicated the regency and leaves the young Prince to be guided by counsels more in accord with the prevailing sentiment of the party. The Prince Imperial will be guided wholly by M. Rouher, thus restoring to prominence in the party the section which steadfastly opposed concessions to the Constitutional party and disapproved of the liberalized policy of M. Olliv ier, previous to the war of 1870. Should the party succeed in restoring the Empire, this choice of a leader leaves no doubt of its character. It will be Imperial in the full sense of the term, and the Council at Arenenburg has decided on the Constitution of 1852 in all its vigor as the one of their choice. The policy agreed upon as best calculated to advance the interests of the party in the present Assembly is a continuous demand for a plebiscite, which will leave the final decision as to the form of Government in the people's hands. This is in continuation of the policy of the Emperor himself, who always founded his power upon a plebiscite. They will also demand a revision of the Constitution in accordance with article 8 of the Constitution of Feb. 28.

—There are four little girls in Milwaukee, two of them the daughters of a South-side fisherman, one the daughter of a German carpet weaver, and the other a Third Ward lassie named "Annie," who are employed by a certain well-known and wealthy tobacco dealer to pick up whatever may be found in saloons, on the streets and in the gutters, at one cent for every ten pieces, whether large or small. Every cigar stump and discarded "quid" is picked up, no matter how dirty it may be, no matter who has used it, or where it is found. These are used in the manufacture of both "choice" Havana cigars and paper chewing tobacco. The longer and better "stumps" are unrolled and used for the former purpose, while the "quids," short stumps and soaked and rotten "tips" are made into chewing tobacco. There is something delectable in a contemplation of all this. These children make good wages at the business, their pay ranging from 80 cents to $1.50 per day. When a large and well-soaked lump is found the little rascals divide it, and by so doing make 50 per cent. on their "find."

—In 1860 printers in Detroit received 28 cents per thousand ems for composition. This was in gold or its equivalent. In 1864, when inflation was at its height, and gold was selling at 285, or in other words, when greenbacks were worth but 35 cents on the dollar, the printers received 40 cents in currency per thousand ems, which was, of course, equivalent to but 14 cents in gold, or just half what they had been receiving four years earlier. Meanwhile, every article of consumption advanced in price to correspond with the advance in gold. Cotton cloth, for instance, which in 1860 could be bought for 10 cents, in 1864 was bought for 25 cents. What a printer received for setting a thousand ems in 1860 would buy him nearly three yards of cloth, while in 1864 the same amount of labor yielded but about a yard and a half. This is only one illustration out of a thousand which might be presented, all going to show that the working man is better off under a hard money regime than under inflation.—Detroit News.

—When at about the middle of the crosswalk she dropped a well-filled wallet out of her hand. Then the trouble began in earnest. She stooped over in front to pick it up, but her fingers could not reach the wallet by eighteen inches. She changed the parasol into her right hand and tried to reach sideways for the wallet. It was no go, however, for her fingers did not reach anywhere near the coveted article. She then tried to get down on her knees, but she might as well endeavor to pick up a drop of water with her ear. She reached backward, but her hand only extended downward on a level with her hips. She appeared to be much embarrassed. No one seemed to be passing at the moment who could assist her. Ah! a thought struck her suddenly. Quickly turning her parasol with the top on the ground, she glided a pretty little foot from beneath her snow-white skirts, and with a gentle kick the wallet lay in the concave parachute.

—A bootblack, whose sister was sick with cholera morbus, was sent in haste for a doctor. Rushing up to an office, he cried out: "Say, old pill-bags, the old lady sent me for you. Sis has got it—'bout to kerflumax—down flat. Rattle over our way; the old girl's waiting on you." "What is the matter? I don't understand." "Too much green corn. Sis has tumbled to it. Come, shuffle off." "I am still unable to comprehend. You say tumble? Has any one fallen and dislocated anything?" "What kind o' racket you givin' me? Sis's sick." "Ah! now I understand. Your sister is sick." "Yes, and you want to nimble your pins, old man; the gal's gripin' awful." And the boy warbled off in the direction of the post-office looking for a job.

—"Yes, sir," said a gentlemanly looking man on the street, "the panic will come—no preventing it. You see that man just going away? Well, he has a bill against me, and he says if I will pay him that he can pay some one else, or in other words, that if each man will pay what he owes, the others can pay, and that thus, under the rules of political economy, the thing will travel round in a circle. But he didn't calculate that thing must have a bottom or the circle a break. You see I owe him, but the trouble is that nobody owes me, and that breaks the circle, and the broken circle makes a panic. I am the starter." And he took a peanut and started.

—It is a popular belief that lightning has never been known to strike a beech tree. In a recent thunder shower at Goshen, a beech and maple standing together, with branches interlocking each other, received an electric bolt from a passing cloud, which shattered the maple and passed into the earth through a prostrate hemlock tree lying near, which was stripped of its bark nearly the whole length. No trace of the lightning was left upon the beech.

—When a Nevada photographer wants to make a good picture, he puts the sitter in his place, pulls out a navy revolver, cocks it, levels it at the man's head, and says, "Now, jist you sit perfectly still, and don't move a hair; put on a calm, pleasant expression of countenance, and look right in the muzzle of this revolver, or I'll blow the top of your head off. My reputation as an artist is at stake, and I don't want no nonsense about this picture."

—Two devil-fish are on exhibition in a San Francisco market. They measure twelve feet from end to end of their arms or tentacles, of which each has twenty, and the strongest swimmer would be lost if clasped by even three or four of the arms.

—Evangelist Sankey says that Queen Victoria is "just such a pleasant womanly body as we see every Sabbath in the Amen corner of our Methodist churches in America."

—They say that Vinnie Ream warbles like a canary. She ought to sing well—there are twenty choirs in a Ream.—Cincinnati Times.

—The Milwaukee Sentinel reports that a number seven hat will just fit a St. Louis mosquito bite.

—The Cape Ann Advertiser propounds the following conundrum: "Supposing you marry a young woman weighing 110 pounds, and after her marriage her weight increases to 220, are you legally married to the extra growth?"

NO. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."

"Mr. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to employ him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

The Lakeside Library

is published semi-monthly, and each issue contains a COMPLETE NOVEL, by one of the great authors of the world, as Charles Reade, Dickens, Scott, Anthony Trollope, Jules Verne, etc., etc. The completion of long and important novels in a single issue, is the most unique and valuable feature yet introduced into the periodical literature of the day, and is peculiar to The Lakeside Library.

Each issue of The Library contains a Complete Novel, that would cost in the book stores, on the average, $1.50 each; yet the price of the same in The Library is only 10 cents if you buy a single copy from your newsdealer, or only 9 cents if you subscribe for a year. The whole series of 24 numbers will contain Twenty-two Complete Novels, worth about $40.00, but costs only $2.15 in The Library!

Occasionally we shall issue double numbers, to contain unusually long and important works, as "The Law and The Lady," by Wilkie Collins, and Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Seas," by Jules Verne. When this is necessary, both numbers of the story will be issued together, so that the complete work will be in the reader's hands at once. In such cases three numbers will be issued in one month. ☞ Hence all subscriptions are received for 24 numbers.

Our next issue, Nos. 14 and 15, will be a splendid Double number complete and unabridged with Eight characteristic illustrations, containing the famous

Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Seas,

By JULES VERNE.

This wonderful book is descriptive of a voyage of 20,000 leagues under the surface of the sea! No one acquainted with Verne's peculiar and dramatic style need be told that this, his greatest book, is most intensely interesting. It lays bare the mysteries of the mighty deep—its sunken wrecks; submarine forests; the grotesque, hideous and lovely creatures who dwell therein; the beautiful coral caves; its treasures of gold, silver and jewels lost in Spanish ships of olden days. Yet so natural, so truthful with such an air of candor is the story told, that you can hardly believe you are not reading a transcript from a ship's log-book. Sent by mail by the publishers, post-paid, for 25 cents.

☞ There is only one other edition published, which costs $4.00.

Subscribe now, and get all the back numbers, that your set may be complete. The entire set of 24 numbers gives you a really choice library of Standard and Famous Novels, worth in book form about $40.00, and at a cost of only $2.15, including prepayment of postage—or about the price of one single book in ordinary book form. "The Portent," for instance, costs as a Bound Book, 175, and is published in No 12 of The Library for only 10 cents! And "Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Seas" costs as a Bound Book $4.00, and is published in Nos. 14 and 15 of The Library for only 20 cents!

☞ Each of these books is complete and unabridged, and costs in the bookstores from $1.0 to $4.00. Order a few samples.

Price, $2.15 for 24 numbers. Sold by all news dealers. Address,

Jottings.

From six to half past seven o'lock to-morrow morning, if awake, and gazing at the sky, and there are no clouds to obscure the vision, the eclipse of the sun may be seen.

Collectors of internal revenue are continually complaining that cigar manufacturers fail to fully comply with the law requiring them to burn into each box with a branding iron the number of cigars contained and the name of the manufacturer. The penalty of such failure is a fine of not less than $100 nor more than $1000, and imprisonment for not less than six months nor more than two years.

Government has given to the city the sewer built at considerable cost from the Custom House through State street to the river, during the Frank Peirce administration, on condition that it be kept in good repair.

Messrs. Wallace R. and Fred. G. Moses of this city are prospecting in Florida, and at last accounts were at Sand Point, their next point of exploration being Lake Worth. They have been up the St. John's river as far as Palatka, and returning went to New Smyrna from Jacksonville in a schooner, and thence up the Halifax river to Dayton, where mosquitoes were plenty. From Dayton to Sand Point they went in their own boat via Hillsboro' river and Mosquito Lagoon. Government lands in the vicinity of Sand Point are scarce, and owners hold at high figures. A railroad is being built from Lake Harmony to Sand Point, and a good hotel is needed at the latter place. Steamer Pioneer will commence running on the Indian river in October. They report the Summer weather as very endurable, there being but few mosquitoes at Sand Point. On the St. Johns, the temperature has averaged 95 degrees; at Sand Point, 85 to 90—with a nice South-east breeze all day. The nights are cool.

During the absence of Naval Constructor Wilson, Foreman of carpenters William Fernald will conduct the business of the office.

A correspondent of Foster's Democrat states that Detective Kent recently gave information to the police that two well known bank burglars were in town. The parties were shadowed, and very soon left this vicinity. Every precaution known and every machine of practical utility devised has been adopted by the banks, and it is a matter beyond human possibility to break into any of them without the whole city being alarmed.

Charles Main, Esq., is one of the executive committee of the new Bank of California Syndicate.

The Boston Journal makes a statement of the Eastern Railroad Company's financial condition. The statement claims the existence of a floating debt of $2,200,000 and an aggregate debt of $15,000,000. It further claims an increase of 100 per cent. in the capital and debt in three years, while for the same time there has been an increase of only 24 per cent. in the annual gross earnings.

Sunday trains on the Eastern Railroad are discontinued.

Attorney-General Clark has arranged to try four murder cases during the next two months. Mrs. Wilson, for poisoning Mrs. James A. Kendrick at Lebanon, will be tried Oct. 19th at Haverhill. It is understood that Chief Justice Cushing, of the Superior Court, and Associate Justice Smith will sit. The trial of David L. Magoon, the Raymond wife poisoner, commences in this city, Nov. 1, before Chief Justice Cushing and Associate Justice Foster, of the Circuit Court. The trial of Sawyer for shooting Mrs. Emerson at Piermont will commence at Plymouth, Nov. 15, before Justices Ladd and Rand. There will be an adjourned term of the Circuit Court at Nashua, Nov. 29, for another trial of Edwin W. Major, the Wilton wife poisoner, before Chief Justice Cushing and Judge Rand.

The sextons of Portsmouth are: John S. Wendell, Episcopal church; George W. Ayers, North Parish; Ebenezer Wyatt, South Parish; Josiah F. Adams, Universalist; Isaac Wetherell, Independent Christian; Ivah N. Rugg, Middle Street Baptist; William N. Batchelder, Methodist; William F. Ham, Free Baptist; David Lowd, Advent; Patrick Morrisey, Catholic.

The request comes from various quarters that the Ladies' Seamen's Aid Society may again become a working-power in our city. The rapid growth of the fishing fleet is one reason for this appeal. The Society (chartered by the State) has received in trust several legacies; pledge, as it were, of permanent usefulness; this renders it imperative to improve every suitable opportunity for active work. Its past history dates from 1832; indentified with this we find the names of those whose memories are still honored for their judicious, Christian liberality. The late Mr. Horace A. Haven left a legacy of $500. Miss Mary Rogers was for twelve years its President; many others could be named, as its staunch friends; some of these are still with us, and no doubt will be happy to resume their interest in this work, from past associations as well as the present need. At a recent meeting of the Society, the following officers were chosen: Managers, Mrs. Alfred W. Haven, Mrs. Wm. A. Alden, Mrs. Silas Philbrick; Secretary and Treasurer, Mrs. H. C. Knight; President, Miss E. H. Pearson. The rate of membership remains unchanged,—life membership $20, annual membership 50 cents and upwards.—Journal.

According to the new directory there are sixty-one wharf owners in Portsmouth.

The new city directory is published and may be purchased for $1.25 at Foster's bookstore. Greenough & Co. do their work faithfully, and their directory contains a great amount of information concerning the public, religious, charitable and private institutions of Portsmouth. We notice but one omission of importance, and that is the ward lines as laid out by our democratic friends. This may be intentional, however, as the directory is made to last beyond next June, and with the political change that is to come in 1876, the ward lines will hardly remain ten months longer as they are.

The second reunion picnic of the Rollins and Pickering families will be held under the old elm, at Newington, to-day. If not fair, then on the first fair day following. All the trains on the Portsmouth & Dover R. R. will stop at the picnic grounds.

A man answering the description of one of the alleged assailants of Dr. Norton at Amesbury, Mass., was seen on the day previous at a drug store, where he asked for money to pay his passage to this city.

Do the street laborers get no pay, MR. CHRONICLE, that their works are so often commended by the press, both republican and democratic? And did any body ever know a democratic sheet to say one decent and civil word of a republican official? R.

Eastern Railroad stock dropped to 22 on Monday.

The bodies in the Green street cemetery are being removed and reburied at Harmony Grove.

The new city government will be sworn in at the city rooms to-day at ten o'clock.

Gup. is disconsolate because no one invites him to go fishing—which is a singular neglect considering the "desirability" of his choice companionship. But his covetous nature shall be appeased. Somebody give him a stick of sugar candy, and when the circus comes to town and the other boys want to go, Gup. shall have permission to go out and play on the grass.

W. W. Henderson has bargains at his store on Daniel Street. His advertisement speaks for itself.

—A Chicago woman advertises in the Marriage Bazaar: "I want an honorable, honest gentleman for a husband. No lawyer, doctor, or politician may apply. I will give my future husband on my marriage day $10,000 cash, and twice that amount in real estate. I am 22 years of age, 5 feet, 2 inches high, weight 140 pounds."

Effects of Dissipation Counteracted.

Alcoholic excesses cannot be too earnestly deprecated, both for their destructive effects upon the constitution and their pernicious influence upon man's general welfare. At the same time there is little probability that he will cease to indulge in them until the end of time. Common humanity would therefore seem to dictate the suggestion of the most efficient means of counteracting their effects. There is not among medicated stimulants one so admirably calculated to counteract the physical consequences of hard drinking as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which relieve the nausea and headache produced by it, steady the trembling nerves, and yield that unfeverish repose which is the best recuperant of health shaken by excess. The bilious symptoms caused by dissipation are promptly relieved by the Bitters, which are also an excellent remedy for all disorders affecting the stomach, bowels, liver and urinary organs, to which it imparts unwonted regularity and tone.

Daily Chronicle.

—"Have you any five-cents cigars?" "Yes, sir," replied the clerk. "Have you any for ten cents?" "Yes, sir." Have you any for fifteen cents?" pursued the would-be purchaser. "Yes, sir, we have," said the clerk, handing out a box. "Would you take a fellow's last cent for a cigar?" rather indignantly queried the customer. "Yes, I would!" snappishly returned the clerk. "Well, there it is," solemnly said the stranger as he deposited one cent on the counter, and walked off with a fifteen-cent cigar.

—The country store-keeper said: "Here, my friend, those balls of butter I bought of you last week, all proved to be just three ounces short of a pound." And the farmer innocently answered: "Well, I don't see how that could be, for I used one of your pound bars of soap for a weight."

—The curfew tolls the knell of parting day, the lowing clam sails slowly o'er the sea, the hard crab seaward takes his backward way, and leaves the town to oysters and to me.

LOWELL, MASS, July 20th, 1874.

T. W. LANE:—I have used one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, am glad to state in my case they have proved all that you claim for them. I have been troubled with Bad Blood and all its consequent diseases, and have tried several kinds of Bitters and Pills without receiving much benefit, until I tried the CONDITION PILLS, and they have nearly cured where all else failed. Please send me another package as soon as convenient.

Yours, very truly,
J. D. WHITAKER.

Testimony of a Clergyman---Liver and Kidney Troubles.

EAST TILTON, N. H., April 14, 1875.

MR. LANE.—Dear Sir:—DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS are not only the best, but the very best I ever used. My wife has been troubled with Kidney Complaint many years; one-half of a package has cured her, so that she feels as well as ever. I have been troubled with Liver Compaint for many years; one-half of a package has done me more good than all the Pills I ever took. One of my neighbors took them, who has been troubled with Liver Complaint for many years: three Pills have helped him. Your Pills, where used, commend their virtues. Please send to my address one package.

REV. JOHN DAVIS.

Liver Compaint and Rheumatism so that he Could not Sleep Nights.

I was born and always lived in Pittsfield, N. H.; am now 50 years old; been troubled with Liver Complaint for 30 years, and Rheumatism for 20 years, sometimes so I could not sleep nights. I have taken one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, and they have done me more good and relieved more suffering than all the medicine I have taken during my life. S. S. RING.

Pittsfield, N. H., Dec. 17, 1874.

Fever and Ague.

NEW BOSTON, N. H., Feb. 1, 1875.

T. W. LANE.—Sir:—Last month I sent to you for a package of DR. QUAIN'S PILLS. I had tried five so-called ague cures, and I received more benefit from five of your pills than from all the "Cures" "Cholagogues," "Quinines," &c., that I have taken in two years. I cannot recommend it too highly for diseases resulting from long standing Fever and Ague.

Yours, most respectfully,
MRS. C. GARLAND.

Scaly Humor Cured by One Package---Liver Complaint Helped.

NORTH SALEM, N. H., Jan. 5, 1875.

MR. LANE.—Dear Sir:—Your Pills are all they are recommended. I was troubled with a Scaly Humor on my legs; I took one package and my legs are quite smooth. My wife was troubled with Liver Complaint; she took one package and they helped her greatly.

Yours, with respect,
JOHN H. BLAKE.

From a Leading Citizen of Rindge.

WEST RINDGE, Cheshire Co., N. H.,
November 17, 1874.

THOS. W. LANE:—After taking three packages of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, I am prepared to say they are the very best, for I have tried a great many kinds, and faithfully too, believing they would help me, to no effect.—These I do believe are the very best ever made; just the kind a man needs. May they be spread all over the wide world, and Dr. Quain's name a household word.

Yours truly,
ASA STICKNEY.

Felt Better, Stronger and Gained Flesh in One Week,

AFTER TAKING DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS.

ROLLINSFORD, N. H.

THOS. W. LANE:—I commenced to take DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, and in one week I was heavier, felt better, and was stronger than before, and any one troubled with BAD BLOOD can find sure remedy in these Pills.

Nov. 3, 1874. L. M. YEATON.

CHESTER, N. H., Feb. 24, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have been out of health for some time, and I took a very bad cold and it left my lungs in a very weak state. I received Dr. Quain's Condition Pills and took them according to the directions, and my lungs are some better. I can recommend them to any one who is troubled with weak lungs, for they have done me good, and I think another package will cure me. Dr. Quain's Pills ought to be known throughout the world. Please send me another package as soon as convenient.

Yours, &c., CYRUS LANE.

HILLSBOLOBRIDGE, Feb. 25, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—Dr. Quain's Condition Pills are the best I ever used for lameness and pain. The first dose I took removed the pain and lameness that I have been troubled with for several years. Others who have used quite a number of the pills besides myself. Please send another package by return of mail. MRS. DANIEL KIMBALL.

GILMANTON I. W., N. H., Feb. 25, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have been taking Dr. Quain's Condition Pills, and can recommend them as far ahead of common pills for constipation of the bowels; they do not have the debilitating effects of common purgatives I have taken.

MRS. J. B. GOODWIN.

NORTHWOOD CENTRE, March 1, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I saw Dr. Quain's Condition Pills highly recommended, and sent for a package, and I feel that they have done more for me than all the medicine I have taken for years, and can freely recommend them to others, as a good and sure medicine. Please send me another package as soon as possible. MARTHA NORCROSS.

BRISTOL, N. H., Feb. 27, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have made a fair trial of those Condition Pills, and liked them very much. I think they are all they are recommended. They are a good Liver invigorator.

N. F. DANFORTH.

SALEM DEPOT, N. H., March 8, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE:—I think these pills (Dr. Quain's Condition Pills) are all they claim to be; my wife and I are both victims of Liver and Kidney Complaint, and general debility. We have taken about half the contents of one box, and find that a marked improvement in our health. I want four packages to give away in the north part of Vermont, to friends up there. I enclose $2.00, and if you can, send me four packages. ROYAL SCOTT.

SOUTH PLATTSBURGH, N. Y., March 11, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE:—I have given Dr. Quain's Condition Pills a trial, and find I can honestly recommend them, they having materially improved the soreness and lameness with which I have been afflicted since getting upon my feet after the Paralysis of left side that I suffered last October. I desire you to send me another package as soon as convenient, as I am anxious to continue their use. Though not now a resident of New England, I have lived in Central Vermont more than fifty years, and trust Dr. Quain's Pills will not long be see in that section. MOSES SHELDON.

THOS. W. LANE:—I have been troubled with Biliousness, Headache, and Dizziness, for a long time, and had the Dyspepsia so bad there were but few kinds of food my stomach would bear at all. I commenced taking your pills, have taken most of one package, and now enjoy eating as well as I ever did, am not troubled with dizziness unless by taking cold, and have been greatly benefited by the use of them. A. L. PAGE.

FRANCESTOWN, March 13, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE:—I have found Dr. Quain's Condition Pills to be all you claim for them in Kidney Complaint, poor blood, and weak nerves. May they be circulated over the land and found in every household where medicine is needed. I enclose 50 cts. for another package as soon as convenient.

JOHN T. FELCH.

Health Regulations.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH OF THE CITY OF PORTSMOUTH call the attention of the public to the following sections of Chapter 10 of the City Ordinances and invite all interested in the preservation of health in the city to aid them in the execution of their duty.

CHAPTER X.

Sec. 5. All waste water of houses, yards, cellars, sinks, pumps, &c. shall be conveyed by their owners or occupiers to the common sewers, or to such places as the health officers may direct.

Sec. 4. No person shall be allowed to throw any vegetable or dead animal substance or any other matter capable of producing infection, into any street, lane, alley or dock, or upon any wharf, but shall bury them or throw them into the river below low-water mark.

Sec. 5. The contents of vaults and privies shall not be permitted to rise within one foot of the surface of the earth. And all owners or occupiers of buildings having such buildings having such vaults or privies as may require it, shall cause them to be emptied within ten days from the promulgation of this ordinance, and in future on or before the first day of May in each year. And any such owner or occupier neglecting so to do, shall forfeit and pay for every such neglect a sum not less than three nor more than twenty dollars, and a like sum for every week's neglect after the time above specified.

Sec. 6. No vender of meat at the stalls shall be permitted to leave any stale meat, heads, feet or offal of any kind about their stalls or stores over night, or suffer them to be thrown into any street, lane or alley of the city. Nor shall any sellers of fish be permitted to throw any offals of fish into any street, lane or alley of the city, or upon any wharf but shall either bury them or throw them into the river beyond low-water mark.

Sec. 7. If any dead animal or decaying vegetable substance, or any other nuisance, shall be found in any part of the city, the owners or occupiers of the premises where such nuisances shall be found, shall cause the same to be removed within twenty-four hours after being notified so to do by one or more of the health officers.

Sec. 12. When any householder shall know that any person within his family is taken sick of the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the health officers.

Sec. 13. When any physician shall know that any person whom he is called to visit is infected with the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, such physician shall immediately give notice thereof to the health officers.

Sec. 14. If any such householder or physician shall refuse or neglect to give the notice required in the preceding sections, he shall for each refusal or neglect forfeit the sum of twenty dollars, to be recovered by either of the health officers in the name of the city.

Sec. 16. The health officers may give written notice to the owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure, to remove or destroy any nuisance or other thing deemed by them, on examination, to be injurious to the public health, within a certain time limited therein; and in case such owner or occupier —the said notice having been given to him, or left at his usual place of abode—shall neglect to comply therewith, the said health officers may, by direction of the mayor and accompanied by the city marshal forcibly enter such building, vessel or enclosure, and cause said nuisance or other thing aforesaid to be removed or destroyed.

Sec. 21. No person shall erect, keep or continue or permit to be erected, kept or continued, upon any land occupied by him, any pen for the keeping of swine, or privy, over either of the mill ponds in this city, or so placed that offensive substances therefrom shall be discharged or drained into either of said ponds, or into any creek, or cove or drain leading thereto. And no person shall construct, keep or continue any drain leading from any pen for the keeping of any swine, slaughter-house, privy vault, or other unwholesome or offensive place, into either of said ponds, or to any flat or marsh adjoining the same. And no person shall throw or suffer to be thrown from his land into either of said ponds, or upon any of said flats or marshes, any dead, decaying, unwholesome or offensive animal or vegetable substances.

LOCAL AGENTS WANTED.

An Agent Wanted for Each Town and County in the United States.

Parties desiring to act as agents must accompany their application by a letter of recommendation as to character and responsibility from and signed by the Editor of a newspaper published in the town or county for which the agent proposes to act. The agency is to sell the bonds of the Industrial Exhibition Company.

BONDS, $20 EACH.
HALF BONDS, $10 EACH.
QUARTER BONDS, $5 EACH.

The Industrial Exhibition Company will furnish agents with circulars, etc., etc.

Each newspaper published in the town where an agent is located will, as soon as the agency is established, be given an advertisement, advertising such agency and the Company, and fully explaining the plans, purposes and objects of the Company. Such advertisement will continue in such papers as long as an agency is successfully conducted.

The Industrial Exhibition Company is the first to adopt the plan so long in use by the European governments of issuing bonds when the principal is made secure and not risked, but where there is a chance for a large premium, an investment of $20 is sure to return to the investor $21—one dollar more than cost—and the holder of a $20 Bond may obtain a premium either of $50, $100, $200, $500, $1,000, $3,000, $5,000, $10,000, $25,000 or $100,000. The interest, which is ordinarily distributed to all the bond holders pro rata, is in this loan distributed by chance. The purchaser of a bond knows he will receive back his investment, with a small rate of interest, he has a chance in the above named premiums, which are simply the distribution of interest on the whole loan.

Each bond participates in four drawings each year, until it has drawn a premium, when it is surrendered, the premium paid, and the bond cancelled.

The Industrial Exhibition Company, under a special charter granted by the State of New York, is given authority to issue these bonds. The Legislature of the State, recognizing the great benefits which will arise from the success of this enterprise, have exempted all the real estate and property of the Company from taxation and assessments for five years, and has also conferred other great privileges.

Every American who understands the purposes of this Company will, of a necessity, feel a pride in aiding it to a successful termination.

Each individual who buys a bond becomes an owner and an interested party, and when the structure erected with his money can say, "I aided to erect in our country the most magnificent building the world has ever seen, a palace which, in truth, represents the industry, energy and mechanical genius of the American people."

The manufacturers and the inventors of America are peculiarly interested in the success of this enterprise, for the reason that it is to be their house, where all their inventions and manufactures can be exhibited and sold.

The building will contain 5,320,000 square feet of space.

Purchasers desiring Bonds before an agency is established where they reside, will communicate direct with this office, from where they can be supplied.

Parties desiring to act as agents or to purchase bonds will address

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

USE

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

John Paul's Baby.

Sprawling about on a blanket, looking some like an under-boiled crab, more like an over-done cherub—this, then, was my Son! Here was the heir of much of my fortune and all my greatness, wrapped up in a square of cotton-batting no larger than a pocket-handkerchief. There had been months of weary waiting and ardent expectations, most elaborate preparation had been made, and here was the mouse!

Looking at this shrimp of humanity, swaddling like a miniature mummy, little did I imagine the power which there lay latent; little did I dream that those tiny arms—scarce larger than a pipe-stem—would in time come to pull me hither and thither, I powerless the while as though swayed by the horses of Thrace; that they would hold me back from my amusement, fetter me when I wished to work, keep me in doors when it was my will to go out, drive me out when I wished to stay in.

Once mounted on my shoulders, I cannot dislodge him. He likes walking. Exercise of that kind does not seem to tire him at all. I think he could survive being carried round the room till the ceiling fell in—his talent for that sort of thing is wonderful. Nor does he ever tire of the great moral drama. When I crawl about the floor on all-fours, barking like a dog, and arching up my back like a cat, he applauds vehemently. So when I bring my nose against the door in an effort to play bo-peep for his amusement—so, too, when I dance round the room on my head to show him how he'd look upside down. On all these occasions he is not sparing at plaudits, and he never fails to express his wish that the play should go on. Already I've worn out several pairs of trousers, and am looking round for new properties, a false nose and wig, for instance.

The little sense of moral obligation that a baby has is a marvel to me. That he has any duties in life never occurs to him. In the present only he lives, with an idea evidently, that nothing is expected of him but to grow. Where his dinner comes from matters not to him so long as he gets it. He is reckless of results. Nor am I certain that he is not profane. When he mutters to himself in an unknown tongue on being forbidden something for which he has a longing, how do we know that he is not swearing? The harangues to which Jonathan Edwards occasionally treats us are excessively funny. He becomes animated and his gesticulation is rapid and expressive.

An Old World.

Plato sent down to posterity a tradition of his day that a great continent, which occupied the place now covered by the Atlantic Ocean suddenly sunk down out of sight. He says it was an island called Atlantis. On it were kingdoms and organized governments, wealth, arts and civilization, instantly lost to human sight.

It is now the opinion of leading geologists—those most advanced in science—that the American continent appeared when the Atlantic waters rushed into the enormous cavity or depression now covered by salt water. The Rocky Mountains were then the rough bottom of an ocean which rose with marine plants, shells and other products of an aquatic origin, that are found abundantly strewn there, and, in fact, all over North and South America. Remnants of Atlantis, the submerged continent, are believed by scientists to be recognized in the Adirondacks, the White Mountains of New Hampshire, and a few other outcroppings belonging to the outer boundaries of that deluged and forever lost country. There is no knowledge what astounding discoveries in coming ages may yet be made corroborative of Plato's narrative.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 29, 1875.

News and Notes.

Hon. Ellis H. Roberts has beaten Senator Conkling in a home fight, having secured the nomination of his own man for State Senator from the Utica district over Mr. Conkling's friend.

The Pennsylvania republicans have taken time by the forelock and are making an active campaign. The Philadelphia clubs opened with a brilliant torchlight procession and spirited meeting, followed by a fine display of fireworks. Those old-time republican leaders, Hon. Galusha A. Grow, Speaker of the National House of Representatives from 1861 to 1863, and Hon. E. Joy Morris, who represented one of the Congressional districts of Philadelphia before the war, and was Abraham Lincoln's Minister to Turkey, made speeches. Both of these gentlemen were prominently indentified with the earlier and glorious history of the republican party; both have stood aloof from it and both now return to its support from the same motive—a belief that its success in Pennsylvania this Fall is essential to check the democratic movement for an inflated, dishonest rag-money currency. The speeches made by them and that of Hon. Edward McPherson, who followed, were all emphatic declarations against the inflation doctrine.

The New York Times says that good judges estimate the number of votes by which Mr. Seward will lead his ticket in that city at from 5000 to 10,000, while the rest of the republican candidates will not fail to profit by their colleague's popularity.

There is going to be some fun in Cuba before Christmas. Spain has just embarked a large number of her soldiers for that island, and the patriot Cubans are working assiduously to make room for their graves. Death is so certain to those who leave the shores of Spain to fight for the throne in the West Indies that they make all the necessary preparations before setting out, the same as a murderer does before leaving his cell for the gallows.

Francis W. Putnam, democrat, has been elected Alderman of Newburyport by 43 majority.

Ex-Senator B. F. Wade of Ohio was invited to make an old-fashioned tariff speech at Youngstown, but declined on account of ill health. In his letter he said: "The only cause for present evils is the want of a high protective tariff. This would enable us to do our own work, and is the only remedy for the thousands now out of work and who can find no employment. No nation ever had a better currency than we have now, and no relief will come from any attempt to change it. What we want is to do our own work at home. Look at France, just out of the most disastrous and expensive war known to history, and the enormous indemnity she had to pay to Germany. What miracle in her behalf enabled her to pay it off so soon in gold? It was because France does all her work at home, and consequently owes nothing abroad. We should have a tariff on all foreign finery that would make our fools and would-be aristocracy open their eyes. If any man or woman desires to live in a style beyond the skill of our own workmen, let them pay for their vanity. But the republican party have become weak-kneed on this subject, and they do not pronounce the word protective above their breath. Oh, for the firmness, courage, and honesty of old Henry Clay."

In the Superior Court at Portland, John Miller, indicted for the murder of his son Charles, at Birch Island, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to State Prison for life.

A young girl named Laughlin, sixteen years of age, accompanied a man named Schell and his wife to gather wild plums, in Logan county, Ohio, and when the two latter returned they reported that Miss Laughlin had been lost in the brush. A search, in which Schell took part, was made for her, but it proved ineffectual. On the following day, however, a new search being instituted, the dead body of the girl was found in a secluded place. There were bruises on the head and neck, and upon a close examination it was discovered that seven stabs had been inflicted with some sharp instrument. Schell was thereupon arrested on suspicion of having murdered her. His wife was afterward also arrested, when she told a story to the effect that her husband had informed her before they left their home that he intended to outrage and kill the girl, their visit to the woods having been planned expressly for that purpose; and that he subsequently described to her the details of the murder. On Friday night a mob took the man from the jail in Bellefontaine, and gave him ten minutes in which to confess his crime. Instead of doing this, he stoutly protested his innocence, and declared that it was his wife who had committed the murder, she having been instigated to the crime by jealousy. The mob, without making any investigation into the truth or falsity of these conflicting stories, immediately hanged the wretch.

The first message to London over the new cable was sent by William F. Gill & Company to Chatto & Winders, Wilkie Collins' English publishers.

It turns out, after all, that we were wrong in saying that the democrats of Massachusetts carried their recent State convention carry it at all. Look at the candidates nominated! Mr. Gaston is an old whig, and retains the habits of the "old connection." Gen. Bartlett is a republican who refused the use of his name in the convention. Mr. Monroe is a "liberal" republican "Rice man." Mr. Howland is reported as a "liberal republican." It is not long since Mr. Verry called himself a republican, and not more than two years since he was presented in the republican caucuses as a candidate for State Senator. The only genuine old democrat on their ticket is Mr. Fitzgerald. We spoke too hastily. The Massachusetts democrats did not carry their State convention. Their chief successes in the convention are seen in the nomination of Mr. Fitzgerald, and in the two resolutions that libel the republican party.—Worcester Spy.

Frank Robbins has just harvested 515 bushels first quality of Early Rose potatoes from two acres of land on his Ferrin farm in the south part of Warner. In some parts of his potato fields ten hills filled a bushel.

American ship Ellen Southard, Captain Woodsworth, last from St. Johns, N. B., for Liverpool, was lost on the Lancashire coast, between Formley and Crosby, not more than twenty miles from Liverpool. Nine of the crew were drowned. The gale was very damaging both at sea and on land. A special from Richmond, Me., gives the following; Capt. Orrin H. Woodworth, and his wife, and all the crew except four men, were lost with the Emily Southard. The ship was laden with deals, from St. John for Liverpool, and was insured for $20,000. Her value with cargo was $60,000. She was owned by T. J. Southard. Her crew consisted of nineteen persons. Capt. Woodworth is the ninth sea captain from Bowdoinham lost within a year.

The dry-goods store of L. P. Demming & Cooke, New Haven, was entered by burglars through an eight-inch brick wall from an adjoining building, and $10,000 worth of plain and colored silks and laces were carried off.

General S. G. Griffin, Majors A. B. Thompson, T. W. Challis and G. B. Crowley, and Captains Newhall, Griffin, Churchhill, Ranlett, Pillsbury, and Lieutenant S. S. Piper are members of the General Committee of the grand Veterans' Reunion of New Hampshire, which takes place in Manchester, 12, 13 and 14. Governor Cheney and other citizens met in Manchester House Monday evening, for the purpose of completing arrangements, and the programme was read, amended and adopted. Invitations will be extended to the President of the United States and other distinguished gentlemen and officers who commanded New Hampshire men during the war; it is estimated that 2500 men will be present. Arrangements have been made with the railroads to convey the soldiers at reduced rates. The Governor and Staff will be present and review the troops. Manchester people are to furnish rations for the gathering. A permanent organization will be effected, and a reunion will probably be held annually, hereafter.

The public will scarcely share the regret avowed by the President at the departure of Secretary Delano from the Department of the Interior. Having done a good thing in accepting his resignation, the President has now an opportunity to do another good thing in appointing a better man in his place.

The town of Weathersfield, Vt., is greatly excited over a murder and attempted suicide. Ebenezer Dunsmore, on Saturday last invited his wife to accompany him to Forepaugh's Circus at Proctorsville, which she declined to do. He then invited his daughter, some eight years of age, to accompany him, and the mother stoutly objected, and he went alone. He returned at seven o'clock in the evening, and on entering his home he found his wife and three children under the influence of strychnia, administered by the wife and mother. He immediately administered lobelia and spirits, which had the desired effect, except in the case of the youngest child, where the deadly poison had done its work. The eldest daughter says when the mother put them all to bed she desired them to take something that would do them all good. At last accounts it was thought the mother and remaining children would recover. The unnatural action of the mother is hardly accountable on the plea of insanity.

The indications are that there will be this year the heaviest cotton crop made within the last fifteen years; the corn crop will be one of the largest, if not the largest, ever produced; there will be a large surplus of wheat for exportation; the hay crop, taking into consideration the after-growth of grass has been a good one; the value of the butter and cheese received at the port of New York for 1874, was over $250,000,000, and there is no reason to apprehend a falling of in 1875.

Chaplain James J. Kane, U. S. N., is now lying ill in London. An old wound, which was received while he was Acting Ensign during the war, reopened and ruptured an artery, in consequence of which he very nearly bled to death. He was attended by half a dozen surgeons, who pronounced his case hopeless. As a last resort, Dr. G. N. Callenper, F. R. C. S., was called in, and by skillful treatment, the life of the patient was prolonged. The Chaplain is still in a critical condition.

Three Reasons

Why the democratic party should not be entrusted with the government of the country:

I. Because in Buchanan's administration, after emptying the Treasury, and bankrupting the credit of the country, two-thirds of the party rebelled against the Government controlled by their own party—and the other third, protracted the war and augmented the expenses, by sympathizing with and encouraging the rebels.

II. Because they resisted, at the polls all attempts to so amend the Constitution as to abolish slavery and to protect human rights and prevent future rebellions by establishing "exact and equal justice to all," and treated as nullities every proposition to make our government one founded upon the consent of the governed.

III. Because by attempting to get into power by repudiating the public debt, they have added millions to the burthens of the people whom they betrayed when in power and whom they attempt to deceive by the specious cry of irredeemable paper money to get back into power, which they always abuse.

Over-Production Causes Depression.

Hon. Galusha A. Grow's able speech before the Philadelphia republicans contained the following explanation of hard times:

Depression in business came from overproduction, stimulated first by the war and then by inflation of the currency. There was too much of everything. When confidence is unbounded a surplus of products can be carried for awhile, but when confidence is once shaken credits are restricted, and then come stringency in the market and depression in business. The railroads feel the effects first when production is diminished, because there are less products to transport from the points of production to the marts of trade. There are less men to handle the goods in all their transit, and there are fewer men employed to convey them to the consumer. When confidence is shaken men begin economizing, and when that begins, a general panic, as it is called, spreads over the land. There are 40,000,000 of people in the United States, half males, men and boys, and half females, women and girls. Supposing that each woman and girl has one dress less this year than last year, calling the average for each dress ten yards, there are 200,000,000 yards less wanted this year than last. If each man and boy has one coat less this year than he had last year, as there are 20,000,000 of men and boys, if we call the cost of each coat on an average $10 each, then there are $200,000,000 less in the demand for manufactured products of that description; so in every other class of commodities used by a people, the demand is diminished immensely when everybody begins to economize. The railroads, not being supplied with the traffic they had before on account of this kind of reduction, have less earnings, and consequently less profit in their business. And this is true of every kind of business. The manufacturer of woolen goods making less cloth buys less wool, and the producer of wool is thus deprived of a market for his product. The manufacturer of iron makes less, so the producer of coal must curtail his production, and so on through all the avenues and channels of labor and business. The railroads fail to pay the interest upon their bonds, where they are built in sparsely settled parts of the country, because those districts feel the stringency most. The demand for manufacturing products falling off leaves a surplus of those products on the hands of the producer. Then follow failures of business houses unable to carry their large stocks. This is the cause of stagnation in the production in almost every industry. Confidence and credit are shaken by the failures, until moneyed men refuse to loan except on the most undoubted security, and no money seeks an investment in any channel of productive industry, for everything there is oversto cked, and it seeks no new enterprise because of the uncertainty of our currency till it is brought to a specie basis. Hence the large amount of idle capital.

The Eastern Railroad.

[Traveller.]

As yet, Messrs. Lawrence, Williams and Cummings, composing the Committee of Directors of the Eastern Railroad Company, which was appointed to make a report of the condition of the affairs of the Company, have not matured their investigation sufficiently to put the results upon paper. It is authoritatively announced, however, that the statements made in another journal are very much exaggerated, and have little basis upon which to build a report which might injure the credit of the road. It has been said that the bonds were on the same footing as the floating debt, and the whole amount is placed at $15,000,000, now being sold at about 75 per cent. This amount is an exaggeration to the extent of $4,000,000, the debt not exceeding $11,000,000. And of the measures adopted to effect the increase on paper was the reckoning of $514,000 of Great Falls and Conway bonds as the property of the Eastern road when they really compose a guarantee, and if the guarantee is enforced, the Great Falls and Conway road will become the property of the Eastern Company. The Eastern Company has also an amount of stock in the Great Falls and Conway Railroad equal to $550,000, and $3,000,000 worth of outside property besides this stock and the road itself. The statement that the Eastern Railroad Company owns stock or bonds in the European and North American Railroad Company is pronounced untrue by the officers of the former Company, and the same officials also declare that if the affairs of the Company were wound up to-day the total indebtedness would not, as before stated exceed $11,000,000. The Directors still continue to pronounce the excitement a scare, based upon no substantial grounds, and are assured that the report of the Investigating Committee, when published, will instil confidence into the public mind. * * * * Enough is known of the general character of the forthcoming report to warrant the statement that the figures given in the preceding paragraph are substantially correct; that the Committee will recommend the sale of such land as the Company does not actually need at East Boston and Charlestown; that the office of General Manager be abolished; that the salary of the Presi-ductions be made in the expenses so as to effect an annual saving of $100,000.

—There were a dozen or more of them seated in front of the colored St. Charles, and they were talking about tornadoes.

"De worstest tornady I ever did see," remarked an old negro, "war sixteen years ago, in Alabama."

"Did she blow much?" inquired another.

"Blow much! shoo! niggers! but dat was no deck passenger, dat tornady! Why, sah, it jist lifts me right up to remember it!"

"Eberyting went kitin', eh!"

"Kitin'! Bress you! you poor, ignorant nigger, but I seed a mule lifted up like a fedder, an' how fur d'yo 'spose it blode him? Just gin a guess."

"One mile?"

"Free miles?"

"Into a tree."

Each one in the crowd made a guess, and when all were through the hoary-headed old man repeated:

"Niggers, you is all wrong. Dat fornady cum for dat mule, and howled around, an' got under him, and lifted him up, an' he was blode jist exactly four inches by de watch, sure's you live!"

There was a painful pause, and then the crowd rapidly thinned out, while the old man remarked:

"Four inches by de watch, and I'll stick to dat statement if I die for it."—Vicksburg Herald.

The Lakeside Library

is published semi-monthly, and each issue contains a COMPLETE NOVEL, by one of the great authors of the world, as Charles Reade, Dickens, Scott, Anthony Trollope, Jules Verne, etc., etc. The completion of long and important novels in a single issue, is the most unique and valuable feature yet introduced into the periodical literature of the day, and is peculiar to The Lakeside Library.

Each issue of The Library contains a Complete Novel, that would cost in the book stores, on the average, $1.50 each; yet the price of the same in The Library is only 10 cents if you buy a single copy from your newsdealer, or only 9 cents if you subscribe for a year. The whole series of 24 numbers will contain Twenty-two Complete Novels, worth about $40.00, but costs only $2.15 in The Library!

Occasionally we shall issue double numbers, to contain unusually long and important works, as "The Law and The Lady," by Wilkie Collins, and "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," by Jules Verne. When this is necessary, both numbers of the story will be issued together, so that the complete work will be in the reader's hands at once. In such cases three numbers will be issued in one month. ☞ Hence all subscriptions are received for 24 numbers.

Our next issue, Nos. 14 and 15, will be a splendid Double number complete and unabridged with Eight characteristic illustrations, containing the famous

Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Seas,"
By JULES VERNE.

This wonderful book is descriptive of a voyage of 20,000 leagues under the surface of the sea! No one acquainted with Verne's peculiar and dramatic style need be told that this, his greatest book, is most intensely interesting. It lays bare the mysteries of the mighty deep—its sunken wrecks; submarine forests; the grotesque, hideous and awful creatures who dwell therein; the beautiful coral caves; its treasures of gold, silver and jewels lost in Spanish ships of olden days. Yet so quaintly, and with with such an air of candor is the story told, that you can hardly believe you are not reading a transcript from a ship's log-book. Sent by mail by the publishers, post-paid, for 25 cents.

☞ There is only one other edition published, which costs $4.00.

Subscribe now, and get all the back numbers, that your set may be complete. The entire set of 24 numbers gives you a really choice library of Standard and Famous Novels, worth in book form about $40.00, and at a cost of only $2.15, including prepayment of postage—or about the price of one single book in ordinary book form. "The Claimant," for instance, costs as a Bound Book, 1.75, and is published in No. 12 of The Library for only 10 cents! Local Matters.

Organization of the City Government.

The new city government for the year 1875 was quietly organized at the Court House on Tuesday morning in the presence of about a score of intelligent spectators. The usual formalities of organizing were observed, commencing with the calling of the Council to order and choosing Mr. Geo. T. Vaughan as temporary chairman.

The Mayor and Aldermen came in upon being notified that the Council were ready to meet them in Convention.

After being sworn, the Mayor administered the oath of office to the Aldermen and Councilmen. The Convention then rose, the Aldermen retiring, while the Council remained and effected an organization by re-electing Charles W. Norton as President for the ensuing year and Charles H. Garret as clerk.

The Board of Aldermen were then notified that a permanent organization of the Council had been effected. Subsequently, in Convention of both Boards, Mercer Goodrich was elected City Clerk having 14 votes out of the 24. Rev. James De Normandie then offered prayer, following which was the reading of the message by His Honor, Mayor Goodrich. The document is worthy of a careful perusal. It is concise and yet sufficiently extended to give much information in regard to the general status of our city affairs. We give it in full:

Gentlemen of the City Councils: I congratulate you that you enter upon your official duties in time of peace, and when our city is generally in a prosperous condition. We feel the evils of the unusual depression of business, the stagnation of trade, the heavy taxation, and the want of employment for an industrious laboring population. But thus far Portsmouth seems to have suffered from these causes as little as any other place in the country, and we have reason to hope that we may be able to await the return of "better times" without serious calamity or suffering.

The debt of the city is now $174,195.15, $5000 having been paid last year; and $5000 more will fall due on the first day of October. For the payment of this instalment, provision has been made. Like sums of $5000 will become due annually until 1882. The credit of the city is good, and the debt, which is small compared with the amount of our taxable property, will probably be extinguished within a reasonable time.

The city is also liable to the amount of $300,000 upon bonds loaned to aid in the construction of the Portsmouth & Dover railroad. These bonds are secured by the guaranty of the Eastern Railroad in New Hampshire, with the additional guaranty of the Eastern railroad company, as well as by the value of the Portsmouth & Dover railroad. The interest is promptly paid semi-annually by the Eastern railroad.

The whole tax assessed upon the city for the year 1874 was $145,289.83; for the year 1875, $131,270.28. The rate of taxation in 1874 was $2.31 on the hundred dollars; in 1875 it is $2.02 on the hundred dollars—a reduction of nearly one-eighth. I earnestly desire you to consider carefully whether further reductions of the expenses of the city may not usefully be made.

The cost of supporting our paupers for the year ending December 31, 1874, was $5430.-88, deducting the receipts from the produce of the city farm, etc. The average number of paupers $2.61. The recent act of the legislature puts upon the County the care of supporting all paupers who have not gained a settlement in any town since the year 1850. This relieves our alms-house of a large number, including many who are aged and insane, and must materially reduce the direct expenses of the city in the support of the poor. I think the number left at the alms-house will not exceed twenty, but it is likely again to increase by the lapse of time. A considerable number of poor families resident in the city who are properly chargeable upon the county, have been able to maintain themselves with moderate assistance from the city. Good policy requires that this mode of assistance should be continued. If it be withheld, whole families must go to the county farm and be supported there at such cost that the city's share will be more than the whole amount of help now allowed. And the importance of encouraging such families to support themselves as far as possible, and of keeping their children out of the county alms-house, cannot be estimated in money. The county commissioners allowed but little assistance to this class of poor persons, and require that they shall go to the county farm; but I trust that upon further consideration they will perceive that the system heretofore practised is more humane and economical.

The city farm includes about one hundred and seventy acres of good land, and it is much larger than is necessary for the accommodation of the diminished number of paupers left in the alms-house. Part of it bordering upon the compact part of the city is suitable for building lots, and is too valuable to be devoted profitably to farming purposes. The city councils have caused the fields on Woodbury and Creek streets to be laid out in lots with convenient streets intersecting them. To encourage the sale of the lots, and at the same time to aid such of our industrious citizens as are striving to establish homesteads, I recommend that these lots be offered for sale on long credit to persons who will actually occupy and build upon them. Such a course will tend to increase our population, will accommodate many of our enterprising young men, and will ultimately bring a considerable amount of money to the treasury of the city.

The streets and roads of the city are generally in good condition. Considerable improvements have been made during the year, and I think they may be kept in order the ensuing year at a moderate cost. I have thought it expedient during the last year to expend a large part of the appropriation upon the streets most used within the compact part of the city, as many of them were much worn and out of order.

The Fire Department is efficient and well equipped, and has been well managed by its present officers and men. The great quantity of water required by the steam fire engines has long required great attention to the question of supplies. During the last year the construction of a large reservoir upon Madison street has been commenced. The sum of seven thousand dollars was appropriated for this work, of which $3258.06 had been expended up to the first day of this month; and it is probable that the work can be completed at a cost a little exceeding the original appropriation. By means of pipes the water of this reservoir may be made available upon Union, Cabot and other streets in that vicinity. And it will afford great protection to a part of the town heretofore in great danger for want of water, in case of the occurrence of any considerable fire. I recommend continued attention to the subject of the supply of water for fires, by the location of suitable reservoirs, and the establishment of places along the whole water front of the city accessible for the engines. One thousand feet of new and serviceable hose has been bought the last year. I think it will be desirable to buy a like quantity the coming year. Much of the old hose is worn out and not to be relied upon, and the linen hose purchased at considerable cost a year ago is nearly worthless.

The condition of the mill-ponds at the north and south ends of the city has become the subject of much public discussion and anxiety. The increase of buildings upon their shores necessarily causes a great annual increase of the drainage of decayed and offensive matter into them, notwithstanding the ordinance of the city to the contrary. Every rising tide sweeps the substances upon the shores of the ponds, and the water is drawn off so gradually through the mills that almost all the accumulations upon the shores remain and putrify there. This is a source of great annoyance to the people of the city, and it causes great apprehension of danger to the public health. I am not prepared to decide what is the best remedy for this great evil, but I earnestly commend the subject to your attention.

During the past year seven lawsuits against the city have been settled and disposed of. Five remain, only one of which appears to be of any considerable importance. It is often difficult to decide whether it is better to resist disputed claims against the city of small amounts or to incur the hazard of making a bad and expensive example of paying or compromising them. It is our duty to be just, because we have no right to be generous with the money of the city.

Our schools are believed to be efficient and well managed. They demand a very large share of the public money, they are wisely regarded as a favorite subject of our bounty, and it is generally agreed that no reasonable effort for their improvement should be spared. But great care should be used to prevent waste, and to limit strictly the expenditures in this department. Here as elsewhere we cannot be lavish of the city's money without doing wrong to the tax-payers and causing injury to the schools. An urgent demand existed during the last year for increased school-house accommodations, several schools being full and overflowing. Temporary relief has been found by fitting up the Ward room on State street as a school-house. As an evidence of an increasing population, the call for more school houses may perhaps be received as an indication of increasing prosperity; however this may be, you will take care that the just wants of the rising generation in this respect are fully supplied.

I earnestly ask your co-operation in cutting off all unnecessary expenditures and in administering the affairs of the city with the greatest possible economy. But at this time of great depression in business, when many industrious men are in danger of suffering for want of employment during the inclement season that is approaching, it deserves your consideration whether such expenditure as must soon be incurred, may not be anticipated. I certainly would not advocate the beginning of any useless undertaking for the sake of giving work to those who lack employment; but I think the city may reasonably and without loss anticipate the execution of necessary work with a view to the incidental advantage which the expenditures may afford. But we must not forget that economy in the use of the public money is always a duty, and more so than ever at times like the present, when burdens of taxation are seriously felt.

Reflecting with pleasure upon the harmonious action of the city councils and government during the past year, I trust, gentlemen that the same good feeling will continue during the year upon which we have entered.

Jottings.

Pay Inspector W. W. Williams, U. S. N., who with his family has lately been residing at Cambridge, Mass., has been ordered to report as Purchasing Paymaster at Washington, D. C.

Meeting of the Board of Trade this evening.

Alfred Grant, of Dover, while walking on the Portsmouth & Dover Railroad track, was assaulted by three ruffians as he was crossing the bridge about nine o'clock Monday evening. One of his assailants brandished a knife, exclaiming, "If you speak I'll cut your throat." They then threw him down, removed every article of his clothing and made off with the same and about $40, which he had in his wallet. His boots and hat were found near the railroad track next morning, but there is no trace of the robbers as yet.

Richards Avenue is impassable for carriages below the residences, as the culverts are being rebuilt preparatory to receiving the new grade.

The Direct Cable has again parted, it is supposed about 200 miles from land.

We saw in front of our office on Tuesday, five Cotswold lambs from the celebrated farm of the late Robert Dane of Hamilton, Mass. The immense stock of the above farm was sold at auction on Tuesday and Mr. Moody, being one of the largest sheep-raisers in this section, was naturally attracted by the announcement that a good variety of imported sheep stock would be offered, and drove to Hamilton, purchased the five imported ewes referred to, and returned to his home the same day! Mr. M. has a flock of one hundred and fifty sheep, all of selected stock.

The crew of schooner Brutus, wrecked off Boone island on the night of the 17th, were picked up by ship Defiance, of Kennebunk, and carried to New York.

And now Gup. has quit moaning over the lost fish chowder, and is busily engaged in analyzing "Pulmocine," which cures more than has been claimed for it, having eliminated dyspepsia from a democratic editor, and done him such a world of good that he "would not be without it." So do the ever-changing vicissitudes of life bring peace and quietude to a distracted nation.

Effects of Dissipation Counteracted.

Alcoholic excesses cannot be too earnestly deprecated, both for their destructive effects upon the constitution and their pernicious influence upon man's general welfare. At the same time there is little probability that he will cease to indulge in them until the end of time. Common humanity would therefore seem to dictate the suggestion of the most efficient means of counteracting their effects. There is not among medicated stimulants one so admirably calculated to counteract the physical consequences of hard drinking as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which relieve the nausea and headache produced by it, steady the trembling nerves, and yield that unfeverish repose which is the best recuperant of health shaken by excess. The bilious symptoms caused by dissipation are promptly relieved by the Bitters, which are also an excellent remedy for all disorders affecting the stomach, bowels, liver and urinary organs, to which it imparts unwonted regularity and tone.

—Some people are too trusting for this world. At a recent trial the prisoner entered a plea of "not guilty," when one of the jurymen put on his hat and started for the door. The Judge called him back and informed him that he couldn't leave until the case was tried. "Tried?" queried the juror, "why he acknowledged that he is not guilty."

—"Where do people go who deceive their fellow men?" asked a Sunday school teacher of a pupil. "Europe," was the prompt reply.

CONDITION PILLS.

NEW TESTIMONIALS.

—— FOR ——

Weak Lungs, Constipation, Lameness, Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Paralysis, Poor Blood and Kidney Troubles.

LOWELL, MASS, July 20th, 1874.

T. W. LANE:—I have used one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, am glad to state in my case they have proved all that you claim for them. I have been troubled with Bad Blood and all its consequent diseases, and have tried several kinds of Bitters and Pills without receiving much benefit, until I tried the CONDITION PILLS, and they have nearly cured where all else failed. Please send me another package as soon as convenient.

Yours, very truly,
J. D. WHITAKER.

Testimony of a Clergyman---Liver and Kidney Troubles.

EAST TILTON, N. H., April 14, 1875.

MR. LANE.—Dear Sir:—DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS are not only the best, but the very best I ever used. My wife has been troubled with Kidney Complant many years; one-half of a package has cured her, so that she feels as well as ever. I have been troubled with Liver Compaint for many years; one-half of a package has done me more good than all the Pills I ever took. One of my neighbors took them, who has been troubled with Liver Complaint for many years: three Pills have helped him. Your Pills, where used, commend their virtues. Please send to my address one package.

REV. JOHN DAVIS.

Liver Compaint and Rheumatism so that he Could not Sleep Nights.

I was born and always lived in Pittsfield, N. H.; am now 56 years old; been troubled with Liver Complaint for 30 years, and Rheumatism for 20 years, sometimes so I could not sleep nights. I have taken one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, and they have done me more good and relieved more suffering than all the medicine I have taken during my life. S. S. RING.

Pittsfield, N. H., Dec. 17, 1874.

Fever and Ague.

NEW BOSTON, N. H., Feb. 1, 1875.

T. W. LANE,—Sir:—Last month I sent to you for a package of DR. QUAIN'S PILLS. I had tried five so-called ague cures, and I received more benefit from five of your pills than from all the "Cures" "Cholagogues," "Quinine," &c., that I have taken in two years. I cannot recommend it too highly for diseases resulting from long standing Fever and Ague.

Yours, most respectfully,
MRS. C. GARLAND.

Scaly Humor Cured by One Package---Liver Complaint Helped.

NORTH SALEM, N. H., Jan. 5, 1875.

MR. LANE.—Dear Sir:—Your Pills are all they are recommended. I was troubled with a Scaly Humor on my legs; I took one package and my legs are quite smooth. My wife was troubled with Liver Complaint; she took one package and they helped her greatly.

Yours, with respect,
JOHN H. BLAKE.

From a Leading Citizen of Rindge.

WEST RINDGE, Cheshire Co., N. H., November 17, 1874.

THOS. W. LANE:—After taking three packages of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, I am prepared to say they are the very best, for I have tried a great many kinds, and faithfully too, believing they would help me, to no effect.—These I do believe are the very best ever made; just the kind a man needs. May they be spread all over the wide world, and Dr. Quain's name a household word.

Yours truly,
ASA STICKNEY.

Felt Better, Stronger and Gained Flesh in One Week,

AFTER TAKING DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS.

ROLLINSFORD, N. H.

THOS. W. LANE:—I commenced to take DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, and in one week I was heavier, felt better, and was stronger than before, and any one troubled with BAD BLOOD can find sure remedy in these Pills.

Nov. 3, 1874. L. M. YEATON.

CHESTER, N. H., Feb. 24, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have been out of health for some time, and I took a very bad cold and it left my lungs in a very weak state. I received Dr. Quain's Condition Pills and took them according to the directions, and my lungs are some better. I can recommend them to any one who is troubled with weak lungs, for they have done me good, and I think another package will cure me. Dr. Quain's Pills ought to be known throughout the world. Please send me another package as soon as convenient.

Yours, &c., CYRUS LANE.

HILLSBOROBRIDGE, Feb. 25, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—Dr. Quain's Condition Pills are the best I ever used for lameness and pain. The first dose I took removed the pain and lameness that I have been troubled with for several years. Others have used quite a number of the pills besides myself. Please send another package by return of mail. MRS. DANIEL KIMBALL.

GILMANTON I. W., N. H., Feb. 25, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have been taking Dr. Quain's Condition Pills, and can recommend them as far ahead of common pills for constipation of the bowels; they do not have the debilitating effect of common purgatives I have taken.

MRS. J. B. GOODWIN.

NORTHWOOD CENTRE, March 1, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I saw Dr. Quain's Condition Pills highly recommended, and sent for a package, and I feel that they have done more for me than all the medicine I have taken for years, and can freely recommend them to others, as a good and sure medicine. Please send me another package as soon as possible. MARTHA SORCROSS.

BRISTOL, N. H., Feb. 27, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have made a fair trial of those Condition Pills, and liked them very much. I think they are all they are recommended. They are a good Liver invigorator.

N. F. DANFORTH.

SALEM DEPOT, N. H., March 8, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE:—I think those pills (Dr. Quain's Condition Pills) are all they claim to be; my wife and I are both victims of Liver and Kidney Complaint, and general debility. We have taken about half that package you sent me, and find a marked improvement in our health. I want four packages to give away in the north part of Vermont, to friends up there. I enclose $3.00, and if you can, send me four packages. ROYAL SCOTT.

SOUTH PLATTSBURGH, N. Y., March 11, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE:—I have given Dr. Quain's Condition Pills a trial, and find I can honestly recommend them, they having materially improved the soreness and lameness with which I have been afflicted since getting upon my feet after the Paralysis of left side that I suffered last October. I desire you to send me another package as soon as convenient, as I am anxious to continue their use. Though not now a resident of New England, I have lived in Central Vermont more than fifty years, and trust Dr. Quain's Pills will not long be seen in that section. MOSES SHELDON.

THOS. W. LANE:—I have been troubled with Biliousness, Headache, and Dizziness, for a long time, and had the Dyspepsia so bad there were but few kinds of food my stomach would bear at all. I commenced taking your pills, have taken most of one package, and now enjoy eating as well as I ever did, am not troubled with dizziness unless by taking cold, and have been greatly benefited by the use of them. A. L. PAGE.

FRANCESTOWN, March 13, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE:—I have found Dr. Quain's Condition Pills to be all you claim for them in Kidney Complaint, poor blood, and weak nerves. May they be circulated over the land and found in every household where medicine is needed. I enclose 50 cts. for another package as soon as convenient.

JOHN T. FELCH.

Better Health than for 10 Years.

CHESTER, N. H., Oct. 17, 1874.

MR. LANE:—I have taken one package of Condition Pills; find them in my case all they are recommended; have not enjoyed so good health for the last ten years as I have since I commenced taking the Condition Pills. Shall be happy to recommend them to others. WILLIAM H. FELLOWS.

The Lakeside Library

is published semi-monthly, and each issue contains a COMPLETE NOVEL, by one of the great authors of the world, as Charles Reade, Dickens, Scott, Anthony Trollope, Jules Verne, etc., etc. The completion of long and important novels in a single issue, is the most unique and valuable feature yet introduced into the periodical literature of the day, and is peculiar to The Lakeside Library.

Each issue of The Library contains a Complete Novel, that would cost in the book stores, on the average, $1.50 each; yet the price of the same in The Library is only 10 cents if you buy a single copy from your newsdealer, or only 9 cents if you subscribe for a year. The whole series of 24 numbers will contain Twenty-two Complete Novels, worth about $40.00, but costs only $2.15 in The Library!

Occasionally we shall issue double numbers, to contain unusually long and important works, as "The Law and The Lady," by Wilkie Collins, and Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Seas," by Jules Verne. When this is necessary, both numbers of the story will be issued together, so that the complete work will be in the reader's hands at once. In such cases three numbers will be issued in one month. ☞ Hence all subscriptions are received for 24 numbers.

Our next issue, Nos. 14 and 15, will be a splendid Double number complete and unabridged with Eight characteristic illustrations, containing the famous

Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Seas,"
By JULES VERNE.

This wonderful book is descriptive of a voyage of 20,000 leagues under the surface of the sea! No one acquainted with Verne's peculiar and dramatic style need be told that this, his greatest book, is most intensely interesting. It lays bare the mysteries of the mighty deep—its sunken wrecks; submarine forests; the grotesque, hideous and awful creatures who dwell therein; the beautiful coral caves; its treasures of gold, silver and jewels lost in Spanish ships of olden days. Yet so quaintly, and with with such an air of candor is the story told, that you can hardly believe you are not reading a transcript from a ship's log-book. Sent by mail by the publishers, post-paid, for 25 cents.

☞ There is only one other edition published, which costs $4.00.

Subscribe now, and get all the back numbers, that your set may be complete. The entire set of 24 numbers gives you a really choice library of Standard and Famous Novels, worth in book form about $40.00, and at a cost of only $2.15, including prepayment of postage—or about the price of one single book in ordinary book form. "The Portent," for instance, costs as a Bound Book, 1.75, and is published in No 12 of The Library for only 10 cents! And "Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Seas" costs as a Bound Book $4.00, and is published in Nos. 14 and 15 of The Library for only 20 cents!

☞ Each of these books is complete and unabridged, and costs in the bookstores from $1.0 to $4.00. Order a few samples.

Price, $2.15 for 24 numbers. Sold by all news dealers. Address,

LOCAL AGENTS WANTED.

An Agent Wanted for Each Town and County in the United States.

Parties desiring to act as agents must accompany their application by a letter of recommendation as to character and responsibility from any and signed by the Editor of a newspaper published in the town or county for which the agent proposes to act. The agency is to sell the bonds of the Industrial Exhibition Company.

BONDS, $20 EACH.
HALF BONDS, $10 EACH.
QUARTER BONDS, $5 EACH.

The Industrial Exhibition Company will furnish agents with circulars, etc., etc.

Each newspaper published in the town where an agent is located will, as soon as the agency is established, be given an advertisement, advertising such agency and the Company, and fully explaining the plans, purposes and objects of the Company. Such advertisement will continue in such papers as long as an agency is successfully conducted.

The Industrial Exhibition Company is the first to adopt the plan so long in use by the European governments of issuing bonds when the principal is made secure and not risked, but where there is a chance for a large premium, an investment of $20 is sure to return to the investor $21—one dollar more than cost—and the holder of a $20 Bond may obtain a premium either of $50, $100, $200, $500, $1,000, $5,000, $10,000, $25,000 or $100,000. The interest, which is ordinarily distributed to all the bond holders pro rata, is in this loan distributed by chance. The purchaser of a bond knows he will receive back his investment, with a small rate of interest, he has a chance in the above named premiums, which are simply the distribution of interest on the whole loan.

Each bond participates in four drawings each year, until it has drawn a premium, when it is surrendered, the premium paid, and the bond cancelled.

The Industrial Exhibition Company, under a special charter granted by the State of New York, is given authority to issue these bonds. The Legislature of the State, recognizing the great benefits which will arise from the success of this enterprise, have exempted all the real estate and property of the Company from taxation and assessment for five years, and has also conferred other great privileges.

Every American who understands the purposes of this Company will, of a necessity, feel a pride in aiding to its successful termination.

Each individual who buys a bond becomes an owner and an interested party, and when he views the structure erected with his money can say, "I aided to erect in our country the most magnificent building the world has ever seen, a palace which, in truth, represents the industry, energy and mechanical genius of the American people."

The manufacturers and the inventors of America are peculiarly interested in the success of this enterprise, for the reason that it is to be their home, where all their inventions and manufactures can be exhibited and sold.

The building will contain 5,320,000 square feet of space.

Purchasers desiring Bonds before an agency is established where they reside, will communicate direct with this office, from where they can be supplied.

Parties desiring to act as agents or to purchase bonds will address

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

s no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

USE

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

GENERAL JAMES MILLER.

[Cor. Boston Transcript.]

PORTSMOUTH, N H. Sept. 23.

The recent very commendable and, very successful efforts of Messrs. Thomas L. Tullock and B. F. Prescott, while Secretaries of State, to gather a gallery of portraits of those patriots in peace or war most worthy of remembrance in New Hampshire's early history, have resulted in adorning the walls of the State House at Concord with a very interesting array of noted soldiers and civilians. And perhaps among all the honored names and faces which this act will make more familiar and help to perpetuate none are more distinctly and peculiarly treasured in the remembrance of New Hampshire citizens than General John Stark, with his sententious rallying cry—"We must beat them, boys, or Molly Stark sleeps a widow to-night!" and General James Miller and his never-to-be-forgotten "I'll try, sir.'

It was our good fortune to accompany Mr. Prescott on one of his visits—of which he made many—to secure these old portraits. He was going to Temple, where General Miller died, to visit his family; and greatly indeed did our little party of four, including "the ladies," enjoy a day's trip, toilsome though it was, up into the ragged edge of the mountain region of the old Granite State. To be in season, we were obliged to take the daybreak Summer Eastern Pullman train from Portsmouth for Boston; and so arriving in Boston in good season, after a well-served breakfast at the saloon of the immense Boston & Lowell Station, we took that road, or rather that road took us, to Nashua, then to Wilton, where it left us, or we left it, and it kept right on to Greenfield, still closer up into the mountains, and which is coming to be a popular Summer resort.

Here, at Wilton, our quartet climbed into an open wagon, and our good horse climbed ten miles up, up, up, into the picturesque little town or village of Temple, our Mecca for the day.

The daughters and other members of the family of General Miller were aware of our coming—indeed, had kindly invited us; and cordially were we received and made welcome. We all felt it was good to be there, and shall cherish that as a red-letter day in our memories. Here, in a sightly location, the quaint farmhouse of the old General nestles cosily amongst the hills, at a turn in the road, so that you do not see it till you come full upon it. The residents here are two unmarried daughters, Rebecca and Augusta, who carry on the farm with hired help, and dispense a home-like hospitality as bountiful as unpretentious.

Other members of the family also spend the Summer at the old homestead; and we were fortunate enough to meet another daughter, Mrs. Ropes of Hartford, and her son, Captain James Miller Ropes of the army, and also a charming granddaughter, Miss Mary Miller, a young lady of Salem, Mass., daughter of Colonel E. F. Miller, recently deceased. The resident daughters especially were naturally enough full of the subject—their father; and right glad were we of the opportunity to hear of, almost to believe we could see, the old hero. The walls of his home gave proof to what we were told, that he was very fond of dogs, of which there were several nice portraits. His own hung near; not that in military dress—a copy of which now adorns the State House, illustrating, with its motto, a vitally interesting incident in our early history—but another, in citizen's dress, which the daughters, perhaps naturally enough, rather prefer as a likeness and remembrance. After a day spent mainly in conversation about our hero, and in strolling around the house, grounds and neighborhood, we retraced our steps to the seacoast, well pleased with our excursion, but once more impressed with the inaccuracies even of modern history.

We are not going to join the crusade against the noted characters of history o-tradition, which would exterminate Wilr liam Tell and Ethan Allen, or at least their famous sayings, or take from Lawrence his dying words, "Don't give up the ship," and make like ruthless invasions into the treasured past. On the contrary, we had most indubitable evidence that there was a General Miller; but still we can set history right on some points. For instance, no less an authority than Appleton's American Cyclopedia says—

"James Miller, an American general, born in Peterborough, N. H., April 25, 1776, died in Temple, N. H., July 7, 1851. He was educated for the bar, but in 1808 entered the army as major in the Fourth Infantry. In August, 1812, he was brevetted as colonel for distinguished services, and in the succeeding May participated with credit in the capture of Fort George. In March, 1814, he was appointed Colonel of the Twenty-first Infantry, in which capacity he accompanied the invading army of Brown into Canada, and fought with gallantry at the battle of Chippewa and Lundy's Lane. The success of the Americans in the latter conflict was mainly due to the capture of a British battery by his command, and his name was long celebrated in connection with his reply to General Scott's inquiry if he could take the battery—"I'll try, sir." For these services he was brevetted as brigadier general, and received from Congress a gold medal. He resigned his commission in the army in 1819, upon being appointed Governor of Arkansas Territory, which office he held until March, 1825; in the latter year he was appointed Collector of customs in Salem, Mass., where he remained until 1819, when he retired into private life."

Now, the following letters and extracts which we send you, and which are copied by his daughter Rebecca from the originals in possession of the family, written by General Miller to his wife Ruth, show conclusively, it would seem, that Congress and the rest of mankind have got the record wrong, in detail at least, if not material fact. We send you for publication the whole interesting correspondence of Miss Miller (including her private note to Mr. Prescott,) precisely as noted, copied and arranged by herself,—only wishing that every reader may enjoy perusing, as much as we did hearing and seeing—and still do the memory of—all.

TEMPLE, Aug. 27, 1874.

Mr. Prescott: Dear Sir—I have the pleasure to acknowledge the receipt of your letter and that of Governor Weston and Council returning thanks to our family for the portrait of our dear father; and we beg you to offer to Governor Weston and accept for yourself our sincere thanks for your kindness in furnishing the frame.

I enclose a copy of the letters of my father which you requested for Mr. Miller, and also an extract from another which shows you that he had not reached the army when the battle on Chippewa Plain was fought, though he fell in with them soon after. His regiment was, I think, encamped at Chippewa when they heard the guns of General Scott at Niagara, and I have often heard my father say that he trotted his horse, and his men ran and kept up with him the three miles to the battlefield; when they reached it his men were tired, and he had always thought he could do more with one fresh man than with three tired ones. What gallant soldiers they must have been! —the brave Twenty-first.

The inscription on the medal should have been "Brownstown, Fort George, Niagara and Erie," instead of "Chippewa, Niagara and Erie." But the mistake seems so firmly imbedded in the public mind, that I fear if we attempt to prove to them that he was not at Chippewa, some will doubt his being at Lundy's Lane.* * * Yours truly,

REBECCA MILLER.

Please tell Mr. Miller that I have the following from my Cousin James Miller of Somerville: "About the year 1720, Samuel Miller, our great-grandfather, and his wife, came to this country from the north of Ireland and settled in Londonderry, N. H. They had seven children, all born in this country except the eldest, five sons and two daughters—Matthew, Mary, Jane, James, William, Samuel and John. The four youngest sons came to Peterborough and settled on a tract of land of 400 acres, which, as tradition states, had been purchased for them and paid for in linen cloth and thread manufactured by their mother, a woman of great energy and industry. Of the four sons who settled in Peterborough, all raised up families that went out to different parts of the country (as far as I have been able to learn), an industrious, respectable class of people."

Deacon Samuel Miller was taxed £2. 13s. 5d. for the support of preaching, Nov. 9, 1750, in Londonderry.

Burlington, where he had been stationed a short time, to duty on the Canada frontier.

Extract from a letter dated

QUEENSTOWN, UP. CAN., July 12, 1814.

My much-loved Ruth—The army had crossed and taken Fort Erie two days before my arrival, without firing a gun or demanding a surrender. Our army crossed, surrounded the fort, and was preparing to open a fire upon the fort, when the commanding officer of the fort sent out a flag and offered to surrender seven officers and one hundred and thirteen non-commissioned officers and privates. The army then advanced on to Chippewa, the British came out and met them in an open field, and had a sore engagement. The British came with their full force, and not more than half of ours were engaged under General Scott. The British were ordered to charge, which brought them to close quarters. Our men behaved with great gallantry, met them until they got with in forty or fifty yards, then opened a most destructive fire, which brought the enemy to a halt; ours continued to advance and fire until they drove the enemy out of the field and across a drawbridge over the Chippewa River, which thay destroyed and prevented our army following. Our loss was three hundred and fifty or sixty, and the enemy five hundred and thirteen killed and wounded. I found our army near the battle ground. The next day we marched early in the morning, in order to find our way across the Chippewa and attack their batteries at the fort. We were met at the river by a number of pieces of artillery, had a severe cannonading while building the bridge; but before we got the bridge finished the British gave way and evacuated the place, and we crossed with only four or five wounded. I understood they had thirteen killed; how many wounded I don't know.

Since that we have advanced to this place withoul opposition. We are now seven miles from Fort George, where I expect we will have a decisive battle. I feel very confident of success.

A party of men went from our camp last evening, under General Swift of the new York volunteers. They went out to cut off a British picket guard; killed several of the British and took six prisoners. One of the prisoners, when ordered to give his gun to General Swift, shot him dead, which we consider a great loss. J. MILLER.

Mrs. Ruth Miller.

I remember a Major Harrison who was wounded in the battle of Chippewa, and lost a leg in consequence, dining with us in Salem, and while they (my father and Major Harrison) were "fighting their battles o'er again" he asked, "General, do you remember what you said to me after the battle of Chippewa? You came and lifted me out of the boat in which I was brought across, and said, 'Tom, my poor fellow. I'm sorry for you; but I'll pay them for it!' and the next I heard you were paying them for it, and well, too."

FORT ERIE, July 28, 1814.

My Beloved Ruth—I have great reason to thank God for his continued goodness, for his continued mercies and protection. On the evening of the 25th inst., at the Falls of the Niagara, we met the enemy and had, I believe, one of the most desperately fought actions ever experienced in America; it continued for more than three hours, stubbornly contested on both sides, when about ten o'clock at night we succeeded in driving them from their strong position. Our loss was very severe in killed and wounded. I have lost from my regiment in killed, wounded and missing one hundred and twenty-six. The enemy had got their artillery posted on a height in a very commanding position, where they could rake our columns in any part of the plain, and prevented their advancing. Major McRee, the chief engineer, told General Brown he could do no good until that height was carried and those cannon taken, or driven from their position. It was then night, but moonlight. General Brown turned to me and said, "Colonel Miller, take your regiment and storm that work and take it." I had short of three hundred men with me, as my regiment had been much weakened by the numerous details made from it during the day. I however immediately obeyed the order; we could see all their slow matches and port fires burning and ready. I did not know what side of the work was the most favorable for approach, but happened to hit upon a very favorable place, notwithstanding we advanced upon the mouths of their pieces of cannon. It happened there was an old rail fence on the side where we approached, with a small growth of shrubbery by the fence, and within less than two rods of the cannon's mouth. Undiscovered by the enemy, I then very cautiously ordered my men to rest across the fence, take good aim, fire and rush, which was done in style; not one man at the cannon was left to put fire to them; we got into the centre of their park before they had time to oppose us. A British line was formed, and lying in a strong position to protect their artillery; the moment we got to the centre they opened a most destructive flank fire on us, killed a great many, and attempted to charge with their bayonets; we returned the fire so warmly they were compelled to stand. We fought hand to hand for some time, so close that the blaze of our guns crossed each other, but we compelled them to abandon their whole artillery, ammunition, wagons and all, amounting to seven pieces of elegant brass cannon, one of which was a twenty-four pounder, with eight horses and harness, though some of the horses were killed.

The British made two more attempts to charge us at close quarters, both of which we repulsed before I was reenforced, after which the First and Twenty third regiments came to my relief, and even after that the British charged with their whole line three several times, and after getting within half-pistol shot of us, were compelled to give way. I took with my regiment between defending the artillery. Lieutenant Aaron Bigelow of my regiment was killed; Captain Burbank and Lieutenant Cilley * badly wounded, a number of others slightly; General Brown and his aid both dangerously wounded; General Scott and his brigade major, Lieutenant Smith, both badly wounded; General Ripley and his aid, both shot through the hat; Major McFarland, killed; Colonel Brady, badly wounded; Major McNeil badly wounded, so he must, it is said, lose his leg. It is unnecessary for me to enumerate a quarter of our loss, but we have very few officers left for duty. I now command a brigade; General Ripley is commander-in-chief. I am the only full Colonel, and we have but one lieutenant colonel to all the regular troops here. We expect reenforcements soon. But I have forgotten to tell you we were unfortunate about our artillery at last. After Generals Brown, Scott and others were wounded we were ordered to return back to our camp, about three miles, and preparations had not been made for taking off the cannon, as it was impossible for me to defead it, and make preparations for that too, and it was all left on the ground except one beautiful brass six-pounder, which is made a present to my regiment in testimony of their distinguished gallantry. The officers of this army all say, who saw it, that it was one of the most desperate and gallant acts ever known. The British officers, whom we have prisoners, say it was the most desperate thing they ever saw or heard of. General Brown told me the moment he saw me, that I had immortalized myself; but, said he, "My dear fellow, my heart ached for you when I gave you the order, but I knew it was the only thing that would save us."

We wounded Major General Drummond, took Major General Riall prisoner, with between twenty and thirty other officers; how many non-commissioned officers and privates I have not yet learned, as they were sent hastily across the river,—but a very considerable number JAMES MILLER.

The battle of Chippewa was fought July 5, Niagara July 25, and Erie Sept. 17, 1814, and these are the actions and dates inscribed on the Miller gold medal; but, as Miss Miller states, her father was not in the Chippewa action, as he did not arrive there until the next day; but Major Hixby took part. General Brown, who was in command at Lundy's Lane, "wrote mother," says Miss Miller, "three days after that battle, a very complimentary account of her husband's gallantry in capturing that battery. The whole country acknowledged his great services. Congress passed resolutions of thanks Nov. 8, 1814, and ordered the heavy gold medal struck in his honor, which is now a precious heirloom in the family, and as before stated bears the inscriptions of the three battles of Chippewa, Niagara and Erie, a battle scene, and "I'll Try." The "sir," which Appleton adds, and which has always been used in popular versions of the story, and to point many a moral, is left off both the medals and the portrait at Concord; though it would be more natural for a soldier to add it in replying to his superior officer or almost any other person.

This medal was, we believe, after long delay in preparation, presented to General Miller by Daniel Webster, at City Hall Park, New York; and also an elegant dress sword, with gold and jewelled hilt, voted by the State of New York, which also we had the pleasure of seeing and handling, and have copied the inscription for the Transcript's readers:

"Presented by his excellency Daniel D. Thompkins, governor of the State of New York, pursuant to the resolutions of the Senate, and Assembly of said State, to Brigadier General James Miller, as a testimony of gratitude for his services, and admiration of his gallant conduct. Brigadier General James Miller, U. S. Army."

We have it from the gallant old General, as he after wrote his loving wife on this occasion—which naturally attracted a great crowd in New York, and among them his old companions in arms and their friends—that "his vanity was never so touched before as by a compliment from the widow of General Montgomery."

Among the other mementoes of our hero, we were shown the veritable tomahawk which was presented to General Miller by one of his old friends and admirers when the General was appointed Governor of Arkansas and was about leaving for that then savage wilderness. He was six weeks in making the trip from Pittsburg to Cincinnati, with all the speed he could make in those days, and noted that he saw on the stocks at Pittsburg the first steamboat built in "Western" waters!

There was also among these relics, and more precious and notable, perhaps, than all the others, the veritable sword which "I'll Try" wore and used in the storming of that battery. The General (then Colonel) had lost his blade previously, and an English blade picked up after an action was fitted to his hilt. It is a common curved cavalry sword, and badly hacked and gapped by use in that terrific ordeal. It was easy to infer from casual remarks of the family, that neither General Miller nor his descendants deemed that his great and glorious services were sufficiently appreciated or duly recompensed by the country. And, as republics are proverbially ungrateful, this is probably true, and judging from the record, we should not hesitate to declare that it is; for except the complimentary medal and vote, his reward was less than many a cheap ward politician or worthless party demagogue, either then or now, receives for a mere tithe of his merit or services. News and Notes.

In the Massachusetts republican State convention, on Wednesday, the 29th, on the informal ballot for a candidate for Governor, Rice had 398, Loring 358, Adams 236, scattering 76. The first formal ballot gave Rice 451, Loring 332, Adams 253, scattering 48. Hon. Alexander H. Rice, of Boston, was nominated on the fourth ballot.

Hon. Geo. M. Herring of Farmington died on Sunday, Sept. 26th, aged about 60 years. He was a leading republican.

And yet Carl Schurz needn't put on airs because he is honored with an invitation to stump Ohio for the republicans. He should, instead, reflect with shame on the fact that it was the personal efforts of such men as he that made defection from the republican ranks a favorite thing with demagogues and disappointed politicians, none of them of superior qualities of mind or more noble attributes of heart. He is simply endeavoring now to undo the mischief he and others have wrought, and deserves not half the esteem that should be given to men who stayed with the party which carried the country through its most terrible crisis unfalteringly and without thought of treason. Schurz' propulsion from a seat in the Senate has evidently opened his eyes to the fact that promotion by democratic aid cannot be expected. Chastened by defeat, he discerns his political future as utterly without aim unless he retrieve the great mistake of 1872.

"Warrington" blazes up at the suggestion of Geo. W. Curtis that the republicans of Massachusetts nominate Charles Francis Adams for Governor, a man who "if he left the party too early, did not commit the error of staying in it too long; and who was a candidate for the Cincinnati and Baltimore nominations in 1872." "Warrington" concludes Curtis' advice is, "not to put too fine a point upon it, a 'cussed piece of impudence.'" His strictures on Adams and Curtis are doubtless just, but come with bad grace from a person who only apostasized from the republican party when he found it would no longer honor him with office.

The members of the New Hampshire Press Association start on their annual excursion next Monday, visiting Newport and Claremont on that day; Bellows Falls, Vt., and Keene on Tuesday; Monadnock Mountain on Wednesday; Greenfield, the Hoosac Tunnel and North Adams on Thursday; the Tunnel, Turner's Falls and Fitchburg on Friday; and leaving for home on Saturday.

At Lancaster, Sept. 28th, John M. Hopkins' large barn, filled with hay- owned by Hopkins', D. C. Pinkham and Ossian Ray, was burned. Insured for $600. Hopkins' loss $2500, Ray's $600, Pinkhm's $100.

Frank Sanborn, of Springfield, who, several days ago was arrested in Concord for stealing a gold watch and a sum o money, and was discharged on giving up the property, was again arrested for burning the barn and out-buildings of Charles Hobart, of Enfield, a neighbor of the man from whom he took the watch and valuables. Sanborn took the goods on Friday afternoon and was seen at Enfield Centre later in the day, where he took a cap from a store and then started Southward. He had threatened several times to burn Hobart's buildings, and about 11 o'clock, Friday, the barn and shed were discovered on fire. They were entirely consumed, with about thirty tons of hay and quite a quantity of grain. Suspicion at once rested on Sanborn, and Conductor Pattee found him seeking to get a ride to Massachusetts. He offered to aid him on his way, and at once turned him over to the police authorities. Sanborn is about 20 years of age and has a bad reputation.

Iowa has 130,000,000 bushels of corn (20,000,000 more than last year) worth $70,000,000, to be blamed on the republican party. It is very mournful.

The news from all parts of the State of coming republican victory on the 12th of October, continues to arrive in the most cheering style. Everywhere through the State the people are aroused and flock by thousands to the republican meetings with an enthusiasm only equalled when they rallied to save the country from the democratic slave-holders' war. They come with banners, and torches, and music, and fill the air with shouts of victory. The rotten doctrine of inflation is getting to be seen in its true light, and when our speakers detail the wiles and tricks of the democratic-Catholic alliance against the public schools, there is a firm and defiant rallying to their support, which reminds one of the men of Lexington and Bunker Hill.—Cinn. Times.

Carl Schurz made an admirable address in favor of hard money, at Cincinnati.

The wind commenced blowing on Tuesday night, Sept. 18th, at Houston, Texas, from the northeast, changing east, thence southeast. By Thursday morning it was blowing a hurricane, sixty to eighty miles an hour. During Friday the wind blew with the greatest force. The water from the Gulf was driven with great rapidity, and was manifestly a tidal wave, and from low tide it could be seen coming forward in a plateau, and soon the whole country overflowed. The storm is described as being like a picture of a tropical hurricane. The ocean waves beat over the roof of the two-story house occupied by Judge Cook, and the waves even rolled on to the plantation of Colonel John H. Heinder, tearing up trees eight miles from the Gulf. The tide rose from twelve to fourteen feet above low mean tide, six or seven feet higher than ever known, and six feet deep on lands that had never been touched by salt water.

An Akron dispatch to the Cleveland Leader says: "A most unparalleled outrage was perpetrated by the democratic roughs of Cuyahoga Falls. As a special train filled with the Hayes clubs of Akron was passing by Cuyahoga Falls, on its way home from Hudson, several volleys of rocks and stones were fired into the open cars filled with men, from an ambush at the side of the track. Several men and a little boy eleven years old were seriously injured, receiving deep and ghastly wounds in the head and face. Many others were struck, and more or less injured. One or two pistol shots were fired into the train, but fortunately missed their aim. A scene of the wildest excitement ensued. The train was stopped, and a large body of men started in pursuit of the miscreants. They had taken to flight, however, and the train came on to Akron, where the news had aroused the deepest indignation. And this happened in peaceful Ohio!"

Jottings.

Mr. Frank Norton, of York, a laborer in the Construction department at the navy yard, met with a serious accident on Wednesday, the 29th. He was employed in taking a rope from a steam windlass, when his right arm was caught by the machinery, and before the engine could be stopped, most of the flesh, from the elbow down, torn off. He was immediately taken to the yard hospital, and every attention rendered him; after which he was brought to the residence of his sister in this city. He displayed wonderful nerve while his wounds were being dressed.

On and after Oct. 1st. Post Office hours will be from 7:30 A. M. to 7:30 P. M.

The Lighthouse Board gives notice that hereafter there will be sounded during thick and foggy weather on the Pollock Rip light vessel, off Chatham, Mass., a twelve inch steam whistle, giving during each minute a blast of five seconds' duration, followed by an interval of twenty-two seconds, then a blast of three seconds, followed by an interval of thirty seconds.

The masts have been put into the Marion. She will be immediately rigged and fitted for sea.

The Rollins-Pickering family held their second annual reunion and picnic at the Rollins farm in Newington, Sept. 28th. A large number were present from all parts of the country. John R. Rollins, of Lawrence, is President of the Association. A poem was written and read by Miss Mary Rollins, of Great Falls. Addresses were made by Hon. E. A. Rollins, of Rollinsford; Charles Wingate Rollins, of Boston; Hon. W. H. Y. Hackett, of Portsmouth; Rev. Chas. Davis, of Newington; Col. Peter Sanborn, of Concord, and others of the family. Harlow's Band furnished music, and social singing and dancing closed the day.

The eclipse of the sun was not visible in in this city, Wednesday morning, owing to the clouds.

Schooner White Stars from Lingan for Portsmouth, before reported as having struck a reef off York, Me., and towed into Newcastle and beached, was floated off and up to Portsmouth, under charge of John Dixon, Esq., who is to receive $3 per ton for his services in bringing the vessel up and discharging her cargo of coal.

Lehigh coal is coming into general use here, and is sold by C. E. Walker & Co. and E. F. Sise & Co. Now is the time to lay in a supply before the rise of prices occurs.

Gen. Thom reports the removal of the ledge at Collins' wharf, Dover Narrows, and will dredge a channel to Dover, this Fall, when all cargoes of coal, corn and other merchandise can be shipped direct, avoiding transhipment here. There has been removed 1000 yards of rock, giving eleven feet at mean high water at Collins' wharf. The Dover people are to be congratulated on the completion of the work, which will tend to the continued prosperity of our neighbor city. Its Board of Trade has had a de facto existence rather than a nominal one, and bears fruit handsomely.

The committee of the Ladies' Quaker Party have made arrangments with Miss L. D. Tripp, Market street, to exhibit in her window, the costume ladies are expected to wear on that occasion. The dress is to be made of any inexpensive gray material, and no ornaments of any kind are to be worn. No lady will be allowed on the floor who is not clothed in Quaker garb.

At the recent Conclave of the Grand Commandery of Knights Templar and appendant Orders in the State of New Hampshire, held at Concord, Sept. 28th, Sir Solon A. Carter of Keene was elected R. E. Grand Commander, Sir John R. Holbrook of this city, V. E. Dep. Grand Commander, and Sir Joseph W. Hildreth of this city, E. Grand Junior Warden.

A Good Suggestion.

Editor Chronicle; The Mayor, in his inaugural address, speaks—doubtless deservedly—in praise of our Fire department, of the efficiency of its equipment, reservoirs, etc., but, there is one most essential point to which his prompt attention is respectfully called, in which it appears to the writer, to be totally and most reprehensibly deficient—a deficiency which might render an otherwise perfect department nugatory and helpless; and that is, in the want of means of getting our heavy engines to a fire should one occur soon after such a fall of snow as we often have, and are constantly liable to during our long Winters. Anyone who has witnessed the effort and struggling to get one of our heavy engines through even a light fall of snow, must have felt the impossibility of its being done at all, with the present arrangement, after a heavy one.

The writer witnessed such a struggle late last Winter, and it then occurred to him that iron shoes—or something of that sort—could be arranged, into which the wheels could be easily and quickly placed, greatly facilitating the movement of the engines, making them available, and perhaps preventing a serious conflagration. Better look the door before the horse is stolen. W.

Globe Theatre, Boston.

Mr. Cheney has certainly taken time by the forelock, in the very judicious change he has made in his scale of prices of admission to the Globe Theatre for the remainder of the season; and it is the more gratifying to know that, whatever the attraction offered, these liberal rates will remain in permanency. In all that pertains to the drama, the Globe Theatre has been foremost in every good move, and this last step on the part of its enterprising manager will more than ever redound to his credit. Nothing, perhaps, could add to the popularity of the theatre as a home of the drama; but certainly this well-timed arrangement, wherein the public will is more than anticipated, will have a beneficial influence in the future, far beyond its present seeming. He is a bold man who is the first to inaugurate a reform, and in popularizing the prices of admission to his superb theatre Mr. Cheney has taken a step as bold as it is wise. Popular prices with the best possible entertainments may always be looked for at the Globe. Just now at the Globe, the attraction is the new comedy of "Our Boys," which is meeting with a success unprecedented. Mr. Honey, the famed English comedian, and the superior company are adding to the great reputation of the Theatre. The scale of prices adopted by Mr. Cheney will be found in our advertising columns, and we announce it to all.

Effects of Dissipation Counteracted.

Alcoholic excesses cannot be too earnestly deprecated, both for their destructive effects upon the constitution and their pernicious influence upon man's general welfare. At the same time there is little probability that he will cease to indulge in them until the end of time. Common humanity would therefore seem to dictate the suggestion of the most efficient means of counteracting their effects. There is not among medicated stimulants one so admirably calculated to counteract the physical consequences of hard drinking as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which relieve the nausea and headache produced by it, steady the trembling nerves, and yield that unfeverish repose which is the best recuperant of health shaken by excess. The bilious symptoms caused by dissipation are promptly relieved by the Bitters, which are also an excellent remedy for all disorders affecting the stomach, bowels, liver and urinary organs, to which it imparts unwonted regularity and tone.

OF MICHIGAN LANDS,
FOR SALE!

The Lands of the Jackson, Lansing & Saginaw Railroad Company are now Offered For Sale.

They are situated along its railroad and contain large tracts of excellent FARMING and PINE Lands. The farming lands include some of the most fertile and well-watered hardwood lands in the State. They are timbered mainly with hard-maple and beech; soil black, sandy loam, and abound in springs of pure cool water. Michigan is one of the least indebted and most prosperous States in the Union, and its farmers have a greater variety of crops and resources than any Western state. While some of the Prairie States may produce corn in great abundance, they have no other resource, and when this crop fails destitution follows, as has been the case the past year in Kansas and Nebraska. One Box Dr. Quain's Condition Pills "Nearly Cured Where All Else Failed."

LOWELL, MASS, July 20th, 1874.

T. W. LANE:—I have used one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, am glad to state in my case they have proved all that you claim for them. I have been troubled with Bad Blood and all its consequent diseases, and have tried several kinds of Bitters and Pills without receiving much benefit, until I tried the CONDITION PILLS, and they have nearly cured where all else failed. Please send me another package as soon as convenient.
Yours, very truly,
J. D. WHITAKER.

Testimony of a Clergyman---Liver and Kidney Troubles.

EAST TILTON, N. H., April 14, 1875.

MR. LANE.—Dear Sir:—DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS are not only the best, but the very best I ever used. My wife has been troubled with Kidney Complant many years; one half of a package has cured her, so that she feels as well as ever. I have been troubled with Liver Compaint for many years; one-half of a package has done me more good than all the Pills I ever took. One of my neighbors took them, who has been troubled with Liver Complaint for many years: three Pills have helped him. Your Pills, where used, commend their virtues. Please send to my address one package.
REV. JOHN DAVIS.

Liver Compaint and Rheumatism so that he Could not Sleep Nights.

I was born and always lived in Pittsfield, N. H.; am now 50 years old; been troubled with Liver Complaint for 30 years, and Rheumatism for 20 years, sometimes so I could not sleep nights. I have taken one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, and they have done me more good and relieved more suffering than all the medicine I have taken during my life.
S. S. RING.
Pittsfield, N. H., Dec. 17, 1874.

Fever and Ague.

NEW BOSTON, N. H., Feb. 1, 1875.

T. W. LANE.—Sir:—Last month I sent to you for a package of DR. QUAIN'S PILLS. I had tried five so-called ague cures, and I received more benefit from five of your pills than I have all the "Cures" "Chalogues," "Quinine," &c., that I have taken in two years. I cannot recommend it too highly for diseases resulting from long standing Fever and Ague.
Yours, most respectfully,
MRS. C. GARLAND.

Scaly Humor Cured by One Package---Liver Complaint Helped.

NORTH SALEM, N. H., Jan. 5, 1875.

MR. LANE.—Dear Sir:—Your Pills are all they are recommended. I was troubled with a Scaly Humor on my legs; I took one package and my legs are quite smooth. My wife was troubled with Liver Complaint; she took one package and they helped her greatly.
Yours, with respect,
JOHN H. BLAKE.

From a Leading Citizen of Rindge.

WEST RINDGE, Cheshire Co., N. H.,
November 17, 1874.

THOS. W. LANE:—After taking three packages of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, I am prepared to say they are the very best, for I have tried a great many kinds, and faithfully too, believing they would help me, to no effect.—These I do believe are the very best ever made; just the kind a man needs. May they be spread all over the wide world, and Dr. Quain's name a household word.
Yours truly,
ASA STICKNEY.

Felt Better, Stronger and Gained Flesh in One Week,

AFTER TAKING DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS.

ROLLINSFORD, N. H.

THOS. W. LANE:—I commenced to take DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, and in one week I was heavier, felt better, and was stronger than before, and any one troubled with BAD BLOOD can find sure remedy in these Pills.
Nov. 3, 1874. L. M. YEATON.

CHESTER, N. H., Feb. 24, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have been out of health for some time, and I took a very bad cold and it left my lungs in a very weak state. I received Dr. Quain's Condition Pills and took them according to the directions, and my lungs are some better. I can recommend them to any one who is troubled with weak lungs, for they have done me good, and I think another package will cure me. Dr. Quain's Pills ought to be known throughout the world. Please send me another package as soon as convenient.
Yours, &c., CYRUS LANE.

HILLSBOROBRIDGE, Feb. 25, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—Dr. Quain's Condition Pills are the best Liver used for lameness and pain. The first dose I took removed the pain and lameness that I have been troubled with for several years. Others have used quite a number of the pills besides myself. Please send another package by return of mail.
MRS. DANIEL KIMBALL.

GILMANTON I. W., N. H., Feb. 25, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have been using Dr. Quain's Condition Pills, and can recommend them as far ahead of common pills for constipation of the bowels; they do not have the debilitating effect of common purgatives I have taken.
MRS. J. B. GOODWIN.

NORTHWOOD CENTRE, March 1, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I saw Dr. Quain's Condition Pills highly recommended, and sent for a package, and I feel that they have done more for me than all the medicine I have taken for years, and can freely recommend them to others, as a good and sure medicine. Please send me another package as soon as possible.
MARTHA NORCROSS.

BRISTOL, N. H., Feb. 27, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have made a fair trial of those Condition Pills, and liked them very much. I think they are all they are recommended. They are a good Liver invigorator.
N. F. DANFORTH.

SALEM DEPOT, N. H., March 8, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE:—I think these pills (Dr. Quain's Condition Pills) are all they claim to be; my wife and I are both victims of Liver and Kidney Complaint, and general debility. We have taken about half that package you sent me, and find a marked improvement in our health. I want four packages to give away in the north part of Vermont, to friends up there. I enclose $2.00, and if you can, send me four Packages.
ROYAL SCOTT.

SOUTH PLATTSBURGH, N. Y., March 11, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE:—I have given Dr. Quain's Condition Pills a trial, and find I can honestly recommend them, they having materially improved the soreness and lameness with which I have been afflicted ever since getting hurt a few years ago. Pains of left side that I suffered last October. I desire you to send me another package as soon as convenient, as I am anxious to continue their use. Though not now a resident of New England, I have lived in Central Vermont more than fifty years, and trust Dr. Quain's Pills will not long be seen in that section.
MOSES SHELDON.

THOS. W. LANE:—I have been troubled with Biliousness, Headache, and Dizziness, for a long time, and had the Dyspepsia so bad there were but few kinds of food my stomach would bear at all. I commenced taking your pills, have taken most of one package, and now enjoy eating as well as I ever did, am not troubled with dizziness unless by taking cold, and have been greatly benefited by the use of them.
A. L. PAGE.

FRANCESTOWN, March 13, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE:—I have found Dr. Quain's Condition Pills to be all you claim for them in Kidney Complaint, poor blood, and weak nerves. May they be circulated over the land and found in every household where medicine is needed. I enclose 50 cts. for another package as soon as convenient.
JOHN T. FELCH.

The Lakeside Library
is published semi-monthly, and each issue contains a COMPLETE NOVEL, by one of the great authors of the world, as Charles Reade, Dickens, Scott, Anthony Trollope, Jules Verne, etc., etc. The completion of long and important novels in a single issue, is the most unique and valuable feature yet introduced into the periodical literature of the day, and is peculiar to The Lakeside Library.
Each issue of The Library contains a Complete Novel, that would cost in the book stores, on the average, $1.50 each; yet the price of the same in The Library is only 10 cents if you buy a single copy from your newsdealer, or only 9 cents if you subscribe for a year. The whole series of 24 numbers will contain Twenty-two Complete Novels, worth about $30.00, but costs only $2.15 in The Library!
Occasionally we shall issue double numbers, to contain unusually long and important works, as "The Law and The Lady," by Wilkie Collins, and Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Seas," by Jules Verne. When this is necessary, both numbers of the story will be issued together, so that the complete work will be in the reader's hands at once. In such cases three numbers will be issued in one month. ☞ Hence all subscriptions are received for 24 numbers.
Our next issue, Nos. 14 and 15, will be a splendid Double number complete and unabridged with Eight characteristic illustrations, containing the famous
Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Seas,"
By JULES VERNE.
This wonderful book is descriptive of a voyage of 20,000 leagues under the surface of the sea! No one acquainted with Verne's peculiar and dramatic style need be told that this, his greatest book, is most intensely interesting. It lays bare the mysteries of the mighty deep—its sunken wrecks; submarine forests; the grotesque, hideous and awful creatures who dwell therein; the beautiful coral caves; its treasures of gold, silver and jewels lost in Spanish ships of olden days. Yet so quaintly, and with with such an air of candor is the story told, that you can hardly believe you are not reading a transcript from a ship's log-book. Sent by mail by the publishers, post-paid, for 25 cents.
☞ There is only one other edition published, which costs $4.00.
Subscribe now, and get all the back numbers, that your set may be complete. The entire set of 24 numbers gives you a really choice library of Standard and Famous Novels, worth in book form about $30.00, and at a cost of only $2.15, including prepayment of postage—or about the price of one single book in ordinary book form. "The Portent," for instance, costs as a Bound Book, 1.75, and is published in No 12 of The Library for only 10 cents! And "Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Seas" costs as a Bound Book $4.00, and is published in Nos. 14 and 15 of The Library for only 20 cents!
☞ Each of these books is complete and unabridged, and costs in the bookstores from $1.0 to $4.00. Order a few samples.

LOCAL AGENTS
WANTED.
An Agent Wanted for Each Town and County in the United States.
Parties desiring to act as agents must accompany their application by a letter of recommendation as to character and responsibility from and signed by the Editor of a newspaper published in the town or county for which the agent proposes to act. The agency is to sell the bonds of the Industrial Exhibition Company.
BONDS, $20 EACH.
HALF BONDS, $10 EACH.
QUARTER BONDS, $5 EACH.
The Industrial Exhibition Company will furnish agents with circulars, etc., etc.
Each newspaper published in the town where an agent is located will, as soon as the agency is established, be given an advertisement, advertising such agency and the Company, and fully explaining the plans, purposes and objects of the Company. Such advertisement will continue in such papers as long as an agency is successfully conducted.
The Industrial Exhibition Company is the first to adopt the plan so long in use by the European governments of issuing bonds when the principal is made secure and not risked, but where there is a chance for a large premium, an investment of $20 is sure to return to the investor $21—one dollar more than cost—and the holder of a $20 Bond may obtain a premium either of $50, $100, $200, $500, $1,000, $5,000, $4,000, $10,000, $25,000 or $100,000. The interest, which is ordinarily distributed to all the bond holders pro rata, is in this loan distributed by chance. The purchaser of a bond knows he will receive back his investment, with a small rate of interest, he has a chance in the above named premiums, which are simply the distribution of interest on the whole loan.
Each bond participates in four drawings each year, until it has drawn a premium, when it is surrendered, the premium paid, and the bond cancelled.
The Industrial Exhibition Company, under a special charter, granted by the State of New York, is given authority to issue these bonds. The Legislature of the State, recognizing the great benefits which will arise from the success of this enterprise, have exempted all the real estate and property of the Company from taxation and assessments for five years, and has also conferred other great privileges.
Every American who understands the purposes of this Company will, of a necessity, feel a pride in aiding it to a successful termination.
Each individual who buys a bond becomes an owner and an interested party, and when he views the structure erected with his money can say, "I aided to erect in our country the most magnificent building the world has ever seen, a palace which, in truth, represents the industry, energy and mechanical genius of the American people."
The manufacturers and the inventors of America are peculiarly interested in the success of this enterprise, for the reason that it is to be their home, where all their inventions and manufactures can be exhibited and sold.
The building will contain 5,320,000 square feet of space.
Purchasers desiring Bonds before an agency is established where they reside, will communicate direct with this office, from where they can be supplied.
Parties desiring to act as agents or to purchase bonds will address

Pulmocine Cordial.
BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL
is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.
Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.
Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.
CLEAR YOUR THROAT!
Relieve Your Lungs.
For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,
PULMOCINE CORDIAL
Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.
For Coughs,
Croup,
Diphtheria,
Asthma, etc.,
USE
Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.
The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

A Specimen Democratic Rally In Ohio.

[Cor. Cinn. Times.]

TROY, O, September 25.

It has been a day of triumph in Troy. But now the roar of Cary has ceased and the lights in the gin mills are extinguished. Naught is heard but the hiccough of some retiring democrat, telling his story to the lamp post on the corner and then all is still as a beer saloon where no credit is given.

To-day was set in Troy for a great democratic rally, a wonderful outpouring, a tremendous rush. It is over. The rally has rallied, the outpouring has poured, the rush has rushed, and I seat myself sadly to gather up and bind in a sweet scented nosegay the glorious memories of the great occasion.

I dropped off at the railroad station, in this pretty village, at 11 o'clock this morning, and saw at once signs of the expected crowd and rush. The crowd, however, was crowding aboard the train, as though anxious to get away from Troy, and the rush consisted of the rush of an adolescent Ethiopian to secure the job of carrying my satchel for a nickel. I failed, in my lonely journey to the Morris House, to note any sigas of preparation. Not a flag, not a banner, only quiet and half-deserted streets greeted me. I asked my ebony assistant:

"Isn't there a big political meeting here to-day?"

"I dunno, sah. But I jist done heer some gemmen at de depot say some fellers dey said was a dam fool, was goin' for ter perform suthin' at de opry-house dis afternoon."

Ah, thought I, that is Cary, and I am not mistaken in time or place.

Arrived at the hotel I consigned my valuable portmanteau to the care of Captain Charley Kramer, the politest landlord in Ohio, and wandered forth to seek for the outpouring of the masses. Finally, sitting gloomily on an ash barrel, cutting shoestrings from an old boot leg, I found Ravenscroft, who used to push a clerical pen into the Sixty-first General Assembly.

He eyed me suspiciously. "What are you here for?" said he.

"I came to see the outpouring of the masses," replied I; "when will they outpour!"

"Oh! When the General comes, I suppose."

"When may that be?"

"Just noon, I believe."

"Aren't you doing something in the way of preparing to meet him in some sort of style?"

"Certainly! We will welcome him with the thunderous roars of the street, sir; with all things tender and sweet; indeed, we will, and also with the boom of artillery!"

"Where is this artillery at present located?" asked I.

"There it is; I am commander of that section of artillery and that company of brass cannoniers."

I looked in the direction indicated, and saw a gun, about the size of a champagne bottle, and a "company" consisting of a dyspeptic looking man with a ragged shirt and one suspender, and two boys and a little girl sucking her thumb.

"Oh, yes," I remarked; "be careful you don't hurt somebody with that instrument of destruction—don't stand behind it when it goes off."

Just then the dyspeptic looking man came up to say that "some durned galoot has been pouring shoemaker's wax into the vent of the gun," and Major Gen. Ravenscroft moved sadly away to drill out his gun and drill his company.

Somebody grabbed me from behind, as I was watching the form of the departing artillery hero, and I found myself in the party grasp of Troy's magnum Apollo, Hon. J. E. Pearson, who said he was looking for me. We sat down on the vacated ash barrel, and reminisced pleasantly for a short time.

Finally I asked, "What about this democratic rally, to-day?"

"Ah, yes, as I was saying, the floods swept away 60 acres of corn for me—"

"But I want to know more about the meeting?"

"That, you see, left 600 cattle for me to—"

I stopped him again. Evidently he did not want to talk about the outpour, but I held him down with an iron reportorial hand, and he explained, finally, something in the following manner, why the outpour was not outpouring better:

"You see," said he, chewing a piece of liquorice root, and numbering off on his fingers to make sure he forgot or omitted nothing: "In the first place the farmers are busy, then too it looks like rain, there was a county fair here last week, there has been a number of picnics around here lately, there is a cattle show below here, a pig show West of here, a camp-meeting next week, a good many have gone to the Exposition at Cincinnati, several are playing croquet, three or four are in jail, a man in the east part of our town fell off a scaffold yesterday, and hurt him so he can't come, the meeting hasn't been well advertised and—"

I rose up and started to go, saying: "Eb. Pearson, if you've got an immortal soul to save, quit right where you are, I've heard enough."

He looked ashamed of himself, and asked me if I knew that a Troy beer mug was twice as large as a Cincinnati one, and if I didn't believe it to come and see. We went to see.

And then we went to see Cary come. A large crowd was assembled at the depot. There were eight men and four boys, most of whom were black or parti-colored, and badly disorganized at the seats of their pantaloons. There were also three railroad hands and a peanut girl. The vast throng surged and ebbed about the corner of the depot, and awaited the coming of Cary.

Major General Ravenscroft had been stationed up the railroad about ten rods with his section of artillery and as the train bearing the great Cary came by he got his gun off with good success, making a noise that we heard distinctly clear over to the depot. He then loaded up, gave the lanyard to the little girl to hold, and, blood stained and powder and sweat begrimed, sat calmly and fearlessly upon his smoking cannon awaiting the signal to let her slide again. As Cary alighted from the train there was a shout; a small boy shouted: "That's the old duffer, Bill," and an enthusiastic band of six players, who all wore blue coats and carried brass instruments, turned up in a singular manner, making them all look like blue jays with yellow tails turned over their backs, struck up "Up in a Balloon," glided lugubriously into "I'm Captain Jenks" and ended with "Little Fraud," tooted into Cary's ears as he marched to the carriage in waiting.

That carriage was an architectural phenomenon on wheels. It was certainly coeval with the early days of Bill Allen, and looked as though it had served for long ages in some retired shed as a roosting place for countless generations of well fed hens and roosters. Two flags, each the size of a man's hand, had been stuck into holes in the ancient and guano stained leather, incurring an expense of five cents on the loyal democrats of Troy. A few moments were spent in waking up and encouraging the horses attached to this extraordinary vehicle, and the procession, consisting of the band, the architectural phenomenon on wheels, a grocer's cart and a buck-board, started. The band began to play the "Rogue's March," but Eb. Pearson threw a brick at the leader to convince him of a mistake somewhere, and they finally started on to the tune of "Oh! carry me back."

Just then the little girl holding the lanyard of Major General Ravenscroft's cannon yielded to the excitement of the moment and take a surreptitious suck at her thumb, and fired off the gun, which caused the eighty hero to skip down very nimbly, apply both hands to the posterior fundamental protuberance of his physical corporosity, execute a little war dance, and swear dreadfully. It was the only fatal accident of the day.

At the head of the stairs in the hotel I met Cary, and he conversed as follows:

Cary. "Hallo!"

Reporter. "Hallo!"

C. "What are you here for?"

R. "I have come to do you justice."

C. "Your paper is incapable of doing anybody justice. It misrepresents and lies about everything."

R. "You flatter us."

C. "It is a —— lying sheet—worse than the Gazette or Commercial."

R. "Thank you, but General, it don't crawl."

C. "What do you mean by that?"

R. "It don't howl for somebody to discuss a question with it, and then hurry into its hole the moment some one accepts the challenge."

C. "Oh, that's what you are driving at. Neither do I. There, come into my room. I can talk the daylight out of any Ohio man."

R. "You challenged anybody."

C. "I didn't. The Commercial lies. I challenged any Ohio man. I might lick the shirt off of this —— New Yorker and get no glory for my pains. Give me an Ohioan, and I'll meet him and beat him."

R. "It looks very much to an outsider as though you were afraid of Woodford."

C. "Young man, you must learn to know I am not afraid of anything. Your newspapers tell nothing but lies. I don't read them at all, I don't look in a newspaper. D— the newspapers. I care nothing for them."

R. "How do you feel about the canvass?"

C. "There never was such a canvass made of Ohio as I am making. I have spoken to seventy mass meetings—often speaking five hours a day. I am in excellent health and spirits, and am going to be elected by an overwhelming majority. That is fixed as fate. I shall carry this State by the biggest majority ever known, or, at least, known for many years. I have got the dead wood on this election and no mistake, and you republicans can put that fact in your pipes and smoke it. The whole State will be surprised at the result of the vote. And Hamilton County will have its eyes opened."

At 2 o'clock P.M. the silence reigning in the interior of Pearson's Opera-house was broken by the voice of the grand worthy magistrate and sublime Kihijeda of the Miami democracy calling the house to order. It seemed altogether a work of supererogation and an uncalled for waste of breath. The house was already in perfect order. The benches and chairs were ranged in orderly rows, and seemed to be very well behaved and well disposed benches and chairs. And there was nothing else in the house capable of making a noise except Sam. Cary, who sat on the stage, and two boys in a window seat, and half a dozen lonesome looking men in a corner. Two or three antique females with primordial green cotton umbrellas and preadamite sunbonnets came in and sat down behind the stove. Five boys and three darkeys got in the centre of the house, and in this manner the mighty outpouring of the people continued to outpour, until nearly 150 victims waited wearily for the snort of the untamed political guyasticutus.

Mr. Charles Shackelford, of Bloomington, Ill., was introduced and proceeded to make a mild oratorical assault upon the audience. In personal interview I found Mr. Shackelford to be a very estimable and companionable gentleman, but he is not a Columbian orator, and his most graceful gesture was made in knocking over a goblet of water upon his manuscript, thoroughly soaking it and drizzling upon the shiny bald head of an old gentleman sitting against the front of the stage below. I remember only three things he said: That 'all newspapers are either bribed or gagged;' "republicans coerce all their newspapers;" and his picture of the fate of the country if Bill Allen is not elected. The latter was dreadful. Byron's dream of darkness was not a priming to it. He worked in all the horrors of the flood; the plagues of Egypt; the slaughter of the innocents; the destruction of Sennacherib; the Sicilian Vespers; the massacre of St. Bartholomew; the Inquisition; the tortures of the Lollards; the Reign of Terror; the Modoc war; the epizootic; the grasshopper and the potato bug. He had the ghosts of departed working men squeaking and gibbering among the ruins of the mills and factories; and the pale spirits of starved Grangers wailing about the naked and barren lands. He had rapine, and murder, and rape, and hunger and death prancing about the country; and fire, and sword, and blood and things lying about loose. He got through and sat down.

Sam Cary got up and began. It is useless to attempt to tell what Cary said, because he talked for three hours incessantly, and it would take less space to tell what he didn't say. He didn't say anything that was firm and square and argumentative, anything that was not a misrepresentation of facts, perversion of truth, raising of false issues, and dodging of real, decrying great dangers and magnifying insignificant ones, false coloring, deception and fraud. To a cultivated, intelligent, thinking audience, Sam Cary's speeches are insults. He tells them coarse and indecent stories. He appeals continually to their baser emotions, passions and prejudices. He never reasons or flatters their intelligence with sound and cogent and calm argument. He tries to convince with a fallacy, draws deductions from false premises and seeks continually to make the wrong appear the right. Today his first story was of a "skunk that would stink himself to death if left alone;" then he told of a team of oxen and horses which all went to hell together, and he used the phrase "ring-boned, spavined, blind bob-tailed Presbyterian." As a specimen of his unfairness I give his manner of defining the Geghan bill; "It simply provides, my dear friends, that if you were a good Presbyterian, and got into the penitentiary, you could have allowed you the comforting services of that Church to ease you on your way to eternity, provided it was done without cost to the State. It means only this and nothing more."

He told me in the hotel that he did not read the —— papers—never looked at them; and yet the pocket of his overcoat was stuffed with them, and all through his speech he was continually shouting coarse and profane denunciations of the Commercial, Gazette, and Times. Once he hauled from his pocket a well-worn copy of the latter paper, containing a caricature devoted to Geghanism, and shook it in the faces of the audience. It seemed to affect him as a red rag affects a mad bull. He roared, and stamped, and bellowed, and cavorted up and down the stage several times, nearly tumbling over the foot-lights into the hall below, and called with rage and tears for the people to see "the indignity that this vile and villainous sheet has put upon that great and good man, Archbishop Purcell." Then he gave a side slap at the Times representative, who, utterly crushed and humiliated, was endeavoring to slink behind some of Eb. Pearson's scenery, on which was portrayed a shepherdess with a yellow dress and purple face and green pail, walking down a red lane to milk a magenta colored cow standing under a black and tan tree.

That he is a "rattling stumper" there is no doubt. Give him the right kind of an audience and he will amuse, entertain, and mislead it. His stock in trade is violent and continuous appeals to the working classes, the poor toilers, to arise against the capitalists, their oppressors and enemies. He never lets a sect, a sex, a passion, a prejudice, a vocation, a condition, a color go unsolicited. He has fraud and fallacy and misdirection for them all. He caught sight of three negroes in the audience and went for them hammer and tongs. He told them they had no friends. All the republicans wanted of them was to get their votes. Their true place is in the democratic party. The democrats are their true friends. "You think you owe your freedom to the republican party. This is not true. You owe them nothing of the sort." And he then proceeded to elucidate this startling proposition. He also said, "Abraham Lincoln is not your deliverer. He never intended to issue the Emancipation Proclamation. He did not believe in it, and was forced into issuing it. He was not its author," etc., etc. In some mysterious way the democracy are entirely responsible for the freedom of the slaves. Then, probably thinking he was delivering, in this, a little bigger dose than even an ignorant darkey could swallow, he suddenly apostrophized Lincoln with his hands to heaven in the most pious and profound manner, as the "greatest and purest of men, to whose memory generations hence the unshackled hands of freemen and children of freemen will be raised in thanksgiving and blessing;" though why posterity should be particular to raise unshackled hands to the memory of one who never set anybody free, Cary failed to explain.

He took up the statement of the Commercial in regard to the taxation of A. T. Stewart, and gave an exhibition highly edifying, of the science of artful dodging. He said, as for the State tax, he didn't mean that. He said Federal tax. And as for the duties paid by Stewart, that sum is merely an advance on his goods, which he obliges the people to pay back. "So you poor, ragged workingman over there, with only one shirt to your back, and a wife and children to support, pay the tax to support the bondholders and coupon-clippers who go scot free. You pay more tax than Stewart, with his two hundred millions, for he does not pay a cent." An audience of ignorant men, not given to thinking and reasoning, are prone to accept a statement made point-blank by a public speaker, rather than bother their heads to discuss the matter and argue it with themselves, and Cary knows it. In fact he knows every wile, and dodge, and artful sophism to catch the oi polloi, and so far is a dangerous man.

But to-day Cary labored at a disadvantage. He hadn't the right kind of an audience. He was speaking in the midst of a rich farming country. Two-thirds of the men in his little audience were well-to-do farmers, with broad fertile acres and comfortable houses and happy homes. Half of them were republicans. His insidious appeals to tax-ridden, starving workingmen, his intemperate denunciations of the bloated bondholders, his pictures of flame-ridden skies and blood-stained streets, and his deadly and dangerous communism fell upon unsympathetic ears. They laughed at his stories, a few of which are witty without being coarse, admired and wondered at his oratorical pyrotechnics, smiled incredulously at some of his statements, laughed outright at some others, believed a few, and seemed to sum up their opinion in such a feeling as I heard one man express at the door, after the trouble was over: "Well, he is the same old Sam. I heard thirty years ago, only he is a different color now, and going in another direction."

The amount of damage done the republican party, and the amount of good done the democratic party, by Sam. Cary's speech in Troy, the reader may put in his optical organ without any fear of injuring his vision.

Next Monday evening, Cary speaks among the miners at Nelsonville, and thither I go also, faithful to his fortunes. I know he wants me along, and will be so glad to see me. He will have just the kind of audience to please him, and will probably let out a reef or two more than he had in the wind in this place. F. D. M.

Daily Chronicle.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 1, 1875.

Man Worship in Massachusetts.

The odd custom of appealing to men who have been honored at least as far as they deserve, for words of especial wisdom and advice at seasons of great importance appeals to the ludicrous in cases like that which recently occurred in Massachusetts. Last year a democratic Governor was elected under circumstances that cannot possibly occur in 1875, yet the republicans of that State have entered the present campaign with fear and trembling lest they be again defeated in a commonwealth where they have 70,000 majority. A large number have been so badly frightened that they were led to support Charles Francis Adams for the gubernatorial nomination, a man who has little sympathy with republicanism and is governed by a supreme selfishness that impels him to the belief that Adams is first and last in the hearts of his countrymen. Cold-blooded and aristocratic, he is the last men whom republicans should adopt as a leader. The dire emergency which presented itself to republicans was rendered more dreadful by the nomination of a republican on the democratic ticket for Lieutenant-Governor.

A shriek from the helpless silk-stocking element of the republican party went forth immediately for advice from some quarter, and Henry Wilson, ever ready to present his views on national matters, was called on to preside at the State convention, calm the angry storm and "bid the raging tumult cease." Of course he was delighted to do so, although it has become a painful realization of late that the Vice President was growing sick-minded to a degree that indicated a decline of his mental faculties. But he was an idol of a certain element of the party that never discerns changes of that sort. Unaccustomed to a manly assertion of themselves, like stray sheep without a leader they looked upon the President of the convention for an indication as to their duty in the premises. They wanted Dr. Loring sacrificed and Henry Wilson to direct the execution. To his credit let it be said that no such command was issued. Those who were present at the National convention which renominated President Grant, but three short years ago, will remember how assiduously, patiently and effectively Dr. Loring labored at the head of the Massachusetts delegation to accomplish the nomination of Henry Wilson for the Vice Presidency. With Dr. Loring as a candidate for the gubernatorial nomination in his own State, the Vice President, who has never been accused of ingratitude though other weaknesses are exceedingly prominent, could at least do nothing but refrain from placing himself in antagonistic relations to a warm personal friend. His address to the convention then was simply a collection of abstract generalities, containing no inspiration that the anxious listeners could seize upon to the Doctor's discomfiture. But the position was ludicrous in all its bearings. The people of the country have heretofore looked to Massachusetts for bold leadership. To see the delegates of the most intelligent party in the most intelligent State of the Union eager to accept the dictum of a man in nowise their superior is certainly a disheartening spectacle. Their evident disappointment was shown by the faintness of the applause as their distinguished Solon subsided; but that disappointment is not so pitiful by half as the want of stamina displayed by the frightened wing of the party which expected so much and received so little at his hands.

News and Notes.

The inevitable division on the money question between the representatives of rag and hard money is already increasing. The Cincinnati Enquirer goes after the hard money New York democrats in lively style and calls Gov. Tilden "a servile, sneaking, selfish tool of the bondholders of the East." Let the fight go on. The triumph of the Ohio inflationists would be bitter as wormwood to the New Yorkers, while the election of the Tilden ticket in November would exasperate the Bill Allen crowd beyond measure. The contest for the ascendency in the National convention next year on the part of these elements is to be brisk and uncompromising.

It is cheaper than staying at home to pass a few days at the new Bay State House on Hanover street, Boston. With new fitting and furnishing, and mine host Brockway to provide, the Bay State will be found the cheapest and one of the most comfortable houses in the city. It costs but little trouble to inspect the house, as horse cars pass there from all sections of the city.

Mrs. Frank Arnold of Augusta had a very narrow escape from a terrible death by burning, last week. While about her domestic duties she was passing from the sitting room of her house into a sleeping room, when a kerosene lamp which she held in her hand exploded, setting her clothing on fire and burning one of her arms in such a fearful manner that the muscles and cords were laid bare. With great presence of mind she called her eldest child and sent her for help, in the meantime wrapping herself in the bed clothes, which extinguished the flames. Bits of glass from the exploded lamp flew into her face, cutting it so badly that she was scarcely recognized by her friends.

Mr. Jonathan York of Deerfield, a blind man, in climbing a ladder, got higher than he supposed, and striking his head against a beam, lost his hold and fell to the floor, injuring himself quite severely.

George L. Fox, the pantomimic clown, has paralysis of the facial muscles, brought on by using chloride of bismuth in whitening his face for the stage. This ailment, of course, totally incapacitates him from his peculiar line of acting, and he has been compelled to break all engagements. Physicians say it is improbable that he will recover the mobility of his features.

Eight Great Falls men were fined a total of $700 in the circuit court at Dover, for liquor selling.

Derry is fast becoming a peach orchard. C. Clyde & Sons will have over 1000 bushels; Mr. Klein about 500 bushels. Col. James Miltemore & Sons have on one lot of less than half an acre from 30 to 40 bushels.

The Gilford hosiery mill at Laconia has shut down and will not start up again until business revives.

The balloting in the Massachusetts republican State convention for a candidate for Governor was as follows, the first ballot being informal:

	1st	2d	3d	4th
Rice	398	451	497	576
Loring	358	332	225	99
Adams	236	253	260	249
Scat.	77	48	64	74

The lynching of Schell in Bellefontaine, Ohio, who was supposed to have cruelly outraged and murdered a young woman named Laughlin, appears in the light of subsequent evidence to have been little else than downright murder itself. The wife of Schell, it will be remembered, gave the information which led to the lynching, recounting a story which on its face was improbable in the extreme; while Schell himself, with the halter around his neck, protested his innocence and declared that his wife was in reality the murderer. One of the strongest points of evidence, outside the wife's evidence, which the mob had, was the discovery of some hair which the murdered girl held in her hand, and which was at first declared to be Schells', but the microscope now reveals the startling fact that it belongs to Mrs. Schell. In order to shield herself, while her husband was in jail and public opinion was ready to silence him forever, she had manufactured the greater part, if not all, of that horribly strange story. It is now believed that she herself committed the deed through jealousy. If this is true, there can be but little doubt that the unfortunate man's story was true, and that the murderous mob was guilty of hanging an innocent man without judge or jury, or even a pretence of investigating the question of his guilt.

Munroe C. Tuttle, of Nottingham, a base ball player, had his nose badly cut, and the bone fractured its entire length, while playing a match game.

Mr. George William Curtis is a clean man with an excellent record, and would be a hefty man in the reconstruction of our politics if he had courage to match his conscience. He is too much afraid of the first person singular and the present tense, quotes when he should affirm, and goes out of the State to say the brave words that are terribly wanted at home. If he had a little more of the old Roman virtue, which was compounded of courage and conscience in equal parts, there is no telling what he might do, nor what would become of him. —N. Y. Graphic.

The Providence Journal pays the following meritorious tribute to Alexander H. Rice: It is a great deal to say that a man is fit to be Governor of Massachusetts. It can be truly said of the republican nominee.

Mr. Valtier, who lives in Lake, on Lake Michigan, near St. Francis Seminary, states that while walking on the beach, he saw a limbless body tossed on the waves back and forth, and having no means at hand to secure it, it passed down the coast. It was afterward seen by a neighbor of Mr. Valtier near the mouth of a creek in the vicinity of his place, but by reason of the unpleasant odor no endeavor was made to secure it. Mr. Valtier afterward found a fine calf boot on the sand, with the remains of a foot and leg. It is suggested that the portions of humanity seen by these gentlemen are the remains of Donaldson.

Florida is preparing for an increase of visitors the coming winter.

If the campaign could last a month longer the republicans of Ohio would make a Brough rush of it. As it is, they are about entering the homestretch head and tail up, and L. bent for the winning post.—Dayton Journal.

Delano is the tenth member of the Cabinet who has resigned since Gen. Grant became President.

It is said that 7240 steps are required in the ascent of Kiarsarge Mountain, at North Conway.

Miss Charlotte Kelsey of Huntington, L. I., sister of the unfortunate young man who was tarred and feathered, and who is supposed to have been murdered, was to have been married in a few days. Her affianced, who lived in New York, was taken suddenly ill, and died in a few hours. On Friday, the 24th ult., she was dangerously ill at her home in Huntington. They had been engaged for more than four years.

Jottings.

Mr. Charles F. Hatch, General Manager of the Eastern Railroad, has resigned.

Mr. Jos. A. Meloon, Florist, will dispose of a large stock of ivies, geraniums, roses, carnations, etc., at auction this afternoon and evening, at M. T. Betton & Co.'s auction rooms. Most of these plants have been grown the past Summer for this very purpose, and the remainder are sold to make room in his greenhouse for the winter trade in cut flowers.

Hon. Marcellus Bufford has removed his office to the CHRONICLE counting-room and will be pleased to attend to business in his line at short notice.

The Direct cable is found to be severed in the ocean section, and the officers were enabled to discover that the break had taken place between Nova Scotia and Newfoundland. It is supposed that the cable became entangled by the anchor of one of the fishing smacks that are constantly found off the banks of Newfoundland, particularly as the cable lies in shallow water between these two points. The officers of the company believe that they will be able to take up the cable without involving much delay in their business, but are unable yet to say how long it will take to repair the damage until they get further information. It is thought the cost will not be very great. On Sept. 25th, a telegram was received from London and delivered in an office a few doors from the company's office in Broad street in the short space of four minutes, it being the fastest time on record.

Postmaster G. H. Jenness of the Rye Beach post office reports 25,000 letters sent and received during the first six weeks of its existence. The heaviest mail in any one day was 1200 letters and 500 papers.

The Eastern Railroad management show a disposition to economize in a manner that will materially advance their securities and stock in the market, if the resolution is adhered to.

John Murray, with a talented company, opens a three nights' engagement at the Temple next Monday, "Decoration Day, or the Unknown Grave," "Rip Van Winkle," and "The Man Without a Country" occupying the boards on successive nights.

Maggie Mitchell is to appear at the Temple on Wednesday evening, Oct. 13th.

MADAME RECAMIER AND HER FRIENDS. Translated from the French by Isaphene M. Luyster. This volume contains many of her letters which have heretofore been unpublished and also a more detailed account of the family life of Madame Recamier than was given to the public in her "Memoirs," which appeared some twelve years ago. Published by Roberts Brothers, Boston. For sale by J. H. Foster. Price $1.50.

Judge C. T. Garland of Texas, a Rye boy, is engaged to lecture the coming season, through Redpath's Lyceum Bureau. His subjects are "Reminiscences of a Carpet Bagger," and "Caste and Color."

Mr. Thos. P. Moses of this city has received a flattering call from South Carolina to take charge of the department of music and painting in a High School, and has signified his acceptance, and will at once proceed to make all necessary preparations to be at the post of his duties there early in December next.

The school committee assembled Wednesday evening, Sept. 29th, for organization, and on motion, Mr. Moses Howe Call, (as his parents named him) was chosen chairman, and Augustus Walden secretary. An attempt was made to elect a High School committee, and it resulted in a tie vote, five having voted for Messrs. Hatch, Bartlett and May and five for Messrs. Geo. E. Hodgdon, Moses Howe Call and Chas. C. Jones. Failing to elect, the board adjourned for two weeks. REPORTER.

Religion vs. Quinine.

In the wrappings of a mummy recently discovered in the Great Pyramid, and which cannot be less than three thousand years old, was found a piece of papyrus covered with hieroglyphics, which on being deciphered proved to be as follows:

The Government of Pharaoh will pay to bearer five ephods of grain.

(Signed) WILLIAM ALLEN,
Treasurer of Egypt.

Joseph, Register of the Treasury.

This discovery in connection with certain grain speculations is significant. It would be interesting to know if he gained his vast property by getting up a corner in wheat during the famine, or a wholesale inflation of the rye then the popular tipple among the well-to-do Egyptians.

—"If I owed a man an equinoctial storm and he wouldn't take this for the debt I'd never settle with him," was the placid remark of a Texas gentleman just after the recent flood there.

—There's a woman up in Iowa who has not had a letter from anybody in sixteen years—not even one from Vice-President Wilson!—St. Louis Rep.

—A Maine woman dreamed that her sister was run over by the railroad train, and the next morning learned that she had twins.

—"Cold streaks playing tag down my back," is the way a little Ypsilanti girl describes the approach of an ague chill.

VERY DURABLE AND CHEAP!

—Some Chicago hotel keepers who have been frequently swindled adopted the plan of advance payments. One traveller, not appreciating the change in affairs, was questioned by a clerk, who said: "You will not object to paying before you go to your room, sir?" "Certainly not; make out your bill." "For how long, sir?" "Well," says the stranger, "you may charge me for about ten minutes, on the European plan. By the end of that time I think I shall be at a hotel where the clerks wear smaller diamonds and have confidence in human nature."

—"Did my moustache trouble you?" said he to her. "No," she sighed, "I only felt a little down in the mouth."

500,000 ACRES
OF MICHIGAN LANDS,
FOR SALE!

The Lands of the Jackson, Lansing & Saginaw Railroad Company are now Offered For Sale.

They are situated along its railroad and contain large tracts of excellent FARMING and PINE Lands. The farming lands include some of the most fertile and well-watered hardwood lands in the State. They are timbered mainly with hard-maple and beech; soil black, sandy loam, and abound in springs of purest water. Michigan is one of the least indebted and most prosperous States in the Union, and its farmers have a great variety of crops and resources than any Western state. While some of the Prairie States may produce corn in great abundance, they have no other resource, and when this crop fails destitution follows, as has been the case the past year in Kansas and Nebraska. DR. QUAIN'S MAGIC CONDITION PILLS.

NEW TESTIMONIALS.

— FOR —

Weak Lungs, Constipation, Lameness, Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Paralysis, Poor Blood and Kidney Troubles.

One Box Dr. Quain's Condition Pills "Nearly Cured Where All Else Failed."

LOWELL, MASS, July 20th, 1874.

T. W. LANE:—I have used one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, am glad to state in my case they have proved all that you claim for them. I have been troubled with Bad Blood and all its consequent diseases, and have tried several kinds of Bitters and Pills without receiving much benefit, until I tried the CONDITION PILLS, and they have nearly cured where all else failed. Please send me another package as soon as convenient.

Yours, very truly,
J. D. WHITAKER.

Testimony of a Clergyman---Liver and Kidney Troubles.

EAST TILTON, N. H., April 14, 1875.

MR. LANE.—Dear Sir:—DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS are not only the best, but the very best I ever used. My wife has been troubled with Kidney Complaint many years; one-half of a package has cured her, so that she feels as well as ever. I have been troubled with Liver Complaint for many years; one-half of a package has done me more good than all the Pills I ever took. One of my neighbors took them, who has been troubled with Liver Complaint for many years; three Pills have helped him. Your Pills, where used, commend their virtues. Please send to my address one package.

REV. JOHN DAVIS.

Liver Compaint and Rheumatism so that he Could not Sleep Nights.

I was born and always lived in Pittsfield, N. H.; am now 50 years old; been troubled with Liver Complaint for 30 years, and Rheumatism for 20 years, sometimes so I could not sleep nights. I have taken one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, and they have done me more good and relieved more suffering than all the medicine I have taken during my life.

S. S. RING.
Pittsfield, N. H., Dec. 17, 1874.

Fever and Ague.

NEW BOSTON, N. H., Feb. 1, 1875.

T. W. LANE.—SIR:—Last month I sent to you for a package of DR. QUAIN'S PILLS. I had tried five so-called ague cures, and I received more benefit from five of your pills than from all the "Cures" "Cholagogues," "Quinine," &c., that I have taken in two years. I cannot recommend it too highly for diseases resulting from long standing Fever and Ague. We thank the public for its past generous patronage, and trust by strict attention to our own business to merit a continued increase of the same.

Yours, most respectfully,
MRS. C. GARLAND.

Scaly Humor Cured by One Package---Liver Complaint Helped.

NORTH SALEM, N. H., Jan. 5, 1875.

MR. LANE.—Dear Sir:—Your Pills are all they are recommended. I was troubled with a Scaly Humor on my legs; I took one package and my legs are quite smooth. My wife was troubled with Liver Complaint; she took one package and they helped her greatly.

Yours, with respect,
JOHN H. BLAKE.

From a Leading Citizen of Rindge.

WEST RINDGE, Cheshire Co., N. H.,
November 17, 1874.

THOS. W. LANE:—After taking three packages of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, I am prepared to say they are the very best, for I have tried a great many kinds, and faithfully too, believing they would help me, to no effect.—These I do believe are the very best ever made; just the kind a man needs. May they be spread all over the wide world, and Dr. Quain's name a household word.

Yours truly,
ASA STICKNEY.

Felt Better, Stronger and Gained Flesh in One Week.

AFTER TAKING DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS.

ROLLINSFORD, N. H.

THOS. W. LANE:—I commenced to take DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, and in one week I was better, felt better, and was stronger than before, and any one troubled with BAD BLOOD can find sure remedy in these Pills.

Nov. 3, 1874. L. M. YEATON.

CHESTER, N. H., Feb. 24, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have been out of health for some time, and I took a very bad cold and it left my lungs in a very weak state. I received Dr. Quain's Condition Pills and took them according to the directions, and my lungs are some better. I can recommend them to any one who is troubled with weak lungs, for they have done me good, and I think another package will cure me. Dr. Quain's Pills ought to be known throughout the world; Please send me another package as soon as convenient.

Yours, &c., CYRUS LANE.

HILLSBOROBRIDGE, Feb. 25, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—Dr. Quain's Condition Pills are the best I ever used for lameness and pain. The first dose I took removed the pain and lameness that I have been troubled with for several years. Others have used quite a number of the pills besides myself. Please send another package by return of mail.

MRS. DANIEL KIMBALL.

GILMANTON I. W., N. H., Feb. 25, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have been taking Dr. Quain's Condition Pills, and can recommend them as far ahead of common pills for constipation of the bowels; they do not have the debilitating effect of common purgatives I have taken.

MRS. J. B. GOODWIN.

NORTHWOOD CENTRE, March 1, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I saw Dr. Quain's Condition Pills highly recommended, and sent for a package, and I feel that they have done more for me than all the medicine I have taken for years, and can freely recommend them to others, as a good and sure medicine. Please send me another package as soon as possible,

MARTHA NORCROSS.

BRISTOL, N. H., Feb. 27, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have made a fair trial of those Condition Pills, and liked them very much. I think they are all they are recommended. They are a good Liver invigorator.

N. F. DANFORTH.

SALEM DEPOT, N. H., March 8, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE:—I think those pills (Dr. Quain's Condition Pills) are all they claim to be. My wife and I are both victims of Liver and Kidney Complaint, and general debility. We have taken about half that a package you sent me, and find a marked improvement in our health. I want four packages to give away in the north part of Vermont, to friends up there. I enclose $2.00, and if you can, send me four packages.

ROYAL SCOTT.

SOUTH PLATTSBURGH, N. Y., March 11, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE:—I have given Dr. Quain's Condition Pills a trial, and find I can honestly recommend them, they having materially improved the soreness and lameness with which I have been afflicted since getting upon my feet after the Paralysis of left side that I suffered last October. I desire you to send me another package as soon as convenient, as I am anxious to continue their use. Though not now a resident of New England, I have lived in Central Vermont more than fifty years, and trust Dr. Quain's Pills will not long be new in that section.

MOSES SHELDON.

THOS. W. LANE:—I have been troubled with Biliousness, Headache, and Dizziness, for a long time, and had the Dyspepsia so bad there were but few kinds of food my stomach would bear at all. I commenced taking your pills, have taken most of one package, and now enjoy eating as well as I ever did, am not troubled with dizziness unless by taking cold, and have been greatly benefited by the use of them.

A. L. PAGE.

FRANCESTOWN, March 13, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE:—I have found Dr. Quain's Condition Pills to be all you claim for them in Kidney Complaint, poor blood, and weak nerves. May they be circulated over the land and found in every household where medicine is needed. I enclose 50 cts. for another package as soon as convenient.

JOHN T. FELCH.

Better Health than for 10 Years.

CHESTER, N. H., Oct. 17, 1874.

MR. LANE:—I have taken one package of Condition Pills; find them in my case all they are recommended; have not enjoyed so good health for the last ten years as I have since I commenced taking the Condition Pills. Shall be happy to recommend them to others.

M. T. BETTON & CO., No. 16 Congress street, Main & Winchester's Block.

The Lakeside Library

is published semi-monthly, and each issue contains a COMPLETE NOVEL, by one of the great authors of the world, as Charles Reade, Dickens, Scott, Anthony Trollope, Jules Verne, etc., etc. The completion of long and important novels in a single issue, is the most unique and valuable feature yet introduced into the periodical literature of the day, and is peculiar to The Lakeside Library.

Each issue of The Library contains a Complete Novel, that would cost in the book stores, on the average, $1.50 each; yet the price of the same in The Library is only 10 cents if you buy a single copy from your newsdealer, or only 9 cents if you subscribe for a year. The whole series of 24 numbers will contain Twenty-two Complete Novels, worth about $40.00, but costs only $2.16 in The Library!

Occasionally we shall issue double numbers, to contain unusually long and important works, as "The Law and The Lady," by Wilkie Collins, and Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Seas," by Jules Verne. When this is necessary, both numbers of the story will be issued together, so that the complete work will be in the reader's hands at once. In such cases three numbers will be issued in one month. ☞ Hence all subscriptions are received for 24 numbers.

Our next issue, Nos. 14 and 15, will be a splendid Double number complete and unabridged with Eight characteristic illustrations, containing the famous

Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Seas,"

By JULES VERNE.

This wonderful book is descriptive of a voyage of 20,000 leagues under the surface of the sea! No one acquainted with Verne's peculiar and dramatic style need be told that this, his greatest book, is most intensely interesting. It lays bare the mysteries of the mighty deep—its sunken wrecks; submarine forests; the grotesque, hideous and awful creatures who dwell therein; the beautiful coral caves; its treasures of gold, silver and jewels lost in Spanish ships of olden days. Yet so quaintly, and with with such an air of candor is the story told, that you can hardly believe you are not reading a transcript from a ship's log-book. Sent by mail by the publishers, post-paid, for 25 cents.

☞ There is only one other edition published, which costs $4.00.

Subscribe now, and get all the back numbers, that your set may be complete. The entire set of 24 numbers gives you a really choice library of Standard and Famous Novels, worth in book form about $40.00, and at a cost of only $2.15, including prepayment of postage—or about the price of one single book in ordinary book form. "The Portent," for instance, costs as a Bound Book, 1.75, and is published in No 13 of The Library for only 10 cents! And "Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Seas" costs as a Bound Book $4.00, and is published in Nos. 14 and 15 of The Library for only 20 cents!

☞ Each of these books is complete and unabridged, and costs in the bookstores from $1.0 to $4.00. Order a few samples.

Price, $2.15 for 24 numbers. Sold by all news dealers. Address,

LOCAL AGENTS WANTED.

An Agent Wanted for Each Town and County in the United States.

Parties desiring to act as agents must accompany their application by a letter of recommendation as to character and responsibility from and signed by the Editor of a newspaper published in the town or county for which the agent proposes to act. The agency is to sell the bonds of the Industrial Exhibition Company.

BONDS, $20 EACH.
HALF BONDS, $10 EACH.
QUARTER BONDS, $5 EACH.

The Industrial Exhibition Company will furnish agents with circulars, etc., etc.

Each newspaper published in the town where an agent is located will, as soon as the agency is established, be given an advertisement, advertising such agency and the Company, and fully explaining the plans, purposes and objects of the Company. Such advertisement will continue in such papers as long as an agency is successfully conducted.

The Industrial Exhibition Company is the first to adopt the plan so long in use by the European governments of issuing bonds when the principal is made secure and not risked, but where there is a chance for a large premium, an investment of $20 is sure to return to the investor $21—one dollar more than cost—and the holder of a $20 Bond may obtain a premium either of $50, $100, $200, $500, $1,000, $3,000, $5,000, $10,000, $25,000 or $100,000. The interest, which is ordinarily distributed to all the bond holders pro rata, is in this loan distributed by chance. The purchaser of a bond knows he will receive back his investment, with a small rate of interest, he has a chance in the above named premiums, which are simply the distribution of interest on the whole loan.

Each bond participates in four drawings each year, until it has drawn a premium, when it is surrendered, the premium paid, and the bond cancelled.

The Industrial Exhibition Company, under a special charter granted by the State of New York, is given authority to issue these bonds. The Legislature of the State, receiving the great benefits which will arise from the success of this enterprise, have exempted all the real estate and property of the Company from taxation and assessments for five years, and has also conferred other great privileges.

Every American who understands the purposes of this Company will, of a necessity, feel a pride in aiding it to a successful termination.

Each individual who buys a bond becomes an owner and an interested party, and when he views the structure erected with his money can say, "I aided to erect in our country the most magnificent building the world has ever seen, a palace which, in truth, represents the industry, energy and mechanical genius of the American people."

The manufacturers and the inventors of America are peculiarly interested in the success of this enterprise, for the reason that it is to be their home, where all their inventions and manufactures can be exhibited and sold.

The building will contain 5,320,000 square feet of space.

Purchasers desiring Bonds before an agency is established where they reside, will communicate direct with this office, from where they can be supplied.

Parties desiring to act as agents or to purchase bonds will address

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

USE

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

A Heathen's View of Inflation.

[Cleveland Leader.]

A prominent democrat, who is quite zealous in canvassing for votes, concluded to give Wau Lee a turn on Saturday last, and accordingly dropped into the sanctum of the great washerman, and opened his batteries without ado.

"We want you to vote the democratic ticket, Mr. Lee," said he politely. "It is the grand road to wealth, and the party which fathers it is the home of the suffering poor man."

"Yes," said Wau, eagerly, "him Wau Lee welly poor man."

"We will make you rich," continued the canvasser. "With a fresh issue of greenbacks, labor will command higher prices, and the price of washing will go up."

"Welly good," said the delighted Wau. "Him alle me want. Send him up top side alle soon you please."

"I should not be surprised," said Mr. democrat, highly pleased with the progress he was making, "if in less than a year you could get $3 a dozen for your laundry work if the democratic ticket carries."

"What that!" shrieked Wau. "Say him again. Just tell me him again. Three dolle dozen! By damme I vote democratic ticket today, tomollor, yestelday—all time! I vote him body, bleeches and boots—thlee dolle doz en!—whoop!"

A republican customer dropped in a few moments afterward, and Wau commenced pouring out to him the golden prospects that shone before him.

"But he, didn't tell you all," said the re publican. "If washing goes up, everything else will."

"Whatee that?" asked the heathen.

"Why, everything else will go up with washing," said the republican. "Your rent will be doubled, soap will cost more, and rice will be fifty cents a pound——"

"Stoppee there," said Wau, while his face blanched. "You telle the truth when telle me rice go up fifty cents a pound?"

"True as anything."

"And lent costee more?"

"The rent of the room will be more beyond a doubt."

"And sloapee, and coalee, and shirtee?"

"All will go up," answered the amused republican.

"Then damme dlemoclatic ticket! Him don't gette my vlote. Him go to dlevil for alle Wau Lee. All light as it is. Wau Lee doptee want to pay more lent; him won't pay more lent, and alle go 'lebublican alle time on. Hear me?"

The Massachusetts Campaign.

The Massachusetts republicans are exceedingly fortunate in their selection of a candidate for Governor. The extensive talk of general dissatisfaction should Dr. Loring be the nominee doubtless had its effect in depriving him of many votes, although his nomination could not have induced a majority of the sensible voters of the old Bay State to re-elect a democratic opponent. Hon. Alexander H. Rice was the first choice of nearly one-half the delegates and the second choice of nearly all the remainder; and well does he deserve the honor and confidence which the convention bestowed. He is a graduate of Union College, Schenectady, N. Y., adopted a mercantile profession, has taken an active part in the movements tending to maintain and increase Boston's prosperity, was one of Boston's most excellent Mayors, and served several terms in the lower branch of Congress, discharging the duties of chairman of the Naval committee with discrimination and ability. The republicans of Massachusetts have no cause to regret his nomination, and but few of those who compose the prohibition party of the State will deem it necessary to oppose him because of his avowed sympathy with the license movement. No more consistent temperance man resides in the State than Ex-Gov. Talbot, who in his letter withdrawing from the candidacy declared it as his firm belief that the license law enacted last Winter should be given a full trial before being repealed. With such an expression from the favorite leader of the prohibitionists, opposition to Mr. Rice must necessarily be disarmed except in the case of a small and uncontrollable element, especially as the abstraction of votes from Mr. Rice would tend to the reelection of Gov. Gaston, who approved and signed the present license law.

In no case then is it possible to repeal that law, although very necessary modifications may be made when the legislature meets. The Massachusetts prohibitionists are almost to a man republicans, and unlike some of their brethren in other States do not care to live for revenge or to enroll themselves as pure mischief makers. There is more at stake in Massachusetts now than on any issue since the rebellion. With unerring discernment the honest voters of the grand old commonwealth see the danger which democratic ascendency causes, and will adopt the best means of averting it. When one of the two great parties of the Nation deliberately forswears honor and integrity for the hope of a temporary triumph, as have the democrats of Ohio and Pennsylvania, there is no occasion for vote-wasting on the part of men who have the best interests of the country at heart. To be sure, the democrats of Massachusetts and New York speak out nobly for hard money, but would next year be swamped by the inflationists should Ohio and Pennsylvania go democratic, insuring the almost united support of their brethren South and West. The plain state of the case is that in the chief republican State of the Union no phase of democratic success should be allowed. There is neither excuse nor good common sense in it. When the people of this country vote for men and disregard principle the Nation suffers. In the next Presidential campaign the National credit is to be the stake, and Massachusetts republicans cannot afford to allow the reelection of the candidate of a party which has for its allies in other and more influential States inflationists of the most dangerous class, whose success would only lead to the adoption of a more direct plan of repudiation. The sustainment of the National credit is as necessary for the preservation of the Republic as the maintenance of an undivided territory, and all movements tending to it will be encouraged by voters who appreciate integrity and honorable dealing. The Massachusetts campaign offers no opportunity for appeal to prejudice, no excuse for the abandonment of principle. It has been a matter of history that when the democratic party attains power its worst elements control it. That it shall not attain power and be thus controlled it is the duty of republicans every where to exert themselves to prevent. In no case where Massachusetts has been called on to lead in a battle for principle has there been failure to respond, nobly and heartily; and in no State will the November elections be fraught with more general interest and concern.

News and Notes.

A Philadelphian has invented, patented and built a velocipede to travel on the water. The invention was given a recent trial on the Delaware, and notwithstanding it was the first time that it has ever been put into use, is said to have been a perfect success. The machine represented somewhat an ordinary velocipede resting on three hollow, cigar shaped metallic tubes. These tubes are perfectly air tight, and are the floats upon which the contrivance rests. In the centre, reaching down into the water, is a paddle-wheel, which is propelled by the feet, in the same manner as that of an ordinary velocipede on land. It was demonstrated, it is said, that with this machine an expert velocipedist can make better time than the fastest oarsman that ever pulled a boat, and if the recent experiment is to be taken as a specimen of what can be done, imitate the dolphin and play around the bows of the fastest steamer.

The projected excursion of the New Hampshire Press Association has been postponed for this season, for the reason that a large portion of its members are unable to attend, and the number accepting will not justify the making the proposed trip.

Mr. Mills, of the Bank of California, reports that when the bank closed Mr. Ralston stated that it would pay all depositors, and from forty to sixty per cent. dividend to the stock-holders. The examination of the bank's accounts shows that Mr. Ralston was right; the liabilities which were first reported to be $13,000,000, are found to be only $10,000.000, with assets of undoubted value amounting to $14,000,000, besides the doubtful accounts. A careful examination shows that Mr. Ralston's indebtedness was latterly on account of loans to manufacturing enterprises, which were charged to his account. The bank since starting, has paid the stockholders nearly $6,000,000.

Frank Ayers of Salmon Falls, about 17 years of age, while attempting to jump on an approaching train Friday morning, was thrown under the wheels of a car, fearfully mangled and killed.

Mr. Murat Halstead presided at the monster hardmoney meeting in Cincinnati and introduced Mr. Schurz to the audience. This made the obituary with which the orator began his argument peculiarly opportune. The liberal ghost kicking the democratic corpse for not lying still must have been a peculiarly edifying spectacle to the gentleman of Mr. Halstead's sensibility. The grave and the humorous do come strangely close together in this world, and laughing and crying are Siamese twins—as the fellow thought who got married and was flogged by his mother-in-law for not taking her instead of her daughter. We can appreciate Mr. Halstead's feelings—N. Y. Graphic.

The people of Iowa have two important Constitutional amendments to vote for at their next election. One of them strikes the word "white" from the Constitution, and the other strikes out the word "male," thus authorizing woman suffrage.

Friends of Gov. Tilden assert that he ardently desires and confidently predicts the defeat of rag-money Bill in Ohio, and the consequent loss of Pennsylvania to the inflation democracy. It is said that Mr Tilden has cast the political horoscope with a result, a portion of which is quite in accordance with the reckonings of other shrewd observers of the situation. He calculates that the record of events will be something like this: republican victory in Ohio; ditto in Pennsylvania, as a logical sequence; great prestige for New York hard-money democrats, and a victory for them in the Empire State; still greater prestige of Gov. Tilden; nomination of Mr. T. as the democratic Presidential candidate in 1876 upon a hard-money platform."

A young lad, nine years of age, son of Chas. Jenness, living on the Derry road, a short distance from Manchester, had his face and head badly burned by an explosion of powder recently. It is thought that he will lose his eyesight.

Gardner Welch, an old man living with his son at Farnham, P. Q., visited his wife, who was residing with another son at Knowlton, and shortly after arriving there he shot his wife, inflicting a fatal wound. The son and his wife came into the room immediately after the shooting, whereupon he fired at his son; the son grappled with him, taking his revolver away from him, and in self-defence shot his father, killing him instantly. It seems the old lady had been residing in Farnham with a son-in-law a short time before the tragedy and wanted to visit her son at Knowlton. On hearing of the desire her husband forbade his daughter and son-in-law from carrying her over to Knowlton, notwithstanding which the son-in-law drove her over in his carriage. On leaving Farnham, the old man told his son, with whom he was living, that he was going to shoot his mother, but the threat excited little attention. The old man has borne a very hard character; has not lived with his wife for several years, and when he did live with her, used to abuse her shamefully. He had been in jail several times, and has been suspected of burning several buildings belonging to members of his family. He is a man of property and no motive is known for the crime, except his inherent ugliness. The old lady has since died; living long enough, however, to give her deposition before the proper authority as to the facts and circumstances of the case.

Recorder Hackett of New York recently sentenced Charles H. Madden, aged twenty years, to twenty years' hard labor in the State Prison, for breaking into his mother's house, stealing $8 and threatening to kill her if she made any noise.

The Amherst Cabinet says of the Milton wife-murderer, who was very loquacious before his trial: "Since the trial, and Major's recommittal to jail, and the prospect that the case will again come before a jury, he is said to be greatly disheartened, and in fact almost broken down. It is not strange that he should be worn out by the terrible mental strain upon him for so long, but it indicates that he really expected to be acquitted and his disappointment is great. He now remains silent, having nothing to say concerning his hope of freedom at another trial."

General Joseph E. Johnston contradicts the statement that he is to become the commander-in-chief of the Egyptian army. The Khedive did make him a tempting offer three or four years ago; but it was declined and has never been renewed. The General intimates that his sword is not for hire. He fights only for love, and then only against his country.

In a temperance lecture delivered in 1870 Sam Cary, Bill Allen's pal, told something of his history. At college he spreed so hard that he had to sign the pledge or leave. The temperance cause had cost him $50,000, and, notwithstanding his great love for water, he had lost $120,000 by fire. In these afflictions the thoughtful mind will see a plainly marked desire on the part of an overruling Providence to make Sam subside, but he hardeneth his neck and must expect to be cut off entirely before long unless he turns over a new leaf.

The dwelling-house and out-buildings of Warren Marshall, at Brentwood, were burned Sept. 29th. The fire was accidental. Loss $2000; insured for $875, in the Farmers' Mutual at Exeter. A subscription of $395 was taken for Mr. Marshall on the spot.

Insurance companies are taking ground against firemen's musters, on the plea that they leave communities defenceless, and interfere with the efficiency of departments while these parades are pending. During the past week some of the largest companies have sent to towns and cities around Boston, notifying the authorities that if these parades are continued they will cancel all policies held in those places, and decline paying any losses that might occur during the absence of the firemen to such musters, on the ground that the conditions under which the risks had been taken were in this manner changed. Such losses need not be adjusted by underwriters, and in thus notifying the various localities of the risks they run, the underwriters are only doing their duty to their clients owning property there.—Traveller.

The Selectmen have visited and notified every liquor seller in Great Falls that any complaints for selling made to them hereafter will be given immediate attention and the offender punished to the fullest extent.

Zebulon Davis, the oldest male citizen of Warner, died on the 27th ult., at the age of 92. He had been a Mason 71 years, and had represented the town in the legislature. He retained both physical and mental powers to a remarkable degree to the last.

Shawls at Chandler's.

[Boston Globe.]

If there be one rite of shopping more sacred than all others in the estimation of women it is the purchase of an India shawl. A bonnet is the toy a season; a cloak may outlast two winters; a costume is not likely to survive longer, and even furs fade and grow thin, and are at last thrown away, but one of these Eastern wonders of the loom outwears everything in its owner's wardrobe, and may even descend to her daughter with its beauty unchanged, and its usefulness unimpaired. Of course, anything so precious is costly, and what with the consciousness that she is about to spend a great deal of money, and that she will obtain in return something that will be of life-long use, a woman who means to buy an India shawl is preternaturally grave. She studies and compares and reflects; she puts questions without end; she tries on shawl after shawl, and she asks to have dozens of others put upon the shoulders of lay figures; she inspects every inch of the delicate fabric to be sure that it is really the faultless thing that it seems, and then at last she buys and goes away looking as if at last she knew exactly what perfect happiness was.

This pretty scene has been acted scores of times, within a day or two, at the store of Messrs. Chandler & Co., Nos. 25, 27 and 29 Winter street, and will probably be acted scores of times more before the vast stock of India shawls which they have just received is exhausted. These are not only unusually beautiful, but wonderfully cheap, having been imported from India through Messrs. Kilburn, Kershaw & Co., of London, on such terms that Chandler & Co. are enabled, while doing perfect justice to themselves, to offer them at a very great discount from the usual rates. Filled India shawls, that ordinarily could not be bought for less than $1200, can now be obtained for $800, and $100 will now procure one of the reversible shawls that once, last year, could not be bought for less than $200. The owner of the latter style has practically two shawls, since she can, by merely refolding it, present either the medallion or the river pattern to the eyes of beholders. If any one prefers a more modest price, the $80 shawls are really beautiful, and perfectly finished and matched; and there are hundred of shawls offered at $75 that would have been considered extremely cheap at $125 last year. The striped shawls, which, notwithstanding the popular belief that the old order in India never changes, giving place to new, seem to grow more elegant every year, are shown in great variety. The price of these has been so much reduced that some of them are really far cheaper than ordinary woolen shawls, and the finer kinds cost about half as much as formerly. If ever there were a time when it was a duty to buy an India shawl, that time is now, and the place is at No. 27 Winter street.

—Lo! the poor Indian cries for peace; but Lo knows a hard Winter is coming, and he feels more comfort in an army blanket than he would in a blaze of glory. The war path has its attractions; but in regular rations, a few tracts and a bottle of whiskey there is real enjoyment.—N. O. Repub.

—Fifteen minutes after the "fast mail" got in this morning, a tremendous volley of oaths came sailing into the depot after it. They had been let out by the engineer, at a crossing ten miles above, where he knocked the stuffing out of an inflated hog.—Cinn. Times.

Two Battles and Several Retreats.

War was declared at quarter before eleven on Friday forenoon at the foot of State street, and active skirmishing soon set in between William Quinn and Frank Brown, the former being a troublesome customer who is under bonds for throwing stones. Brown is a peaceably inclined man, quiet and not disposed to be combative unless imposed on. What the quarrel was about is yet a mystery, but hostilities were declared after considerable discussion, and both parties went to work as if they meant business. They struck out manfully from the shoulder, clawed at each other's faces, punched ribs, swore like a couple of cats on a nocturnal excursion, and pelted each other with rocks. Quinn rapidly got the worst of it and Brown was about to throw him into the Piscataqua river when a bystander interfered. Realizing that discretion was the better part of defeated valor, Quinn "lit out" for a more quiet neighborhood and with bloody face and frightened mien sought comfort in retreat.

Smarting under defeat and having received a reinforcement of courage, Quinn sallied forth again, and at quarter before twelve o'clock endeavored to retrieve the disaster of the hour previous, but with yet poorer results. Brown was too many guns for him and the hatchet he carried, and once more a retreat was ordered, Quinn flying up State street to Washington, followed by Brown in a frenzy of fury and with both hands full of stones, which he launched at Quinn, whom he found peering from behind a building on Washington street. Then both parties rallied to the centre of the street for more ammunition, and this time Quinn was the first to the front, letting fly a volley of stones, one of which disconcerted Brown as it took him in the hip just as he was stooping to gather up a large stone. For some reason or other Brown thought he would not pick up that stone, and seeing another coming and the vengeful Quinn following with a "little more grape" he darted across the street into a doorway, which he closed just in season to intercept a missile thrown after him. Quinn followed up the attack in such a manner as to lead the neighbors to think that the British were bombarding the Shoals, and the ill-fated door soon gave evidence of needed repair.

A large crowd had gathered during these furious battles (every body was there or thereabouts but the police) and there were quite a number of school children in the streets who were in great danger from the scattering shot fired, the effect being enhanced by the wild cries of Quinn: "Gim me my hatchet." Finally officer Hayes appeared alone and after humoring Quinn a little, started up Court street with him for the station house, but Quinn suddenly left him at the corner and went pell-mell down Pleasant street, firing his revolver over the culprit's head to alarm him and finally recapturing him on Mechanic street. Returning by way of Water street, they stopped at John Dixon's saloon to allow the prisoner to wash the blood from his face; but while the officer was conversing with a friend, Quinn ran up stairs, jumped out of a second-story window and left for Kittery, his fear taking wings as the officer started in full chase. But Quinn's wind was good and he soon forged ahead of avenging justice and was lost to view. State street became quiet and the police force started in search of the nimble Quinn. The battles scored one for each combatant, but it is extremely doubtful if the "rubber" will be fought. The additional glory which the police force have gained is too extensive to be thought of in the limit of twenty-four hours' time with due deliberation.

The "Boulevard."

Editor Chronicle; A petition is in circulation to the Mayor and Aldermen, drawn up by one of the latter, for a "Boulevard" around the North and West border of the South mill pond, beginning at Edward street and ending at Richards Avenue. The cost of this is estimated at six thousand dollars, and it is claimed that the building of it will effect a partial removal of the noxious deposits along its border and give to the city a reservoir for use in case of fire; why these last two anticipated results are kept out of sight in the petition is not apparent, but the object seems to be to attempt to kill three birds with one stone, or to ride three horses at the same time—and we think a little examination will show that a like successful result may be anticipated, viz., a total failure.

First—The "Boulevard;" and here it is pertinent to enquire if the exigencies of the city, or the benefit of any half-dozen of its citizens, required it so urgently, or to justify the expenditure of fifteen or twenty thousand dollars, which, with its masonry wall, fencing, etc., it would cost; "but," say the projectors, "we partially remove a nuisance and get a reservoir, the latter alone, at less cost than it could be built elsewhere." Let us see.

Secondly—The removal (partial, mind you) of a dangerous nuisance. This foul stuff, it is proposed to utilize—shades of MacAdams!—by making the road of! Think of it; making a road of such pestilent stuff in order to get rid of it! But supposing it could be thus used, it would lessen that evil only in a very small degree and the Fall spring tides which daily overflow that ground would destroy the road before another Summer; and now for a look at the third grand result, the Reservoir.

For this principally, it is claimed that this three thousand feet of road, I beg pardon, Boulevard, is needed. Its projectors claim that by excavating the miasmatic mud to make the road and sidewalks that the pond opposite the road will be so deepened that an effective and needed reservoir will be formed; but to do this, it is admitted that the foul mud bank which would form its Eastern wall, which is out of water half the time and which is surely if slowly sowing its typhoid seeds, must remain intact! It is only conceivable, that, a petition, the granting of which would so result, was signed only because the signers, leaving out the names which figure largely of the sagacious drawer and others who fastened upon us the $300,000 debt for the stock of the Dover Railroad, which would not sell for five cents on the dollar, had not understood or looked for themselves into it. If a reservoir in this vicinity is really needed,(?) the writer would with great humility, suggest that gates be placed under Liberty Bridge, which could be done for a trifle, and thus make of Puddle Dock a better reservoir, better located, useful and accessible on all sides instead of one, which would drown out another nuisance, second only to the South pond, and which would not choke in ten minutes any engine having the power of suction of a six months' baby.

That the scourge and danger from the pestilential millponds must be abated, all agree. The city, by its Board of Health, has pronounced them nuisances, and instead of expending twenty dollars upon the proposed project why not have them dredged out, when it is believed by many that the cost would, every dollar, be reimbursed by sale of the material; that this is valuable the writer knows by actual test made upon his farm fifteen years ago, the effect of which could be traced for years in the increasing luxuriance of the grass upon the spot on which it was spread.

It is but a few hours since this project came to the knowledge of the writer and he has hurriedly and crudely expressed his views and would make his earnest protest against granting the prayer of the petitioners, and in the hopes that some one more competent may step forward and prevent such wasteful and useless expenditure. W.

P. S. Do tell us, if it is common or en regle—French is catching—for dignitaries to hatch petitions to themselves!

City Councils.

The Mayor announced the joint standing committees on Thursday evening, and but little business was done. Leave was granted to John A. Haraden to encumber Washington street for building purposes, and the following petitions were referred: J. H. Wilson, for use of South ward-room; Gershom F. Melcher and others for sewer on Richards Avenue; E. M. Brown, for raising of sidewalk on State street; Western Union Telegraph Co., for permission to place poles for their wires on the Eastern sides of Market and Penhallow streets from Portsmouth Bridge to Commercial Alley.

The Mayor was authorized to sign the agreement between the United States and the city relating to the State street sewer.

Jottings.

Commander A. R. Yates has been ordered to command the receiving-ship Sabine.

Bishop Niles preaches at the Episcopal church to-morrow.

The expense of remodeling the Court street church was over $1600. The society is out of debt and in a prosperous condition. The worthy pastor, Rev. John A. Goss, is highly esteemed by his congregation and citizens generally.

Dr. A. P. Stevens addressed the American Academy of Dental Science at their annual meeting in Boston.

The number of shares of Eastern Railroad stock sold at the brokers' board from Sept. 1 to 28, inclusive, was 7283. The highest price was $53, Sept. 6; the lowest, $21.50, Sept. 27.

The Vesper service of the South Parish will be resumed at seven o'clock. All are welcome who go to worship.

Rev. John A. Goss will deliver an address Sunday evening, at half-past seven o'clock, in the Court street church, on the "Evils of Beer Drinking." A collection to aid in temperance work will be taken. The public are invited.

John Hennessey, a well known young reporter formerly attached to the Times, died in this city of consumption on Friday evening.

In the Circuit Court for Belknap County at Laconia, the Grand Jury has found two indictments against George Chesley, Thomas Conners and Leslie Norman, for setting fire to a house and barn in Barnstead in August. Chesley's bail has been forfeited, he having absconded. Conners and Norman pleaded not guilty.

The first meeting of the Ladies' Humane Society will be held at Mrs. Lyman's on Austin street, Monday, Oct. 4th.

The drama of "Decoration Day," with which the Metropolitan Theatre Co. open an engagement at the Temple next Monday evening, is highly spoken of. The Providence Press says: Few of those who are even frequent patrons of the drama have any adequate conception of the versatility of actors who attain celebrity in the impersonation of leading characters, and have but a vague notion of the exacting requirements of the profession. Mr. Murray has shown not only the versatility of his genius, but the careful training of a painstaking delineator of human character,—one who penetrates the motives which move the passions and feelings of mankind. As James Edwards, in the beautiful drama of "Decoration Day," he infused into the character a fire and energy, and yet a pathos and depth of feeling which moved the audience to frequent applause, in admiration of the impersonations and beauty of the diction; the pleasure of the play was undiminished to the close. He was ably supported by Miss Grace Lilian in the leading female character, who has fully imbibed the spirit of the author's meaning, and interprets it with a delicacy and feeling that at once captivates her audience; nor is the spell broken until the curtain slowly descends and shuts from view the sweet picture of a pure woman's love. Of the members of this company we can also speak with pleasure. Mr. McAvoy's rendition of the Irish soldier was a gem in itself. We bespeak for them a long-lived popularity."

Malaria-Breeding Floods.

The recent tremendous freshets which have flooded some of the most fertile low lands of the United States, have not only caused wide spread ruin and disaster, but have, as might have been expected, been followed by an unprecedented outcrop of fever and ague, bilious remittents, and other diseases of a malarial type. The sun's rays, acting upon the saturated vegetation and isolated pools left by the retiring waters, have exhaled a far-reaching miasma, which is pregnant with disease. The most reliable safeguard against it is found to be Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the present demand, for which more particularly in the West and Southwest, where the floods have been most severe, exceeds any which has existed in the past, popular as the great national remedy and preventive of malaria has always been. Never has it been put to such a crucial test, or its claims more conspicuously vindicated.

500,000 ACRES

OF MICHIGAN LANDS,

FOR SALE!

The Lands of the Jackson, Lansing & Saginaw Railroad Company are now Offered For Sale.

They are situated along its railroad and contain large tracts of excellent FARMING and PINE Lands. The farming lands include some of the most fertile and well-watered hardwood lands in the state. They are timbered mainly with hard-maple and beech; soil black, sandy loam, and abound in springs of purest water. Michigan is one of the least indebted and most prosperous States in the Union, and its farmers have a greater variety of crops and resources than any Western state. While some of the Prairie States may produce corn in great abundance, they have no other resource, and when this crop fails destitution follows, as has been the case the past year in Kansas and Nebraska. For Maps, Circulars and further information, apply to or address O. M. BARNES, Land Commissioner, Lansing, Michigan.

LOWELL, MASS, July 20th, 1874.

T. W. LANE:—I have used one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, am glad to state in my case they have proved all that you claim for them. I have been troubled with Bad Blood and all its consequent diseases, and have tried several kinds of Bitters and Pills without receiving much benefit, until I tried the CONDITION PILLS, and they have nearly cured where all else failed. Please send me another package as soon as convenient.

Yours, very truly,
J. D. WHITAKER.

Testimony of a Clergyman---Liver and Kidney Troubles.

EAST TILTON, N. H., April 14, 1875.

MR. LANE.—Dear Sir:—DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS are not only the best, but the very best I ever used. My wife has been troubled with Kidney Complant many years; one-half of a package has cured her, so that she feels as well as ever. I have been troubled with Liver Compaint for many years; one-half of a package has done me more good than all the Pills I ever took. One of my neighbors took them, who has been troubled with Liver Complaint for many years: three Pills have helped him. Your Pills, where used, commend their virtues. Please send to my address one package.

REV. JOHN DAVIS.

Liver Compaint and Rheumatism so that he Could not Sleep Nights.

I was born and always lived in Pittsfield, N. H.; am now 59 years old; been troubled with Liver Complaint for 30 years, and Rheumatism for 20 years, sometimes so I could not sleep nights. I have taken one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, and they have done me more good and relieved more suffering than all the medicine I have taken during my life. S. S. RING.

Pittsfield, N. H., Dec. 17, 1874.

Fever and Ague.

NEW BOSTON, N. H., Feb. 1, 1875.

T. W. LANE,—Sir:—Last month I sent to you for a package of DR. QUAIN'S PILLS. I had tried five so-called ague cures, and I received more benefit from five of your pills than from all the "Cures" "Cholagogues," "Quinine," &c., that I have taken in two years. I cannot recommend it too highly for diseases resulting from long standing Fever and Ague.

Yours, most respectfully,
MRS. C. GARLAND.

Scaly Humor Cured by One Package---Liver Complaint Helped.

NORTH SALEM, N. H., Jan. 5, 1875.

MR. LANE.—Dear Sir:—Your Pills are all they are recommended. I was troubled with a Scaly Humor on my legs; I took one package and my legs are quite smooth. My wife was troubled with Liver Complaint; she took one package and they helped her greatly.

Yours, with respect,
JOHN H. BLAKE.

From a Leading Citizen of Rindge.

WEST RINDGE, Cheshire Co., N. H., November 17, 1874.

THOS. W. LANE:—After taking three packages of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, I am prepared to say they are the very best, for I have tried a great many kinds, and faithfully too, believing they would help me, to no effect.—These I do believe are the very best ever made; just the kind a man needs. May they be spread all over the wide world, and Dr. Quain's name a household word.

Yours truly,
ASA STICKNEY.

Felt Better, Stronger and Gained Flesh in One Week,

AFTER TAKING DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS.

ROLLINSFORD, N. H.

THOS. W. LANE:—I commenced to take DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, and in one week I was heavier, felt better, and was stronger than before, and any one troubled with BAD BLOOD can find sure remedy in these Pills.

Nov. 3, 1874. L. M. YEATON.

CHESTER, N. H., Feb. 24, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have been out of health for some time, and I took a very bad cold and it left my lungs in a very weak state. I received Dr. Quain's Condition Pills and took them according to the directions, and my lungs are some better. I can recommend them to any one who is troubled with weak lungs, for they have done me good, and think another package will cure me. Dr. Quain's Pills ought to be known throughout the world. Please send me another package as soon as convenient.

Yours, &c., CYRUS LANE.

HILLSBOROBRIDGE, Feb. 25, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—Dr. Quain's Condition Pills are the best I ever used for lameness and pain. The first dose I took removed the pain and lameness that I have been troubled with for several years. Others have used quite a number of the pills besides myself. Please send another package by return of mail. MRS. DANIEL KIMBALL.

GILMANTON I. W., N. H., Feb. 25, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have been using Dr. Quain's Condition Pills, and can recommend them as far ahead of common pills for constipation of the bowels; they do not have the debilitating effect of common purgatives I have taken.

MRS. J. B. GOODWIN.

NORTHWOOD CENTRE, March 1, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I saw Dr. Quain's Condition Pills highly recommended, and sent for a package, and I feel that they have done more for me than all the medicine I have taken for years, and can freely recommend them to others, as a good and sure medicine. Please send me another package as soon as possible. MARTHA NORCROSS.

BRISTOL, N. H., Feb. 27, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have made a fair trial of those Condition Pills, and liked them very much. I think they are all they are recommended. They are a good Liver invigorator.

N. F. DANFORTH.

SALEM DEPOT, N. H., March 8, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE:—I think these pills (Dr. Quain's Condition Pills) are all they claim to be; my wife and I are both victims of Liver and Kidney Complaint, and general debility. We have taken about half that package you sent me, and find a marked improvement in our health. I want four packages to give away in the north part of Vermont, to friends up there. I enclose $2.00, and if you can, send me four Packages. ROYAL SCOTT.

SOUTH PLATTSBURGH, N. Y., March 11, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE:—I have given Dr. Quain's Condition Pills a trial, and can honestly recommend them, they having materially improved the soreness and lameness with which I have been afflicted since getting upon my feet after the Paralysis of left side that I suffered last October. I desire you to send me another package as soon as convenient, as I am anxious to continue their use. Though not now a resident of New England, I have lived in Central Vermont more than fifty years, and trust Dr. Quain's Pills will not long be new in that section. MOSES SHELDON.

THOS. W. LANE:—I have been troubled with Biliousness, Headache, and Dizziness, for a long time, and had the Dyspepsia so bad there were but few kinds of food my stomach would bear at all. I commenced taking your pills, have taken most of one package, and now enjoy eating as well as I ever did, am not troubled with dizziness unless by taking cold, and have been greatly benefited by the use of them. A. L. PAGE.

FRANCESTOWN, March 13, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE:—I have found Dr. Quain's Condition Pills to be all you claim for them in Kidney Complaint, a poor blood, and weak nerves. May they be circulated over the land and found in every household where medicine is needed. I enclose 50 cts. for another package as soon as convenient.

JOHN T. FELCH.

M. T. BETTON & CO., No. 16 Congress street, Main & Winchester's Block

is published semi-monthly, and each issue contains a COMPLETE NOVEL, by one of the great authors of the world, as Charles Reade, Dickens, Scott, Anthony Trollope, Jules Verne, etc., etc. The completion of long and important novels in a single issue, is the most unique and valuable feature yet introduced into the periodical literature of the day, and is peculiar to The Lakeside Library.

Each issue of The Library contains a Complete Novel, that would cost in the book stores, on the average, $1.50 each; yet the price of the same in The Library is only 10 cents if you buy a single copy from your newsdealer, or only 9 cents if you subscribe for a year. The whole series of 24 numbers will contain Twenty-two Complete Novels, worth about $40.00, but costs only $2.15 in The Library!

Occasionally we shall issue double numbers, to contain unusually long and important works, as "The Law and The Lady," by Wilkie Collins, and Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Seas," by Jules Verne. When this is necessary, both numbers of the story will be issued together, so that the complete work will be in the reader's hands at once. In such cases three numbers will be issued in one month. ☞ Hence all subscriptions are received for 24 numbers.

Our next issue, Nos. 14 and 15, will be a splendid Double number complete and unabridged with Eight characteristic illustrations, containing the famous

Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Seas,"

By JULES VERNE.

This wonderful book is descriptive of a voyage of 20,000 leagues under the surface of the sea! No one acquainted with Verne's peculiar and dramatic style need be told that this, his greatest book, is most intensely interesting. It lays bare the mysteries of the mighty deep—its sunken wrecks; submarine forests; the grotesque, hideous and awful creatures who dwell therein; the beautiful coral caves; its treasures of gold, silver and jewels lost in Spanish ships of olden days. Yet so quaintly and weirdly with such an air of candor is the story told, that you can hardly believe you are not reading a transcript from a ship's log-book. Sent by mail by the publishers, post-paid, for 25 cents.

☞ There is only one other edition published, which costs $4.00.

Subscribe now, and get all the back numbers, that your set may be complete. The entire set of 24 numbers gives you a really choice library of Standard and Famous Novels, worth in book form about $40.00, and at a cost of only $2.15, including prepayment of postage—or about the price of one single book in ordinary book form. "The Portent," for instance, costs as a Bound Book, 1.75, and is published in No 12 of The Library for only 10 cents! And "Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Seas" costs as a Bound Book $4.00, and is published in Nos. 14 and 15 of The Library for only 20 cents!

☞ Each of these books is complete and unabridged, and costs in the bookstores from $1.0 to $4.00. Order a few samples.

Each newspaper published in the town where an agent is located will, as soon as the agency is established, be given an advertisement, advertising such agency and the Company, and fully explaining the plans, purposes and objects of the Company. Such advertisement will continue in such papers as long as an agency is successfully conducted.

The Industrial Exhibition Company is the first to adopt the plan so long in use by the European governments of issuing bonds when the principal is made secure and not risked, but where there is a chance for a large premium, an investment of $20 is sure to return to the investor $21—one dollar more than cost—and the holder of a $20 Bond may obtain a premium either of $50, $100, $200, $500, $1,000, $5,000, $5,000, $10,000, $25,000 or $100,000. The interest, which is ordinarily distributed to all the bondholders pro rata, is in this loan distributed by chance. The purchaser of a bond knows he will receive back his investment, with a small rate of interest, he has a chance in the above named premiums, which are simply the distribution of interest on the whole loan.

Each bond participates in four drawings each year, until it has drawn a premium, when it is surrendered, the premium paid, and the bond cancelled.

The Industrial Exhibition Company, under a special charter granted by the State of New York, is given authority to issue these bonds. The Legislature of the State, recognizing the great benefits which will arise from the success of this enterprise, have exempted all the real estate and property of the Company from taxation and assessments for five years, and has also conferred other great privileges.

Every American who understands the purposes of this Company will, of a necessity, feel a pride in aiding it to a successful termination.

Each individual who buys a bond becomes an owner and an interested party, and when he views the structure erected with his money can say, "I aided to erect in our country the most magnificent building the world has ever seen, a palace which, in truth, represents the industry, energy and mechanical genius of the American people."

The manufacturers and the inventors of America are peculiarly interested in the success of this enterprise, for the reason that it is to be their home, where all their inventions and manufactures can be exhibited and sold.

The building will contain 5,320,000 square feet of space.

Purchasers desiring Bonds before an agency is established where they reside, will communicate direct with this office, from where they can be supplied.

Parties desiring to act as agents or to purchase bonds will address

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or Inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

USE

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

Reporting an Eclipse.

The "local" of the Biddeford Times had a hard time of it endeavoring to act as special astronomer of that paper. He says he was awakened at an early hour by the fire bell, couldn't get to sleep again for ever so long, and nothing but so momentous an occasion would have made him get up. He took the half-past four bell for half-past five, attributing the unusual darkness to the eclipse. So he turned out and many were his execrations when he got into the street and heard it strike five. Some days previous he had surveyed a spot on the top of a hill about half a mile out of town as affording a splendid view of the sun rising from the sea. Here he took up his position and had written a variety of notes on the prospect, the splendor of daybreak, etc., etc., when it dawned on him that a blamed grove of trees were in the way of his seeing what he wanted. He had to descend, and content himself with a view of sunrise behind distant woods. The sun rose in a crescent shape, and the extremities of the horns showing separately gave the appearance of a double sunrise, which at first impressed the observer with the idea he must be —— in an unscientific condition. He says he didn't see any corona, and shouldn't have known what it was if he had, that the birds didn't go to roost much, that the dim yellowish light was a fraud, and that the next solar eclipse will have to come off without his intervention. Just as things seemed to be coming to a promising head the sun retired behind a lot of clouds. His principal consolation is that the Princeton University chaps must have found their telescopes and things uncommonly cold to handle this morning. The only phenomenon he records as worthy of notice is that a number of persons were observed in the city with black smudges on their noses, etc., and this is possibly traceable to their having looked through the wrong side of bits of smoked glass, although he endeavors to give scientific reasons for it.

He and Tilda.

[W. P. Reed in the Independent.]

It was a peace warrant case, between a couple of colored gentlemen, before a Georgia Justice of the Peace. I sauntered into the court room just in time to hear Uncle Zip, the grizzle headed old darkey who was prosecuting, give his evidence from the witness stand:

In response to a question from the court, old Zip gave his trousers an extra hitch and turned loose.

"Yer see," said he, "I war a-settin' wid Tilda an' she war a-settin' wid me; an' ef de troof mus be tole, we uns war bofe uv us a-settin' tergedder."

"Go on," said the Court.

"Yassur," replied Zip. "Well, Marse Jedge, it war at Tilda's house. I war a-settin'—a-settin' on de do'; an' Tilda, she war a-settin' in de do', an' I war a settin' as I tole um afo'—"

"Never mind about that," said the Justice, impatiently. "Go on with your story."

"Yassur. Well, den, yer see, Tilda, she war a-settin' in de do'; an' I war a-settin' in de do'—"

"What happened next?" asked His Honor.

"Why, nuffin neber happened nary time," said Zip. "Yer see, we uns war bofe a-settin' tergedder"—

"Oh! bother!" interrupted the Court. "Go ahead and make out your case. Confine yourself to the question."

"Yassur. Well, ef yer mus' hab it, I war a-settin' between um"—

"Between who?" interrogated the Court.

"Between who? Oh! Yassur," continued the exasperating witness. "I got um now. Yer wants ter know jes' who I war a-settin' wid?"

"Bless your soul, yes!" said the Judge very emphatically.

"Well, Marse Court, dat sorter mixes up things. Unnerstan' me now. I'se a tellin' yer de troof. Deacon of de Baptist church I is, an' I cuddn't tell a lie ef I wanted to. Well, den Tilda war a-settin'"—

"Hold up!" cried His Honor, seizing a a ponderous law book. "You've got to stop that everlastin' settin', or I'll settle you. Tell me at once how many of you were at this woman's house."

"Dat's jes' what I'm a-comin' at," said old Zip, very calmly. "Yer see, in de fus' place, dar war Tilda"—

"Good!" remarked the Court.

"An' Tilda, yer see, war a—I mean she war in de do'. An' dar war me next. I war a—I war in de do'; an' we war bofe"—

"Dry up!" said the Court. "Now tell us where the defendant was."

"Dunno whar he war," said Zip, scratching his head doubtfully. "Spec"—

"Do you mean to say," asked the Court, with a rising inflection, "that the defendant wasn't present?"

"Sartinly," replied Zip. "Ain't got to dat pint yit awhile. I'se takin' yer back to de beginnin', more'n two yeah ago; an' as I war a tellin' yer, we war a-settin' and a-settin'—"

"Bailiff, adjourn this court!" shouted His Honor, purple with indignation, "and make these parties settle their difficulties out in the back yard."

The investigation came to an abrupt close, and the last I saw of old Zip he was complaining loudly because he couldn't tell the entire history of his case.

Daily Chronicle.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 4, 1875.

The California Fraud.

The Tribune's special says: There is a good deal of apprehension at the Navy and Treasury Departments on account of the condition of affairs in the Navy Paymaster's office in San Francisco. For several years, in consequence of political influence reaching into the Senate of the United States, an adventurer named George M. Pinney has been retained in office, as Purchasing Clerk of the Navy in California. His hold was so firm that the pay corps of the navy knew that none of their number could accept a detail to San Francisco without accepting Pinney as an office fixture. About the 1st of September he absconded in his own steamer with a female companion, leaving his family and a host of creditors. It seems that it had been a habit to demand a percentage on everything he purchased, and the number of contractors and dealers he has levied upon is astonishing. It is estimated that he has thus made for himself, in reality out of government, about $200,000. He was also a broker, a member of the Board, a director in several mines, a large property owner in the city of Oakland, and reputed to be worth nearly $2,000,000.

Paymaster Spaulding, who was the officer in charge, is understood to have defended Pinney for a short time after he left. He has now been relieved and ordered to settle his accounts. His accounts have thus far been found to be correct, and no suspicion has rested on him. An investigation, however, was ordered by the Navy Department, and it is understood that certificates of indebtedness to the amount of $800,000 have been discovered to have been hypothecated in San Francisco. These could only have been obtained by fraud. If a contractor or dealer, furnishing supplies to the paymaster, presents his accounts, it is possible he may obtain a certificate of indebtedness, if, for any reason, the paymaster cannot or does not choose to pay at the time of delivery of the articles. The contractor may take these certificates to a banker, who, recognizing the paymaster's signature, advances the money on them. A paymaster, however, may not give certificates above his ability to pay in accordance with law, and as Paymaster Spaulding, during the past three quarters, has never made balance of more than from $3,000 to $10,000, the apprehension is that the certificates were fraudulent, and perhaps forgeries.

News and Notes.

The enthusiasm of the Moscow public was so great she was perfectly overwhelmed with floral gifts, and was called before the curtain nine times during the evening.

The Toledo (Ohio) Catholic Review says: "That the Catholic vote should be cast solely for the democracy at the coming election, is undoubtedly true. It is the only possible hope to break down the school system."

F. H. Jones, conductor, and M. S. Barney, engineer of the train on the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific road, which ran over and killed Nehemiah Houghton on the 20th September, were held for trial in the Chicago Criminal Court. Bail was fixed at $3000 each. The evidence showed that the train was running twenty miles per hour, although within the city limits.

In the Supreme Court at Newport, R. I., the jury returned a verdict of wilful murder against Robert L. Casey, who killed his wife at the Portsmouth coal mine last Summer. Casey began his life sentence in the State Prison the same evening.

The temperance men in York county Friday met in convention at Limerick, and organized the York County Temperance Alliance. The attendance was good from many towns. Strong prohibition resolutions were passed and an iron-clad pledge adopted. In the evening a large mass meeting was addressed by prominent speakers.

If it is true that the Rothschilds did pay Carl Schurz for coming to this country to make speeches against rag money, the people should meet in conventions and pass votes of thanks to the Rothschilds.—Chicago Times (Ind.)

John Brown of Baltimore, in attempting to go down in a well, moved some of the stones and the entire wall caved in on him. By seizing the pump stock he broke the fall of the stones, which formed an arch over his head. The citizens rapidly assembled, and after three hours' hard work, removed the stones. During this time Brown's voice could be heard at the bottom of the well begging them to work on. Brown was rescued alive, but was very much exhausted from the cold and considerably bruised.

The Brooklyn Eagle says all the money voted Beecher by the church has been raised and paid over.

The democrats held a mass meeting in Newark, Ohio, on Thursday, at which Mr Pendleton and others spoke, and the Cincinnati Enquirer admits there were less than a thousand voters present. On the same day the republican mass meeting at Warren—addressed by Ben. Wade, Gen. Hayes, Judge Taft and others—numbered 30,000 or 35,000 persons.

The directors and stockholders of the "diamond ledge gold mine," in Peterborough, have expended $65,000 on the mine, and have come to the conclusion that digging such expensive holes don't pay, unless they can get a little gold out of them.

The Ohio election occurs on the 12th of October, the three hundred and eighty-third anniversary of the day on which Columbus landed on the Island of San Salvador and Bill Allen planted the banner of Spain upon the virgin soil of the New World, and the diapason of his voice, booming through the sounding aisles of the dim woods, scared the eagle in his eyry and, smiting the lofty summits of the Rocky Mountains, reverberated in thunder tones over the hills and valleys of the Western World. Truly in the midst of life William is not in death.—N. Y. Graphic.

Theodore Tilton delivered his lecture on the "Human Mind" at the Academy of Music in Brooklyn, Thursday evening, before an immense audience. When he appeared on the platform he was applauded and cheered for fully five minutes. At the conclusion of his lecture, Tilton was again applauded and cheered.

On Friday the injunction against the Portland and Ogdensburg Railroad was dissolved by Judges Smith and Foster. The two brought by the town of Littleton and by Redington et als, had been previously dissolved. All the suits in relation to Littleton were settled and the amount of damages compromised and harmonious relations re-established. That brought by the Attorney-General of New Hampshire was dissolved, but the road was enjoined from allowing the piling of the frame bridge over the Connecticut to remain after April 1.

The first case under the new law authorizing the confinement of habitual drunkards on the complaint of their friends is being investigated at Kentville, N. S. The prosecutor is father-in-law of the defendant, who is a well-to-do resident.

The conviction of Smith and Miller, two of the Jefferson Borden mutineers who have been on trial for some days for the murder of Corydon Trask Patterson, is in harmony with the judgment of the general public. There has been no doubt of the actual, and little of the technical, guilt of these men, and the peculiar atrocity of their crime has caused a very lively and universal desire to see it appropriately punished.

Robinson, the murderer of Mrs. Dixon, at Norwich, Conn., died in jail on the 29th ult. from the effects of poison which he swallowed at Willimantic as he saw an officer approaching to arrest him. He confessed the murder but would not reveal the circumstances of it.

The Vienna papers publish a telegram dated at Ragusa, Friday, stating that several sanguinary engegements have taken place in Herzegovina between a body of 1200 insurgents and 4000 Turks. The first was fought on the 28th ult., near Klepavitza, and two engagements followed on the 29th and 30th near Praptvizza. The insurgents lost fifty-six men and estimate the loss of Turks at 500. On account of inferior numbers the insurgents were obliged to retreat.

John Crinimins, a young man employed in W. R. Park's lumber mill at Warren Summit, met with a horrible death Thursday. His clothing was completely stripped from his body. He leaves an aged father and mother, who were dependent on him for support.

The Laconia Hotel and about two acres of land have been sold by auction to Hon. N. V. Whitehouse of Rochester, for $11,700.

Experiments recently made in California show that the soil there is well adapted to the production of coffee. Snow does not appear to have any injurious effect on the plants, which produce twenty-two shoots, while those of Europe produce but one. The soil also, unlike European countries needs no irrigation.

A man living in Essex county, Virginia, in digging a well recently, at a depth of about thirty feet came upon the trunks of large trees several feet in diameter, which were found upon examination to be cypress. Fearing the water would be injured by the wood, he determined to abandon his well, and dug another some distance off. When he had reached about the same depth he again encountered the trees; and a third attempt, at a still greater distance from the first well, again brought him in contact with this subterranean forest, the trees of great size and well preserved.

The Merrimack Cardigan Jacket Factory, situated on the plains about a mile and a half from Concord, was destroyed by fire Friday night with its contents of machinery and stock valued at $9000, and owned by a stock company; insured for $4000. The building, a two story frame, with L, was owned by other parties and worth about $2000. The fire was the work of an incendiary.

Orange Culture in Florida.

FEDERAL POINT, Fla., Sept. 30.

Editor Chronicle: I am in constant receipt of letters from Northern people, enquiring as to the profits of orange raising, expense of cultivation, the time it takes to bring a grove to full-bearing, what a poor man can do for a living while his trees are growing, etc. It is in consequence of these enquiries that I am induced to give your readers a few disjointed and roughly-told facts in regard to the business of fruit raising in Florida. Many errors have been imbibed by transient visitors, who have disseminated their opinions or "hear say" information by numberless letters, treating of Florida and its resources. Some have drawn largely upon their imaginations and greatly overrated our facilities, while others have gone as far the other way and condemned the whole State as being nearly worthless. Florida is well enough if you will take it for what it actually is; and fruit raising is no more a hazardous speculation here than elsewhere, but it is a "fair and square" occupation, subject to all the laws that govern other industries in this and other States. Success here depends upon the skill and energy of the operator, as it does in other localities, and the inducements offered by this country, beyond others, are its milder climate, cheap lands and the consequent enhancement of the property improved. The income from a full-bearing orange grove is large, and were you to attempt to purchase one of any considerable size, you might be astonished at the prices asked. Yet the price may not be above its actual value, as the grove is the result of years of care and labor, and not the accident of a day. It is estimated that a full-bearing grove will yield a yearly average of one thousand oranges to the tree. This I deem a fair estimate. The present average prices are two and one half cents each or twenty-five dollars per tree. The trees are usually set in squares 20 feet apart each way, which will give you 110 trees to the acre. At twenty-five dollars to the tree, it will make an income of $2750 to the acre.

Single trees are known to produce in one year from four to five thousand. One of my neighbors has six trees that I am confident have at this time, at least three thousand oranges on each. Another grove yields a nett income of sixteen hundred dollars $1600 per year. This grove occupies only one-half acre of ground, but is carefully attended. Another grove of six hundred trees, last year made a return of $12,000. Now to give you anything like the actual expense of producing an acre of orange trees to their full-bearing capacity would be beyond my ability. If a person should go to work ignorantly, as I did, calculating that an orange tree was not to be killed by the rudest mutilation and lack of proper care, you would probably find your orange grove to yield, mostly—expenses; but should the wiser course, of careful transplanting and careful management afterward, by having the ground properly prepared and then giving them proper cultivation, be pursued, there would be every reason to anticipate that in ten years' time the grove would pay its own expenses of cultivation. The tree is long-lived, of slow growth, forming wood almost as hard and fine-grained as box-wood, and it is seldom that it attains its full size in less than twenty years. While the trees are small, the ground between them can be planted with low growing crops, like garden vegetables, without any perceptible detriment to them, which will lessen the expense of their cultivation materially. Also some fruit may be obtained in from three to five years by budding. Five acres is as much ground as one man, with the aid of a horse, can properly cultivate when planted with fruit trees; and I think it would be better to lessen the quantity rather than extend it, and still his time would be all occupied.

In answer to the enquiry of what a poor man can do here to obtain a living; I will say that if he finds any trouble about it, it will be his own fault. Within these Southern States at the close of the late war there were liberated and turned adrift to shirk for themselves, four millions of slaves who had been kept as ignorant as possible; and when set free they possessed neither education nor one dollar's worth of anything, not even clothing. These people have managed to live and many of them have accumulated a little property and laid the foundations for comfortable homes. Now if these ignorant and guileless people can live here, starting in the most abject poverty, and accumulate property, and one of my stalwart and intelligent New Hampshire friends cannot come here and succeed, I certainly will have no pity for him. Should he come here poor and attempt to ape the dress and style of the wealthy, furnish his table with all the luxuries that the rich man can afford, and idle away his time for fear of soiling his delicate hands or bronzing his cheeks by exposure to the sun, then to be sure he cannot succeed here any better than he can in New Hampshire, where the kitchen maid thinks she must dress better than her wealthy mistress. But just strip off your coat and go to work. Every blow you strike will count two, one for the immediate returns and one for the permanent improvement made. Live as your income will allow you to do, regardless of the opinions of the shallow-pated fops you may meet, and your success issure.

The climate is warm; there is no hard, cold Winter to provide for or guard against. A log shanty furnishes sufficient, protection from the weather; expensive clothing is not required. The streams are full of fish. Cattle and hogs get their living the year round and cost their owners nothing but the care of marking and branding the calves. In a word, there are plenty of ways for a poor man to live, be he frugal and industrious. Should you take an interest in the occupation of fruit culture there will be an almost daily reward in viewing the works of the Divine Artist who has created the orange tree "a thing of beauty," with its dark green and glossy foliage brought into delightful contrast with its fragrant white blossoms or golden fruit an evergreen, with symmetrical proportions; and when viewed just before sunset with a backgrounud of glorious tinted clouds, with the placid waters of the broad St. Johns reflecting all like a mirror, you may well say your days of toil and deprivation are not without their reward, although waiting for a full crop.

I cannot refrain from calling the attention of your readers to the prosperity of the negro race here. 'Tis true—but few, if any, are wealthy; yet nearly all of them obtain sufficient food and clothing for their comfort and the cases of destitution, or any appeal to charity are few. When you contemplate the fact of their entirely destitute condition when freed, and also that their liberation transpired in a country just out of a four years' terrible war, defeated, devastated and every enterprise killed, you may then the better appreciate the negro, as well as the vast resources and recuperative ability of this Southern country. I will leave the reader to draw his own comparisons between this country and the colder Northern States, and he may, at his leisure, imagine the result of turning the like number of dependents loose in a defeated and devastated province. J. F. TENNEY.

President Grant Makes a Speech.

At the reunion of the Army of the Tennessee, at Des Moines, Iowa, Sept. 29th, the President was called up and spoke as follows:

COMRADES: It always affords me much gratification to meet my comrades in arms of ten and fourteen years ago, and to tell over again from memory the trials and hardships of those days, of hardships imposed for the preservation and perpetuation of our free institutions. We believed then, and we believe now, that we have a government worth fighting for, and if need be dying for. How many of our comrades paid the latter price for our preserved Union? Let their heroism and sacrifice be ever green in our memory. Let not the result of their sacrifices be destroyed. The Union and the free institutions for which they died, should be held more dear for their sacrifices. We will not deny to any of those who fought against us any privilege under the Government which we claim for ourselves. On the contrary, we welcome all such who come forward in good faith to help build up the waste places, and to perpetuate our institutions against all enemies, as brothers in full interest with us in a common heritage; but we are not prepared to apologize for the part we took in the war.

It is to be hoped that like trials will never again befall our country. In this sentiment no class of people can more heartily join than the soldier who submitted to the dangers, trials, and hardships of the camp and the battle-field, on whichever side he he fought. No class of people are more interested in guarding against a recurrence of those days. Let us then begin by guarding against every enemy threatening the prosperity of free republican institutions. I do not bring into this assemblage politics, certainly not partisan politics, but it is a fair subject for the soldiers, in their deliberations, to consider what may be necessary to secure the prize for which they battled. In a Republic like ours, where the citizen is the sovereign, and the official the servant, where no power is exercised, except by the will of the people, it is important that the sovereign, the people, should foster intelligence, that intelligence which is to preserve us as a free nation. If we are to have another contest in the near future of our national existence, I predict that the dividing line will not be Mason and Dixon's; but between patriotism and intelligence on the one side, and superstition, ambition, and ignorance on the other.

Now the centennial year of our national existence, I believe, is a good time to begin the work of strengthening the foundations of the structure commenced by our patriotic forefathers 100 years ago at Lexington. Let us all labor to aid all needful guarantees for the security of free thought, free speech, a free press, pure morals, unfettered religious sentiments, and of equal rights and privileges to all men irrespective of nationality, color, or religion. Encourage free schools, and resolve that not one dollar, appropriated for their support, shall be appropriated to the support of any sectarian schools. Resolve that neither the State nor Nation, nor both combined, shall support institutions of learning, other than those sufficient to afford to every child growing up in the land the opportunity of a good common school education, unmixed with sectarian, pagan, or atheistical dogmas. Leave the matter of religion to the family altar, the church, and the private school, supported entirely by private contributions. Keep the Church and the State forever separate. With these safeguards, I believe the battles which created the Army of the Tennessee will not have been fought in vain.

Old Time Chronicles, No. 128.

BY UNCLE JOSEPH.

A number of the Boston Gazette is before us. It is not very old, yet printed so long ago as to be worthy of some note as a specimen of former times. Its date is Feb. 1, 1802; so it is seventy-three years old. It was in the eleventh volume of its publication, and was published by John Russell and James Cutler, semi-weekly at four dollars per annum. The place is stated "at their office Congress street, formerly Quaker Lane." Its character is stated to be commercial and political, and there is a small figure-head, on the left of which is a full-rigged ship at sea, while on the right is a harbor and a portion of a city.

The paper is small as to size and the material on which it is printed very coarse. The first page is wholly taken up with wholesale prices current at Boston, with the duties. The doings of Congress are somewhat full, embracing nearly one-hal of the other three pages. The Senators of New Hampshire at that time were Simeon Olcutt and James Sheafe. Mr. Sheafe was of Portsmouth. Both of these gentlemen are named in this paper.

The advertisements are numerous, some of them quite spirited, as notice the following: "Jonathan and Samuel Davis on Long wharf offer 80 puncheons Tobago rum, 80 St. Croix, 30 St. Vincents, 20 Dominica and Barbadoes."

John Russel has been named as one of the proprietors of this paper. We have the impression that the Russels, one or more, did considerable in the newspaper line in Boston, but have not full particulars. Samuel Wordsworth, the author of the famous cold water song, entitled, "The Old Oaken Bucket," served at printing in Boston with a Russel. Mr. Wordsworth died about 1840, aged 50 years.

—"What's all this talk about the courrency and the five-twinties and the sivn-thirties that I hears about, Mike?" "Why, bliss your sowl, don't ye know, Pat? It manes that the Government wants to make the laborin' min work from five-twinty in the mornin', till siven-thirty in the avening." "Och, the spalpeens! May the divil choke thim!"

—A Western man visiting his brother in Danbury espied a gun on the kitchen wall. "Is that gun loaded?" he asked. "Oh, no; it is empty," replied the brother. "Empty? For God's sake load it as quick as you can, or the children will get hold of it and shoot each other!" He had read the papers.

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Jottings.

To-night John Murray is to appear at the Temple supported by Miss Grace Lillian and the Metropolitan Theatre company. It is needless for us to inform Portsmouth people in regard to Mr. Murray's merits. His abilities are well known to all theatre-goers. His "Rip Van Winkle" earned him a great deal of applause here, as well as in other cities, while his "Man without a Country" is a creation of his own from Hale's story by that name. The play "Decoration Day" is said to be a beautiful drama.

The alarm of fire Saturday afternoon was caused by a burning shed at Noble's island.

Hon. Daniel Steele, for fifty-three years a practising attorney in Goffstown, died Friday morning in his 80th year. He was a son of Gen. Steele, and was born in Peterborough, Dec. 2, 1795. He graduated at Dartmouth in 1815, Hon. W. H. Y. Hackett of this city, and Hon. Daniel M. Christie, of Dover, being now the only survivors of that class. Mr. Steele read law with James Wilson, of Keene, and was admitted to the bar October, 1819. For fifty-three years he has never missed a term of Court in Hillsboro' county, except the present term at Nashua. He was twice married, having four children, two daughters by his first and two sons by his second wife, only one of whom, James M. Steele, of Chicago, is now living. He was Representative in 1827 and State Senator in 1828 and 1829. He was the Nestor of the New Hampshire bar.

The first lecture of the People's Autumn Course will be given at the M. E. Church this Monday evening by Prof. G. S. Chadbourne of Boston. Subject: "The Controlling Force."

If Moses How Call is the name of the young gentleman who is a member of the School Committee from Ward Six who was balloted for as Howe Call at the municipal election; if the name of an estimable gentleman from the same Ward who was balloted for and declared elected a member of the Common Council as Wm. J. Laighton, is William J. Laighton; and if Ex-Gov. Weston's action in the Natt Head case is just and according to law—by what right does Mr. Call hold a seat in the School Committee and Mr. Laighton in the Common Council?

THE SHINING RIVER! A New Collection of Sabbath School songs, by H. S. & W. O. Perkins. Price 35 Cents. Here are about 160 new, fresh and bright sacred pieces for the children and their teachers. For sale by D. H. Montgomery.

The Times says Mr. Robert Anderson, the faithful and polite watchman at the navy yard landing, foot of Daniel street, assisted an expressman in carrying some heavy articles down the brow on to the floating stage of the landing. A child's hat floating on the water caught his eye, and looking into the deep water of the dock he saw, far down, a small boy struggling for life. Without a moment's hesitation the brave fellow made a dive for the child, and brought him quickly to the surface. What was his astonishment to find that the child he had so bravely rescued was his own boy. The little fellow was soon restored to consciousness, and is now doing well. The boy is only five years old, and went down to fish from the steps of the public landing on the opposite side of the dock; losing his balance he fell in, unobserved by any one, and would undoubtedly have been drowned but for the prompt action of his father, who did not know the little fellow was out of the house.

Editor Chroicele: To the article by "W" in the CHRONICLE of the 2d the only answer needed is to say, the pun in the "P. S." never went worth a cent. REVILO.

—My father was an old gentlemen who was very regular in his habits. Every evening it was his custom to take a stroll after tea to visit some old friends by the name of Tate, who lived in the next street. Before leaving the house he would open the door of the dining-room where we used to sit, and would say aloud, "Only going down to Tate's." Now it happened one evening that Polly's cage door was left open. We sometimes let him walk about the room, and could not think where he had gone. We all set to work and searched the house high and low; no Polly could we find. So at last my father left, as usual, to pay his visit to our neighbors, leaving us still looking for our pet. What was his surprise upon turning the corner of the street to see Polly quietly waddling down the middle of the road, "Why, Polly," said he, "where are you going?" Upon which Master Poll cocked his impudent little head on one side, and looked up and said, "Only going down to Tate's."—Liberal Christian.

500,000 ACRES

OF MICHIGAN LANDS,

FOR SALE!

The Lands of the Jackson, Lansing & Saginaw Railroad Company are now Offered For Sale.

They are situated along its railroad and contain large belts of excellent farming and PINE lands. The farming lands include some of the most fertile and well-watered hardwood lands in the State. They are timbered mainly with hard-maple and beech; soil black, sandy loam, and abound in springs of purest water. Michigan is one of the least indebted and most prosperous States in the Union, and its farmers have a greater variety of crops and resources than any Western state. While some of the Prairie States may produce corn in great abundance, they have no other resources, and when this crop fails destitution follows, as has been the case the past year in Kansas and Nebraska. For Maps, Circulars and further information, apply to or address, O. M. BARNES, Land Commissioner, Lansing, Michigan.

DR. QUAIN'S MAGIC CONDITION PILLS.

NEW TESTIMONIALS.

FOR

Weak Lungs, Constipation, Lameness, Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Paralysis, Poor Blood and Kidney Troubles.

One Box Dr. Quain's Condition Pills "Nearly Cured Where All Else Failed."

LOWELL, MASS, July 20th, 1874.

T. W. LANE:—I have used one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, am glad to state in my case they have proved all that you claim for them. I have been troubled with Bad Blood and all its consequent diseases, and have tried several kinds of Bitters and Pills without receiving much benefit, until I tried the CONDITION PILLS, and they have nearly cured where all else failed. Please send me another package as soon as convenient.

Yours, very truly,
J. D. WHITAKER.

Testimony of a Clergyman---Liver and Kidney Troubles.

EAST TILTON, N. H., April 14, 1875.

MR. LANE.—Dear Sir:—Dr. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS are not only the best, but the very best I ever used. My wife has been troubled with Kidney Complaint many years; one half of a package has cured her, so that she feels as well as ever. I have been troubled with Liver Complaint for many years; one-half of a package has done me more good than all the Pills I ever took. One of my neighbors took them, who has been troubled with Liver Complaint for many years; three Pills have helped him. Your Pills, where used, commend their virtues. Please send to my address one package.

REV. JOHN DAVIS.

Liver Compaint and Rheumatism so that he Could not Sleep Nights.

I was born and always lived in Pittsfield, N. H.; am now 50 years old; been troubled with Liver Complaint for 30 years, and Rheumatism for 20 years, sometimes so I could not sleep nights. I have taken one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, and they have done me more good and relieved more suffering than all the medicine I have taken during my life. S. S. RING.

Pittsfield, N. H., Dec. 17, 1874.

Fever and Ague.

NEW BOSTON, N. H., Feb. 1, 1875.

T. W. LANE,—Sir:—Last month I sent to you for a package of DR. QUAIN'S PILLS. I had tried five so-called ague cures, and I received more benefit from five of your pills than from all the "Cures" "Cholagogues," "Quinines," &c., that I have taken in two years. I cannot recommend it too highly for diseases resulting from long standing Fever and Ague.

Yours, most respectfully,
MRS. C. GARLAND.

Scaly Humor Cured by One Package---Liver Complaint Helped.

NORTH SALEM, N. H., Jan. 5, 1875.

MR. LANE.—Dear Sir:—Your Pills are all they are recommended. I was troubled with a Scaly Humor on my legs; I took one package and my legs are quite smooth. My wife was troubled with Liver Complaint; she took one package and they helped her greatly.

Yours, with respect,
JOHN H. BLAKE.

From a Leading Citizen of Rindge.

WEST RINDGE, Cheshire Co., N. H., November 17, 1874.

THOS. W. LANE:—After taking three packages of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, I am prepared to say they are the very best, for I have tried a great many kinds, and faithfully too, believing they would help me, to no effect.—These I do believe are the very best ever made; just the kind a man needs. May they be spread all over the wide world, and Dr. Quain's name a household word.

Yours truly,
ASA STICKNEY.

Felt Better, Stronger and Gained Flesh in One Week,

AFTER TAKING DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS,

ROLLINSFORD, N. H.

THOS. W. LANE:—I commenced to take DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, and in one week I was heavier, felt better, and was stronger than before, and any one troubled with BAD BLOOD can find sure remedy in these Pills.

Nov. 3, 1874. L. M. YEATON.

CHESTER, N. H., Feb. 24, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have been out of health for some time, and I took a very bad cold and it left my lungs in a very weak state. I received Dr. Quain's Condition Pills and took them according to the directions, and my lungs are some better. I can recommend them to any one who is troubled with weak lungs, for they have done me good, and I think another package will cure me. Dr. Quain's Pills ought to be known throughout the world. Please send me another package as soon as convenient.

Yours, &c., CYRUS LANE.

HILLSBOROBRIDGE, Feb. 23, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—Dr. Quain's Condition Pills are the best I ever used for the diseases named. The first dose I took removed the pain and lameness that I have been troubled with for several years. Others have used quite a number of the Pills and found relief. Please send another package by return of mail. MRS. DANIEL KIMBALL.

GILMANTON I. W., N. H., Feb. 25, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have been taking Dr. Quain's Condition Pills, and can recommend them as far ahead of common pills for constipation of the bowels; they do not have the debilitating effect of common purgatives I have taken.

MRS. J. B. GOODWIN.

NORTHWOOD CENTRE, March 1, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I saw Dr. Quain's Condition Pills highly recommended, and sent for a package, and I feel that they have done more for me than all the medicine I have taken for years, and can freely recommend them to others, as a good and sure medicine. Please send me another package as soon as possible. MARTHA NORCROSS.

BRISTOL, N. H., Feb. 27, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have made a fair trial of these Condition Pills, and liked them very much. I think they are all they are recommended. They are a good Liver invigorator.

N. F. DANFORTH.

SALEM DEPOT, N. H., March 8, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE:—I think these pills (Dr. Quain's Condition Pills) are all they claim to be. My wife and I are both victims of Liver and Kidney Complaint, and general debility. We have taken about half that package you sent me, and find a marked improvement in our health. I want four packages to give away in the north part of Vermont, to friends up there. I enclose $2.00, and if you can, send me four Packages. ROYAL SCOTT.

SOUTH PLATTSBURGH, N. Y., March 11, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE:—I have given Dr. Quain's Condition Pills a trial, and find I can honestly recommend them, they having materially improved the soreness and lameness with which I have been afflicted since getting upon my feet after the paralysis of left side that I suffered last October. I desire you to send me another package as soon as convenient, as I am anxious to continue their use. Though not now a resident of New England, I have lived in Central Vermont more than fifty years, and trust Dr. Quain's Pills will not long be near in that section. MOSES SHELDON.

THOS. W. LANE:—I have been troubled with Biliousness, Headache, and Dizziness, for a long time, and had the Dyspepsia so bad there were but few kinds of food my stomach would bear at all. I commenced taking your pills, have taken most of one package, and now enjoy eating as well as I ever did, am not troubled with dizziness unless by taking cold, and have been greatly benefited by the use of them. A. L. PAGE.

FRANCESTOWN, March 13, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE:—I have found Dr. Quain's Condition Pills to be all you claim for them in Kidney Complaint, poor blood, and weak nerves. May they be circulated over the land and found in every household where medicine is needed. I enclose 50 cts. for another package as soon as convenient.

JOHN T. FELCH.

Better Health than for 10 Years.

CHESTER, N. H., Oct. 17, 1874.

MR. LANE:—I have taken one package of Condition Pills; find them in my case all they are recommended; have not enjoyed so good health for the last ten years as I have since I commenced taking the Condition Pills. Shall be happy to recommend them to others. WILLIAM H. FELLOWS.

The Lakeside Library

is published semi-monthly, and each issue contains a COMPLETE NOVEL, by one of the great authors of the world, as Charles Reade, Dickens, Scott, Anthony Trollope, Jules Verne, etc., etc. The completion of long and important novels in a single issue, is the most unique and valuable feature yet introduced into the periodical literature of the day, and is peculiar to The Lakeside Library.

Each issue of The Library contains a Complete Novel, that would cost in the book stores, on the average, $1.50 each; yet the price of the same in The Library is only 10 cents if you buy a single copy from your newsdealer, or only 9 cents if you subscribe for a year. The whole series of 24 numbers will contain Twenty-two Complete Novels, worth about $40.00, but costs only $2.15 in The Library!

Occasionally we shall issue double numbers, to contain unusually long and important works, as "The Law and The Lady," by Wilkie Collins, and Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Seas," by Jules Verne. When this is necessary, both numbers of the story will be issued together, so that the complete work will be in the reader's hands at once. In such cases three numbers will be issued in one month. ☞ Hence all subscriptions are received for 24 numbers.

Our next issue, Nos. 14 and 15, will be a splendid Double number complete and unabridged with Eight characteristic illustrations, containing the famous

Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Seas,"
By JULES VERNE.

This wonderful book is descriptive of a voyage of 20,000 leagues under the surface of the sea! No one acquainted with Verne's peculiar and dramatic style need be told that this, the greatest book, is most intensely interesting. It lays bare the mysteries of the mighty deep—its sunken wrecks; submarine forests; the grotesque, hideous and awful creatures who dwell therein; the beautiful coral cves; its treasures of gold, silver and jewels lost in Spanish ships of olden days. Yet so quaintly, and with with such an air of candor is the story told, that you can hardly believe you are not reading a transcript from a ship's log-book. Sent by mail by the publishers, post-paid, for 25 cents.

☞ There is only one other edition published, which costs $4.00.

Subscribe now, and get all the back numbers, that your set may be complete. The entire set of 24 numbers gives you a really choice library of Standard and Famous Novels, worth in book form about $40.00, and at a cost of only $2.15, including prepayment of postage—or about the price of one single book in ordinary book form. "The Portent," for instance, costs as a Bound Book, 1.75, and is published in No. 12 of The Library for only 10 cents! And "Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Seas" costs as a Bound Book $4.00, and is published in Nos. 14 and 15 of The Library for only 20 cents!

☞ Each of these books is complete and unabridged, and costs in the bookstores from $1.00 to $4.00. Order a few samples.

Price, $2.15 for 24 numbers. Sold by all news dealers. Address,

LOCAL AGENTS
WANTED.
An Agent Wanted for Each Town and County in the United States.

Parties desiring to act as agents must accompany their application by a letter of recommendation as to character and responsibility from and signed by the Editor of a newspaper published in the town or county for which the agent proposes to act. The agency is to sell the bonds of the Industrial Exhibition Company.

BONDS, $20 EACH.
HALF BONDS, $10 EACH.
QUARTER BONDS, $5 EACH.

The Industrial Exhibition Company will furnish agents with circulars, etc., etc.

Each newspaper published in the town where an agent is located will, as soon as the agency is established, be given an advertisement, advertising such agency and the Company, and fully explaining the plans, purposes and objects of the Company. Such advertisement will continue in such papers as long as an agency is successfully conducted.

The Industrial Exhibition Company is the first to adopt the plan so long in use by the European governments of issuing bonds when the principal is made secure and not risked, but where there is a chance for a large premium, an investment of $20 is sure to return to the investor $21—one dollar more than cost—and the holder of a $20 Bond may obtain a premium either of $50, $100, $200, $500, $1,000, $5,000, $5,000, $10,000, $25,000 or $100,000. The interest, which is ordinarily distributed to all the bond holders pro rata, is in this loan distributed by chance. The purchaser of a bond knows he will receive back his investment, with a small rate of interest, he has a chance in the above named premiums, which are simply the distribution of interest on the whole loan.

Each bond participates in four drawings each year, until it has drawn a premium, when it is surrendered, the premium paid, and the bond cancelled.

The Industrial Exhibition Company, under a special charter granted by the State of New York, is given authority to issue these bonds. The Legislature of the State, recognizing the great benefits which will arise from the success of this enterprise, have exempted all the real estate and property of the Company from taxation and assessments for five years, and has also conferred other great privileges.

Every American who understands the purposes of this Company will, of a necessity, feel a pride in aiding it to a successful termination.

Each individual who buys a bond becomes an owner and an interested party, and when he views the structure erected with his money can say, "I aided to erect in our country the most magnificent building the world has ever seen, a palace which, in truth, represents the industry, energy and mechanical genius of the American people."

The manufacturers and the inventors of America are peculiarly interested in the success of this enterprise, for the reason that it is to be their home, where all their inventions and manufactures can be exhibited and sold.

The building will contain 5,320,000 square feet of space.

Purchasers desiring Bonds before an agency is established where they reside, will communicate direct with this office, from where they can be supplied.

Parties desiring to act as agents or to purchase bonds will address

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

s no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,
Croup,
Diphtheria,
Asthma, etc.,
USE
Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

Hovering on the Border.

[N. Y. Sun.]

Two weeks ago it was rumored that two noted refugees from New York, ex-Senator Harry Genet and ex-Senator Tom Fields, were residing in Montreal. About the same time, a telegram was sent to the Chief of Police of New York by a responsible officer—a Deputy-Sheriff of Saratoga county—offering to secure these refugees if they were wanted. No notice being taken of this despatch, the officer communicated with the District Attorney, who replied, asking for further information. Further information was sent, but no further response was received from the District Attorney. Last week the Chief of Police addressed the District Attorney of New York by letter, informing him of the presence in Montreal of these two men, if wanted, and offering to produce them without fee or reward. No reply has yet been received. These two fugitives are charged with robbing the city and county of New York of millions of dollars. Both are under conviction of forgery, having escaped only before sentence was pronounced against him.

When the hegira of the Tammany thieves occurred, Genet and Fields fled to Europe, settling down, after some wandering about, in Belgium, where, because of the non-existence of an extradition treaty, they felt secure. For a time they seemed to enjoy themselves in their self-imposed exile. They had a plenty of money and no business. They were gentlemen of magnificent leisure. They ate, drank, and kept up a high old time generally. The gaming table found in them pretty steady and liberal patrons. Draw poker was introduced by them to the notice of the Belgians, and for a season was favorably received, and served the professors a good turn in making good the losses they sustained at other games with which they were less familiar. But they did not succeed in popularizing the noble game of draw in Belgium, and ultimately had to abandon it, excepting when an occasional American would chance along. However, being thoroughbreds, in the New York sense, and rare sports, neither Fields nor Genet could abstain from gambling. Especially Prince Hal would allow no opportunity of investing in chances to pass. Faro, rouge-et-noir, roulette, or any other game was sure to attract him so long as he had a stake, and thus it happened that presently he had no stake left. Whatever plunder he had succeeded in carrying away from New York soon found its way into the tills of the unrecognized banks, whose counters are usually covered with green cloth. Tom Fields, in this respect, was rather more shrewd than Prince Hal. Being naturally of a less liberal nature, he played a less liberal game than Harry, and never ventured his last dollar. Still he is reputed to have lost heavily while in Europe; so heavily, in fact, that, when Genet talked of returning to the borders of his native land, that he might at least be near his friends and within reach of pecuniary assistance, Fields concluded that he, also, might find it profitable to withdraw from the snares and temptations which were so surely impoverishing him. And so it happened that last Spring the two appeared in Montreal.

Coming to Canada was a bold stroke for men situated as Fields and Genet are. Their extradition from Canada, if desired by the officers of the Government they are charged with having defrauded, would be an easy matter under existing treaty regulations. In Genet's case the step was exceptionally hazardous, as the mere production of the record of his conviction in New York would probably be sufficient to secure his extradition, when the courts would at once be asked to pass sentence upon him. But as Fields has not yet been tried, he doubtless felt more secure, as before granting his extradition the Canadian authorities would doubtless require the evidence of his guilt, which might not be readily procured. This notable difference in the condition of the two men before the law induced a wide difference in their conduct on arriving in Montreal. Fields came with considerable boldness. He hired an elegant house in the fashionable quarter of the city, had his furniture shipped from New York, brought his family on, trotted out his own horses and carriages, and set himself up in style as a retired gentleman under the thin disguise of Capt. Fields, as he appears in the City Directory. His residence is a three-story attic and basement stone house, 83 Union avenue, diagonally opposite the residence of the Anglican Bishop of Montreal, and in the midst of a most select and fastidious neighborhood. The house is furnished throughout in the most costly style, the mirrors, carpets, curtains, and ornaments being pronounced exceptionally elegant. The family consists of the distinguished refugee, his wife and two daughters, with a full retinue of servants. The ladies ride out daily in their carriage, occasionally accompanied by the master of the house, though for some reason Mr. Fields has not been seen out of his house for several days past. I have been unable to learn where the family attend church, nor can I ascertain that they are received in Montreal society.

Until quite recently Fields has been in the habit of frequenting the hotels and one or two noted saloons of the city daily. He has been identified with a set of fast men of the town, jolly, jovial good fellows, who play a little game of an evening on the sly in rooms over the saloon known as the Turf House on McGill street. But since the publication in the Saratoga papers above alluded to, he has carefully avoided showing himself in public. His friends who come here properly accredited have no trouble in seeing him at his residence, but to all others he is temporarily invisible. Strangers calling at the house are held in waiting until their credentials are passed and a satisfactory statement of their mission is made to the usher, who confers with them through an opening of the door about six inches wide, its further opening and a forced entrance being prevented by a strong chain, doubtless provided to prevent a surprise.

Prince Hal is more cautious than Fields. He never ventured to show himself by daylight, and at no time in any public place. He is literally unknown in Montreal. It is probable that he goes by an assumed name, but among the knowing ones and those admitted to his acquaintance he is known as Harry. He has been residing during the summer at Vaudruile, a little village on the Ottawa river, fifty miles from Montreal, which is quite a summer resort for wealthy citizens of the town. Mr. F. X. Archambault, a lawyer of considerable prominence, and the especial advocate of the gambling fraternity, who has also the reputation of being quite a sporting man himself, has a summer residence at Vaudruile, and is reported to be Genet's particular friend and adviser. But Harry finds it irksome remaining alone in a dull French Canadian village, far away from routes of travel, and outside the channels of communication with the world at large. For this reason he ventures away occasionally, but always with caution. He comes to Montreal at times, but generally in the evening, stopping either at some obscure tavern or at the house of a friend—probably Mr. Fields. On these occasions he habitually gives way to his appetites, and the night is spent between wine, women, and cards. Last week all the sporting men of Montreal went up to Ottawa to attend the Provincial Fair, and Harry followed. He had, I am told, a glorious time.

News and Notes.

The full official vote for member of Congress in the Second District of California was: Page, republican, 13,624; Larkin, democrat, 12,329; Tuttle, independent, 5,414.

The kidnapping of one child in New York recently, and the attempt to abduct another a few days since, have startled the public into a conviction that the success of the Charlie Ross affair has inaugurated a new crime in their midst. The child, Josey Sullivan, who three weeks ago was stolen from his home, has not been heard of since, and there are apprehensions of another Ross mystery. The only work toward tracing the boy during the first five days was done by Mr. and Mrs. Sullivan, but since that time the police have been hard at work upon the case. The other child who came so near sharing his fate was a little five-year-old girl, whose mother was shopping in a Broadway establishment, and who, while the latter's attention was directed elsewhere, was successfully taken out of the store and hurried into a stage by a woman. Missing her child the lady rushed out of the street door just in time to see her being driven off in a stage. Her cries attracted the attention of the driver, the stage was stopped and the little one recovered. But a moment later and the child would have been separated from the mother, not to have been recovered until a reward had been offered. There is no doubt but that the success of the Ross abduction has opened up a profitable field of crime, and parents of children cannot be too careful of their little ones.

Paul True of Salisbury, aged 90 years, was found dead in the field of John M. Andrews, at Warren, on Sunday afternoon. He had been dead about 48 hours. Money, etc., in his pockets, amounting to $400, was undisturbed.

When the Sells Brothers' circus was exhibiting at Jackson, Mich., on the 4th ult., William Doyle, an amateur balloonist, engaged for the occasion, went up in a hot-air balloon, which descended upon the embankment of a railroad track, near a pond. When about 40 feet from the earth the aeronaut jumped from the basket, fell into the pond, sank from sight, and did not rise again. Some persons employed in a brewery near by got into a boat and went to his assistance. One of them dived down and brought the body up. Physicians were on hand, and every effort was made to resuscitate the drowned man without avail.

The Swedish steamer L. J. Bager, running between Lubeck and Copenhagen, was burned in the Baltic. Twenty-four passengers and eleven of the crew perished. The steamer was small.

They have been trying to start a Greenback Club out in Terre Haute, Ind. The canvasser was making some headway, among the needy class, by diligently telling them that all they wanted was more money, when the Gazette put a very heavy damper on his arguments by announcing that the directors of the National State Bank of the city were deliberating a proposition to reduce their circulation $100,000, since that amount of money and more was lying idle in the vaults, on which they had to pay taxes. "If there is more money in the bank now than the people can use, what is the Greenback Club shouting more money for?" This conundrum remains unanswered.

The Grand Jury has failed to find an indictment against Sarah M. Wilson, of Lebanon, (who poisoned Mrs. Kendrick,) on account of her deranged mental condition, and she will be sent to the insane asylum.

The debt statement for September shows a decrease for the month of $3,342,663, and for the first quarter of the fiscal year of $6,222,499. The decrease for September, 1874, was less than half a million dollars, and for the first quarter of the last fiscal year, $8,345,045. The comparison shows a gain of nearly three million dollars for the current year, and is therefore extremely favorable.

This is the biggest fever and ague year that was ever heard of. Every place has it and almost everybody. Hartford, aged 280 years, has it this Fall for the first time in her history. Some of our highest suburbs are suffering from it. We suppose the republican party is responsible.—Conn. Times.

Ex-Senator Willard Warner of Alabama, in a letter to Senator John Sherman, says that from the moment of Gen. Hayes' nomination in Ohio he has earnestly hoped for his election because the honor of the nation and the prosperity of the whole people are at stake in the contest. He thinks the election of Allen will carry the question of inflation into the Presidential contest, and adds: "If inflation is the final result, then we shall have a period of wild speculation to be certainly followed by another and deeper depression than the present, out of which there will be no road except along the one we are now slowly travelling toward specie resumption, and every step which we have painfully taken in this direction will have to be retrodden, and with sorer feet and more tired limbs than now. If, however, Ohio shall elect Gen. Hayes, then such election will be accepted throughout the country and the world as a settlement of the financial issue, and as a decision that gold shall remain as our standard of value, and that all the nation's promises shall be honestly kept. The immediate result will be a restoration of confidence, the outflowing of hoarded money, and a rapid quickening of all our industrial activities."

T Tilton says in his new lecture that "the object of life is the development of human character." We fear Theodore has missed the object.—Lowell Courier.

A double dwelling-house, partly brick, on the old Smith place, one mile from East Alstead meeting-house, was burned at midnight of Saturday. The fire caught from ashes. It was owned and occupied by a widow, Mrs. Freeman. The furniture was partly saved. Loss about $1500; not insured.

A despatch from Los Cruces, New Mexico, states that seventy-nine houses were destroyed there by waterspouts, Sept. 11th, making a loss of $150,000; but no lives were lost.

The man who spoke of the Indians as a dying race should emigrate. In 1864 they cost the country $2,620,975 97; last year $8,032,652 93 was required to support them. Either the funeral expenses are inconceivably high or the man erred.—Prov. Press.

The famous mare Goldsmith Maid fell dead while trotting on the Elmira, N. Y., track, Saturday, just after the start in the first heat. William Lovell, her owner, had recently been offered $25,000 for her.

A son of Brigham Young is studying polygamy in Paris.

Joseph G. Edgerly, of Manchester has been elected Superintendent of Schools in Fitchburg, at an annual salary of $1800.

Florida guarantees a million pineapples this season.

It is rumored that Secretary Robeson will resign his portfolio before the meeting of the next Congress.

The Bank of California is on its feet, paying specie over the counter.

The farmers about Rochester have raised a very large crop of corn this year.

A general reduction of wages took effect in all the mills of Laconia, Saturday.

—A citizen of Toledo, in the ordinary current of business, became possessor of the note of a German saloon keeper. The note becoming due, he took it to the party and presented it for payment. The man was not prepared to liquidate his obligation, and asked for an extension of time. This being granted, and the conditions settled properly, he was turning to leave when the German said: "Shoost vait von leedle whiles, und I gifs you ein glass goot peer."

"No I thank you, I don't drink beer," was the reply.

"Vell, den, I gifs you veeskees thot is petter as so mooch."

"No, thank you, I don't drink whiskey."

"Sho! den, I know how I fix you, I haf goot vines," jerking down a bottle with a flourish.

Again the quiet "No, thank you, I don't drink wine."

"Vot! you don trinks noddings; vell I gifs you ein goot shegar."

Once more, "No, thank you, I don't smoke.

"Mein Gott," exclaimed the Dutchman, throwing up both hands, "no peers, no veeskeys, no vines, no dobacco, no noddings—vot you live on, anyways—botatoes, eh?"—Toledo Blade.

—The Scientific American says if a bottle of the oil of pennyroyal is left uncorked in a room at night not a mosquito or any other bloodsucker will be found there in the morning. Mix potash with powdered meal and throw it into the rat holes of a cellar, and the rats will depart. If a rat or a mouse gets into your pantry, stuff into his hole a rag saturated with a solution of Cayenne pepper, and no rat or mouse will touch the rag for the purpose of opening communication with a depot of supplies.

—A hack horse fell down on Gratiot avenue, and among the crowd which gathered were several negroes, one of whom sought to boss the job of getting the horse up again. He was doing a good deal of talking when a friend and a brother walked up and demanded:

"See heah, who is you?"

"I is Stephen Baker, sah," was the dignified reply.

"And was you in de war?"

"War? war?"

"Yes, sah, was you in de war?"

"No, sah."

"Well, den, what business you got bossing around here? You jess stand back and let somebody who was in de war do de talking! Now den, folks, lift up on dat hoss an' keep cl'ar of his hind heels!"

The one who was not in the war meekly sat down on the curbstone.—Detroit Free Press.

—A Boston family has a remarkably intelligent parrot, which repeats nearly everything it hears, and which some bad boys have taught to swear awfully. It finally did little talking, except of a profane character, and, to cure its propensity, was repeatedly soused in cold water and placed near the stove to dry. During a recent storm some chickens, which had become very wet and chilled, were brought into the house and put by the stove to revive them. It so happened that the parrot had just been ducked himself, and, after surveying the chickens for some time, he cried out in oracular tones: "Little —— fools been swearing!"

—During the first three months of this year, there were received from abroad 589,357 boxes of lemons and oranges at New York.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS TO-DAY.

New Fall and Winter Goods—L. Blumauer.

The Boulevard.

Editor Chronicle; Will the projectors of the boulevard plan be kind enough to inform us how they propose to deal with the sewers, which enter the pond, it is believed, directly upon the line of the proposed reservoir? To cut them off, or what would amount to the same thing, continue them under the road into the water, would be, to send death into the houses they drain on Middle, Court and State streets; to permit their discharge into the reservoir, would give us a very good chance of receiving it back in case of fire.

It will be remembered that the upper half of the pond is almost free of water at low tide; won't the reservoir which, as the writer understands it, is to be made in the mud, almost certainly cause the exposure of a larger extent of flats, than it is proposed to excavate? All these matters must have necessarily received a full examination and satisfactory solution—to the minds of the projectors and petitioners—and therefore an answer will give no trouble, and the Public is entitled to know. W.

An Absurd Project.

Editor Chronicle: As a citizen and a taxpayer I am somewhat interested in the controversy in relation to the project of building a roadway around the edge of the South Mill Pond; and there are but two conclusions that I can reach: either the active participants in this matter are semi-idiots, or they are using extreme shrewdness to "put up a job" on this democratic city government that will result in its ruin. I am a democrat, and have hitherto taken pride in the incessant demands of my political friends for reform and economy in the management of our municipality; and by the way, I think we can assert, without being accused of idly boasting, that we have succeeded tolerably well in the conduct of the financial interests of the city during the year just completed. It is natural, then, to look with jealous eyes upon a scheme, the consummation of which so plainly points to our overthrow. One faction wants a twenty-thousand dollar school-house. Another wants a ten or fifteen thousand dollar reservoir. And still another desires the abatement of the mill pond nuisance. I have no objection to offer to any of these appeals. Each is eminently worthy of being well considered. But the heeding and granting of every request that is made by A B or C, (no matter if they do come panoplied with the authority of the Board of Trade!) will hardly do for us, as rigid economists, and it is well to look about us to see that we are not entrapped by designing men who seek nothing but the overthrow of democratic rule in Portsmouth.

Look, for a moment, at the absurd petition for a "boulevard" to skirt the South Pond above Edward street, as a means of getting rid of the noisome stench that arises from its deposits. There are but three practically successful methods of removing the trouble so justly complained of: one is, to dredge out the accumulated sediment and then rigidly enforce the ordinance relating to the matter of sewerage; or buy the South Mill privilege and close the gates, thereby keeping the flats continually overflowed; or fill up the whole area of the Pond above Edward street, leaving spacious under drains to convey away the natural accumulations of the marshy subsoil. Of course the latter alternative would not be considered so long as our city has plenty of better land for building purposes, and any one who seriously proposed such a plan would be regarded as insane and treated as such. And yet it would not be such a loony proposition as that suggested by the petitioners aforesaid; because by filling the entire pond the odor is permanently destroyed; while by the plan urged in the petition to which we have referred, there is nothing gained save a pile of dirt in the middle of a bog on which our steamers may be stationed in the event of fire. The same disagreeable stench that has hitherto poisoned the air will present itself, because it must be borne in mind that the entire surface of the flats is left bare at every low tide; and the roadway would suggest the illustration of the frightened ostrich burying its head when escaping from its pursuers and imagining itself protected. Let us not squander our public money simply because it is public, but husband it with the same care that we do our individual resources. WARD THREE.

Dr. Norton.

The Globe says: State Detective Philbrick, of Mass., has satisfied himself by investigation that the pretended robbery and assault upon Dr. C. A. Norton of Amesbury is a thorough fraud, the device of Norton to explain the non-payment of a debt. Norton was in Salem, just previous to the alleged assault upon him, and bought a pistol there. The marks of pistol balls on his hat showed burned edges, indicating that the pistol was very close to the hat when it was discharged. Norton owed M. D. F. Steers $100, and the amount of which he claimed to be robbed was $106. Nothing can be done with Norton except to expose his falsehoods, but the exposure will doubtless render another locality more congenial than Amesbury for him.

The Herald says Norton denied purchasing the pistol, but was taken to Salem by the detective and was identified by a Mr. Goldthwaite as the man to whom he sold the pistol.

During his residence in Portsmouth, Dr. Norton seemed very fond of notoriety, told marvellous stories, said he was assaulted one night on account of his temperance sentiments, and was so decidedly impecunious when he removed to Amesbury that he left at least one bill unsettled. We think $106 would be a great surprise to his pocket book.

One of his freaks while in this city was to send for physicians, whom he endeavored to deceive by statements that he fell from a ladder. At another time, having engaged to deliver a temperance lecture on Sunday afternoon, he went to Straw's Point with a reportorial corps about the time the Faraday was expected, and on being reproved after his return for neglecting his engagement, he made the statement that he had been called to attend a child on Lafayette Road, who had fallen from a carriage.

We are informed by members of the former G. A. R. organization that on Decoration Day in 1874 he took charge of expensive floral decorations that were especially designed for the graves of several distinguished officers of rank. The flowers were not placed on the graves, and were last seen in his possession. The ladies who sent the flowers requested the return of the box containing them, but it was not returned.

That is the kind of a "sardine" Dr. C. A. Norton is.

Jottings.

John Murray plays "Rip Van Winkle" tonight, at the Temple, a piece in which he is second only to Joe Jefferson. He is well supported by Miss Lillian and a good company, and deserves a crowded house. Reserved seats may be secured at Preston's.

The new styles of Fall and Winter goods at Blumaeur's store on Market street are just opened, Mr. B. having just returned from New York. See advertisement.

We have received from H. S. Mackie, 82 State street, Rochester, N. Y., the following pieces of new music: You are Life and Light to Me, song and chorus; The Summer Sun will Shine Again, song and chorus; Will You Love Me When I am Old, song and chorus.

Seabrook.

B. W. Jewell of South Hampton addressed the people of Seabrook on the temperance question Sunday forenoon, at the Baptist church, speaking on the same topic to the Baptist church at Hampton Falls in the afternoon.

Temperance crusade meetings were held at Seabrook Village (Sunday) conducted by Rev. Wm. A. Rand, one at four P.M. in front of the Village Hotel and one at five in front of the residence of the late Mr. Tuttle.

Rev. Mr. Draper of the Seabrook M. E. church is quite ill at his residence. Rev. Mr. Beaman of the Seabrook Baptist church is ill. Rev. Mr. Pratt of the Line Seabrook and Hampton Falls Congregational church has had and accepted a call to supply the church at Agawam, Mass.

The new school on Walton Road was dedicated last Thursday evening. Robert Collins, Esq., presided. Prayer was offered by Rev. Wm. A. Rand, followed by singing by a quartet, Robert Collins, Miss Almena Collins, Rufus Mahar and Doctor Colcord. B. W. Jewell, of South Hampton, then made an address, taking strong ground in favor of the Bible in the public schools. After singing, Dr. Colcord made an address followed by remarks by Rev. Wm. A. Rand, and singing by the quartet. The building is of wood, grained finish, with hard-wood desks. About $1200 have been spent on the building, exclusive of the furniture.

The HOUSEKEEPER is an illustrated monthly, unique in plan, that will please wives and husbands. Its aim is to show how a household may be conducted with the least care and expense, and with the greatest attractiveness and comfort. Special attention is given to marketing, shopping, the exposure of shams and frauds, short weights, adulterations, and other household dangers; the kitchen, dining-room, parlor, sitting-room, library, bedroom, nursery, laundry,—every department of the home, from cellar to garret, is represented, and comfort, convenience, luxury, health, beauty, economy, all considered. Special departments of "Home Occupations," and "What to do for a Living," will prove of very great interest and practical value to many. It contains a host of new ideas, valuable suggestions and useful recipes—a real encyclopedia of knowledge for the housekeeper. Price, $1.50 a year, or 15 cents a copy, with special terms to agents and clubs. Chas. F. Wingate, Publisher 52 John Street, New York.

PULMOCINE.

Malaria-Breeding Floods.

The recent tremendous freshets which have flooded some of the most fertile low lands of the United States, have not only caused wide spread ruin and disaster, but have, as might have been expected been followed by an unprecedented outcrop of fever and ague, bilious remittents, and other diseases of a malarial type. The sun's rays, acting upon the saturated vegetation and isolated pools left by the retiring waters, have exhaled a far-reaching miasma, which is pregnant with disease. The most reliable safeguard against it is found to be Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the present demand, for which more particularly in the West and Southwest, where the floods have been most severe, exceeds any which has existed in the past, popular as the great national remedy and preventive of malaria has always been. Never has it been put to such a crucial test, or its claims more conspicuously vindicated.

OF MICHIGAN LANDS,

FOR SALE!

The Lands of the Jackson, Lansing & Saginaw Railroad Company are now Offered For Sale.

They are situated along its railroad and contain large tracts of excellent FARMING and PINE Lands. The farming lands include some of the most fertile and well-watered farming lands in the State. They are timbered mainly with hard-maple and beech; soil black, sandy loam, and abound in springs of purest water. Michigan is one of the best isolated and most prosperous States in the Union, and its farmers have a greater variety of crops and resources than any Western state. While some of the Prairie States may produce corn in great abundance, they have no other resource, and when this crop fails destitution follows, as has been the case the past year in Kansas and Nebraska. For Maps, Circulars and further information, apply to or address O. M. BARNES, Land Commissioner, Lansing, Michigan.

CONDITION PILLS.

NEW TESTIMONIALS.

—— FOR ——

Weak Lungs, Constipation, Lameness, Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Paralysis, Poor Blood and Kidney Troubles.

One Box Dr. Quain's Condition Pills "Nearly Cured Where All Else Failed."

LOWELL, MASS, July 20th, 1874.

T. W. LANE:—I have used one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, am glad to state in my case they have proved all that you claim for them. I have been troubled with Bad Blood and all its consequent diseases, and have tried several kinds of Bitters and Pills without receiving much benefit, until I tried the CONDITION PILLS, and they have nearly cured where all else failed. Please send me another package as soon as convenient.

Yours, very truly,
J. D. WHITAKER.

Testimony of a Clergyman---Liver and Kidney Troubles.

EAST TILTON, N. H., April 14, 1875.

MR. LANE:—Dear Sir:—DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS are not only the best, but the very best I ever used. My wife has been troubled with Kidney Complaint many years; one half of a package has cured her, so that she feels as well as ever. I have been troubled with Liver Compaint for many years; one-half of a package has done me more good than all the Pills I ever took. One of my neighbors took them, who has been troubled with Liver Complaint for many years: three Pills have helped him. Your Pills, where used, commend their virtues. Please send to my address one package.

REV. JOHN DAVIS.

Liver Compaint and Rheumatism so that he Could not Sleep Nights.

I was born and always lived in Pittsfield, N. H.; am now 50 years old; been troubled with Liver Complaint for 30 years, and Rheumatism for 20 years, sometimes so I could not sleep nights. I have taken one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, and they have done me more good and relieved more suffering than all the medicine I have taken during my life.

S. S. RING.
Pittsfield, N. H., Dec. 17, 1874.

Fever and Ague.

NEW BOSTON, N. H., Feb. 1, 1875.

T. W. LANE,—Sir:—Last month I sent to you for a package of DR. QUAIN'S PILLS. I had tried five so called ague cures, and I received more benefit from five of your pills than from all the "Cures" "Cholagogues," "Quinine," &c., that I have taken in two years. I cannot recommend it too highly for ague cases resulting from long standing Fever and Ague.

Yours, most respectfully,
MRS. C. GARLAND.

Scaly Humor Cured by One Package---Liver Complaint Helped.

NORTH SALEM, N. H., Jan. 5, 1875.

MR. LANE.—Dear Sir:—Your Pills are all they are recommended. I was troubled with a Scaly Humor on my legs; I took one package and my legs are quite smooth. My wife was troubled with Liver Complaint; she took one package and they helped her greatly.

Yours, with respect,
JOHN H. BLAKE.

From a Leading Citizen of Rindge.

WEST RINDGE, Cheshire Co., N. H., November 17, 1874.

THOS. W. LANE:—After taking three packages of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, I am prepared to say they are the very best, for I have tried a great many kinds, and faithfully too, believing they would help me, to no effect.—These I do believe are the very best ever made; just the kind a man needs. May they be spread all over the wide world, and Dr. Quain's name a household word.

Yours truly,
ASA STICKNEY.

Felt Better, Stronger and Gained Flesh in One Week,

AFTER TAKING DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS.

ROLLINSFORD, N. H.

THOS. W. LANE:—I commenced to take DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, and in one week I was heavier, felt better, and was stronger than before, and any one troubled with BAD BLOOD can find sure remedy in these Pills.

L. M. YEATON.
Nov. 3, 1874.

CHESTER, N. H., Feb. 24, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have been out of health for some time, and I took a very bad cold and it left my lungs in a very weak state. I received Dr. Quain's Condition Pills and took them according to the directions, and my lungs are some better. I can recommend them to any one who is troubled with weak lungs, for they have done me good, and I think another package will cure me. Dr. Quain's Pills ought to be known throughout the world. Please send me another package as soon as convenient.

Yours, &c., CYRUS LANE.

HILLSBOROBridge, Feb. 25, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—Dr. Quain's Condition Pills are the best I ever used for lameness and pain. The first dose took removed the pain and lameness that I have been troubled with for several years. Others have used quite a number of the pills besides myself. Please send another package by return of mail.

MRS. DANIEL KIMBALL.

GILMANTON I. W., N. H., Feb. 25, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have been taking Dr. Quain's Condition Pills, and can recommend them as far ahead of common pills for constipation of the bowels; they do not have the debilitating effect of common purgatives I have taken.

MRS. J. B. GOODWIN.

NORTHWOOD CENTRE, March 1, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I saw Dr. Quain's Condition Pills highly recommended, and sent for a package, and I feel that they have done more for me than all the medicine I have taken for years, and can freely recommend them to others, as a good and sure medicine. Please send me another package as soon as possible.

MARTHA NORCROSS.

BRISTOL, N. H., Feb. 27, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have made a fair trial of those Condition Pills, and liked them very much. I think they are all they are recommended. They are a good Liver invigorator.

N. F. DANFORTH.

SALEM DEPOT, N. H., March 8, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE:—I think these pills (Dr. Quain's Condition Pills) are all they claim to be; my wife and I are both victims of Liver and Kidney Complaint, and general debility. We have taken about half that package you sent me, and find a marked improvement in our health. I want four packages to give away in the north part of Vermont, to friends up there. I enclose $2.00, and if you can, send me four Packages.

ROYAL SCOTT.

SOUTH PLATTSBURGH, N. Y., March 11, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE:—I have given Dr. Quain's Condition Pills a trial, and find I can honestly recommend them, they having materially improved the soreness and lameness with which I have been afflicted since getting upon my feet after the Paralysis of half side that I suffered last October. I desire you to send me another package as soon as convenient, as I am anxious to continue their use. Though not now a resident of New England, I have lived in Central Vermont more than fifty years, and trust Dr. Quain's Pills will not long be now in that section.

MOSES SHELDON.

THOS. W. LANE:—I have been troubled with Biliousness, Headache, and Dizziness, for a long time, and had the Dyspepsia so bad there were but few kinds of food my stomach would bear at all. I commenced taking your pills, have taken most of one package, and now enjoy eating as well as I ever did, am not troubled with dizziness unless by taking cold, and have been greatly benefited by the use of them.

A. L. PAGE.

FRANCESTOWN, March 13, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE:—I have found Dr. Quain's Condition Pills to be all you claim for them in Kidney Complaint, poor blood, and weak nerves. May they be circulated over the land and found in every household where medicine is needed. I enclose 50 cts. for another package as soon as convenient.

JOHN T. FELCH.

Better Health than for 10 Years.

The Lakeside Library
is published semi-monthly, and each issue contains a COMPLETE NOVEL, by one of the great authors of the world, as Charles Reade, Dickens, Scott, Anthony Trollope, Jules Verne, etc., etc. The completion of long and important novels in a single issue, is the most unique and valuable feature yet introduced into the periodical literature of the day, and is peculiar to The Lakeside Library.
Each issue of The Library contains a Complete Novel, that would cost in the book stores, on the average, $1.50 each; yet the price of the same in The Library is only 10 cents if you buy a single copy from your newsdealer, or only 9 cents if you subscribe for a year. The whole series of 24 numbers will contain Twenty-two Complete Novels, worth about $40.00, but costs only $2.15 in The Library!
Occasionally we shall issue double numbers, to contain unusually long and important works, as "The Law and The Lady," by Wilkie Collins, and Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Seas," by Jules Verne. When this is necessary, both numbers of the story will be issued together, so that the complete work will be in the reader's hands at once. In such cases three numbers will be issued in one month. ☞ Hence all subscriptions are received for 24 numbers.
Our next issue, Nos. 14 and 15, will be a splendid Double number complete and unabridged with Eight characteristic illustrations, containing the famous
Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Seas,"
By JULES VERNE.
This wonderful book is descriptive of a voyage of 20,000 leagues under the surface of the sea! No one acquainted with Verne's peculiar and dramatic style need be told that this, his greatest book, is most intensely interesting. It lays bare the mysteries of the mighty deep—its wrecks; submarine forests; the grotesque, hideous and awful creatures who dwell therein; the beautiful coral caves; its treasures of gold, silver and jewels lost in Spanish ships of olden days. Yet so quaintly, and with with such an air of candor is the story told, that you can hardly believe you are not reading a transcript from a ship's log-book. Sold by mail by the publishers, post-paid, for 25 cents.
☞ There is only one other edition published, which costs $4.00.
Subscribe now, and get all the back numbers, that your set may be complete. The entire set of 24 numbers gives you a really choice library of Standard and Famous Novels, worth in book form about $40.00, and at a cost of only $2.15, including prepayment of postage—or about the price of one single book in ordinary book form. "The Portent," for instance, costs as a Bound Book, 1.75, and is published in No 12 of The Library for only 10 cents! And "Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Seas" costs as a Bound Book $4.00, and is published in Nos. 14 and 15 of The Library for only 20 cents!
☞ Each of these books is complete and unabridged, and costs in the bookstores from $1.00 to $4.00. Order a few samples.

LOCAL AGENTS
WANTED.
An Agent Wanted for Each Town and County in the United States.
Parties desiring to act as agents must accompany their application by a letter of recommendation as to character and responsibility from and signed by the Editor of a newspaper published in the town or county for which the agent proposes to act. The agency is to sell the bonds of the Industrial Exhibition Company.
BONDS, $20 EACH.
HALF BONDS, $10 EACH.
QUARTER BONDS, $5 EACH.
The Industrial Exhibition Company will furnish agents with circulars, etc., etc.
Each newspaper published in the town where an agent is located will, as soon as the agency is established, be given an advertisement, advertising such agency and the Company, and fully explaining the plans, purposes and objects of the Company. Such advertisement will continue in such papers as long as an agency is successfully conducted.
The Industrial Exhibition Company is the first to adopt the plan so long in use by the European governments of issuing bonds when the principal is made secure and not risked, but where there is a chance for a large premium, an investment of $20 is sure to return to the investor $21—one dollar more than cost—and the holder of a $20 Bond may obtain a premium either of $50, $100, $200, $500, $1,000, $3,000, $5,000, $10,000, $25,000 or $100,000. The interest, which is ordinarily distributed to all the bondholders pro rata, is in this loan distributed by chance. The purchaser of a bond knows he will receive back his investment, with a small rate of interest, he has a chance in the above named premiums, which are simply the distribution of interest on the whole loan.
Each bond participates in four drawings each year, until it has drawn a premium, when it is surrendered, the premium paid, and the bond cancelled.
The Industrial Exhibition Company, under a special charter granted by the State of New York, is given authority to issue these bonds. The Legislature of the State, recognizing the great benefits which will arise from the success of this enterprise, have exempted all the real estate and property of the Company from taxation and assessments for five years, and has also conferred other great privileges.
Every American who understands the purposes of this Company well, of a necessity, feel a pride in aiding it to a successful termination.
Each individual who buys a bond becomes an owner and an interested party, and when he views the structure erected with his money can say, "I aided to erect in our country the most magnificent building the world has ever seen, a palace which, in truth, represents the industry, energy and mechanical genius of the American people."
The manufacturers and the inventors of America are peculiarly interested in the success of this enterprise, for the reason that it is to be their home, where all their inventions and manufactures can be exhibited and sold.
The building will contain 5,320,000 square feet of space.
Purchasers desiring Bonds before an agency is established where they reside, will communicate direct with this office, from where they can be supplied.
Parties desiring to act as agents or to purchase bonds will address

Pulmocine Cordial.
BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL
is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.
Is the ultima'thule of Medical Discovery.
Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.
CLEAR YOUR THROAT!
Relieve Your Lungs.
For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England;
PULMOCINE CORDIAL
Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.
For Coughs,
Croup,
Diphtheria,
Asthma, etc.,
USE
Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.
The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

A Smart Goat.

[Cincinnati Commercial.]

Dan Rice calls one of his great moral performing goats Sinbad. One of Sinbad's feats is a daring pad act on a horse, which he ordinarily does with great elan and success. One of the tricks of this act is to jump upon a platform, under which the horse runs, and to jump from it upon the pad when the horse passes under the next time. Sinbad is a venerable, knowing fellow, with remarkably big horns, and a long, flowing white beard. Should Sinbad fail to jump upon the platform from the horse, he'd be knocked off, for there is not room under it for Sinbad on top of the horse. Consequently, Sinbad invariably jumps. Having alighted safely on one side of the platform, he steps over to the other side, eyes the horse closely as he goes round the ring, gathers himself for the jump, and as the well-trained horse canters under and shows the pad on the other side, lets himself down lightly, and retains his place, to go around and repeat the trick.

They say the goat will chew tobacco with great relish. We are reminded of this statement in the familiar natural history of showmen in an effort to account for what occurred to Sinbad last night, to the great surprise and delight of the wondering audience, at this great show. Perhaps Sinbad drinks. However, we prefer the tobacco theory to account for the phenomenal psychological tergiversation in which Sinbad ingloriously disported himself. Sinbad had gravely followed the horse's course half way round the arena with his shrewd glance, when he quickly turned around, bringing himself face to face with the horse as the latter came up. Then, in this reversed position, to the horror of Col. Rice and the attendants, and the great delight of the audience, Sinbad jumped and alighted upon the pad, with his face to the horse's tail. In the next instant the horse was passing under the platform.

But Sinbad—where was he? Like the illustrious original Sinbad, when he had his little ballooning trip with the roc, Sinbad was suspended in mid-air. As we stated in the start, Sinbad has long horns. By the tips of these horns, caught over the platform, Sinbad hung suspended, gracefully oscillating, pendulum-like, so to speak, while the audience roared with laughter. At last the ancient William, by giving himself an extra swing, which threw him off his centre, brought himself to the ground. He struck on his feet, looked around more like a sheep than a dignified goat, and then ran over to the horse, jumped upon the pad like a true circus rider, and finished his act.

A Bursting Balloon.

[Akron (Ohio) Argus.]

The ascension was a very beautiful one, the balloon moving at first in a southerly direction. At the latitude of perhaps a half mile it entered another current which propelled it in a northeasterly direction, which course it kept until it descended, the landing being made on the farm of Mr. Fred Manton, about a mile and a quarter south of Cuyahoga Falls.

When the balloon was at its greatest height—about 6,500 feet—persons who watched its flight were startled to see the air ship suddenly change its shape, and at the same time to descend rapidly, so rapidly, in fact, that everybody expected to hear of his being dashed to the ground and killed. Although their words were not realized, it is little short of a miracle that he was not dashed to pieces, as the balloon burst as the professor was paying out the drag rope, the noise, as he afterward expressed it, sounding like a clap of thunder. In less than ten seconds all the gas had escaped from the balloon, which doubled up in such a manner as to form a parachute. The Professor immediately began to throw out ballast, and, although his fall was rapid and he struck the ground with considerable force, he sustained but slight injury, receiving only a cut in the right arm by its coming in contact with the anchor as he alighted.

Conjectures as to the cause of the explosion are various, but it is the generally received opinion that the material of which the balloon was constructed is too light, while the net-work covering the fabric was too open. Others again claim that there was more gas in the balloon than should have been used, and therefore, when the balloon reached the higher regions where the pressure of the atmosphere was less to the square inch than on the earth, the resistance without was insufficient for the pressure within, or, in other words, the equilibrium between the gas and the atmosphere was destroyed.

The Professor, nothing daunted by his misfortune, expressed his intention of making another ascension to-morrow if it is possible to repair his balloon in time, of which we have our doubts.

—I was an early convert to homœopathy, which I at first, like many others, scoffed at, and then became convinced of its efficacy by experiences which could not be explained away. Thirty-four years have only confirmed my confidence in that method of cure. I am glad to see so many evidences of its progress in the good opinion of the community. Its history is one of successful combats with prejudices—honest prejudices, no doubt, but foolish when maintained against the evidence of actual experiment—a history of hostile predictions contradicted and disappointed by the rapid growth of the system, by its spread from town to town and from village to village, by the establishment of homœopathic hospitals and colleges, and by its introduction into the universities and other seats of learning.—William Cullen Bryant.

Naval Affairs.

[Boston Traveller.]

Reform is the motto at present assumed by all parties, good and bad alike, Reform in our systems of government; reform in our systems of schools; reform in our navy yards;—it is always reform. No political system has time for a fair trial before some one calls out reform. It is always so especially when no particular event calls for a national discussion. And for some undefined reason the navy and almost always the Secretary of the Navy is aimed at. Why is this? Let us take an impartial glance at the various secretaries for the past few years. During Buchanan's administration, eminently democratic, Toucey was damned to eternal torments for mal-administration. Poor Gideon Welles was rated a fool by the opposition press, and it came to be believed by those who did not know, that while our lamented Lincoln was a baboon, Gideon was considered a poor demented wretch. Yet history even now acknowledges that they both were great men and served their country where ordinary men would have failed.

Those who know of the navy, know that Gideon Welles did all that man could do, and that to his personal efforts the country is greatly indebted.

The actual history of the navy has been, that after the rebellion, Congress and the press became suddenly economical, and the money that Gideon Welles had obtained from the sale of old and useless vessels, was without a good reason returned into the treasury. It was nearly or quite fifty millions that he had on hand, and the navy would have been benefited by that much, and it would have been well applied, but for this outcry of economy. By the return into the treasury no one was benefited, and the navy suffers from this sad mistake.

No one not well acquainted with the detail has the least idea of the great cost of the ships of to-day; such have been the strides in gunnery, in steam, and armor plating. A single gun of the largest calibre to-day, with a carriage, costs in England nearly $25,000 in gold. Now a simple sum in arithmetic would give us the comparative cost of the ship.

There is one thing more: it has been ascertained over and over again that it was inexpedient to do work in the navy yards, and that if the work was to be done it could be done at less cost and more expeditiously outside than inside of the navy yards. In fact, Congress has passed laws that a portion of the work should be done by contract, and at the same time curtailed the appropriations. Of course the usual amount of work in the navy yards must be reduced.

In defence of Secretary Robeson let it be said, that with all his faults which have been assumed he has carried out the laws of Congress, and has done all he or any other man could have done even. Admiral Porter could not have done more with the means which have been placed at his disposal.

It is desirable, very, to have a fair expression from our best naval constructors, in and out of the navy, as to the kind of ship which is required, and no persons in the navy are more competent to judge than naval constructors, for the reason that they make it the study of their lives to obtain all the information as to the composition of naval structures, both for themselves and the government.

There is one thing which the Hon. George M. Robeson has done, which is greatly to his credit, and which has been a great help to our country, even if the navy yards have suffered in the mean while. It is, that through his efforts and assistance a branch of industry has been kept alive, which would otherwise have perished, viz., iron shipbuilding; the great firms which could not have been maintained except by such work as could be thrown into their hands by the government, have been enabled to keep their heads above water. The risks they have assumed have been unparalleled.

There has been a great industry preserved for which the government workshops were not prepared, and which in the meanwhile has been taken care of in the navy yards, by selecting and preparing such buildings and tools as were needed to perform the work in the navy yards when the emergency should call for it.

News and Notes.

The eclipse was visible at Whitefield.

The burning of a hotel in Marshall, Michigan, was attended with startling incidents. The hotel, which was a large and commodious four-story brick building, was full of guests, and, although the alarm was given below, the guests and boarders in the hotel did not hear or know of their dreadful peril. It is not known how the fire caught, but it is supposed that the building became full of gas, and that, by the igniting of this gas by the explosion of a lamp, the whole building was set on fire at once. The main staircase leading to the upper part of the building was on fire, and this prevented ingress and egress, leaving the smothered inmates of the second, third and fourth stories entirely at the mercy of the flames, which were spreading in every room at the same time. The firemen did everything in their power to rescue the guests, and many of the latter owe their lives to the firemen's courage. One of the firemen walked on to the second floor balcony, and there held against his breast a ladder which was too short to reach the floor, while two men mounted it and went to the room occupied by a family who were nearly suffocated. But for this heroism the whole family must have perished. Two men in the fourth story escaped by attaching sheets together and descending on them, not saving their clothing. Several men and women jumped from the windows and were instantly killed, while others had their legs broken or were otherwise seriously injured. One gentleman rushed to his room where he found his wife almost suffocated and helpless. He got her to the window and out upon the ladder, when she fell and was fatally injured. The husband was smothered with smoke and fell back into his room, perfectly helpless. The fire at once swallowed him up, and he was burned to death. None of the boarders or guests saved any of their property. Watches, silver, money, pianos and costly furniture were swept away in twenty minutes from the time the alarm was given, and no time was had to save anything.

The probability of war between England and China seems to be increasing.

The Connecticut town elections, Monday, showed no marked changes from last year, party lines being ignored in many places. In Hartford the republican town clerk is elected by 595 majority, and the first selectman is republican. Nearly all the other officials are democrats. Returns indicate the adoption of the Constitutional amendment, providing for biennial Fall elections, instead of the annual Spring elections, by a large majority; and the ratification of the one giving the legislature power to restore citizenship to discharged convicts, by a smaller majority. Many of the small towns, under the local option law, vote no license, but the large ones generally vote license. Norwich adopts both amendments and votes for license, Hartford voted for a liquor license by about 1100 majority. Danbury voted no license. The largest cities generally vote for a license, and the smaller towns are about equally divided on this question.

A Cherokee Indian is a student in the agricultural department at Dartmouth College, a Japanese in the scientific department, and a retired clergyman, fifty years old, in the academic department.

Nothing to my mind is more certain than our financial embarrassments and industrial prostration are chiefly attributable, not to a scarcity, but to a plethora of paper money, which gave birth to speculative enterprise and expanded credits, tempted counties and cities to run heedlessly into debt, and became the fruitful cause of extravagance and wastefulness among all classes of our people.—Hugh McCulloch.

The Springfield, Mass., Union thinks that "Mr. Rice will bring to the governorship of the State more distinguished qualifications than any man since John A. Andrew."

"Business continues to improve in most departments of trade," says the Boston Advertiser, "and while the sales are wholly confined to supplying present wants, and there is an utter absence of speculation, the amount of business in most staple manufactures will compare favorably with the past two or three years. It is a long time since there was so active a demand for boots and shoes, and there is every indication that the season's business will be largely in excess of last year."

The democratic candidate for Governor of Pennsylvania makes a much more satisfactory defence of his royalty than of his position on the currency question. While all at sea on the financial issues of the day, he is disposed to put into almost any port that is covered by the democratic flag.

By the decease of Mrs. Mary Brickett of Claremont, the Congregational church of Hampstead comes into premiums of $5,000.—Manchester Union.

A reporter for the Philadelphia Press has learned from Mr. Ross that Mosher and Douglass approached a patrolman some time before the abduction of Charley Ross, with a proposition to assist them in the abduction of a little grandson of Commodore Vanderbuilt, whom they intended to hold for ransom for the sum of $50,000.

Mrs. L. F. White, while operating one of the lathes in the clothes-pin shop at Hillsborough, on Monday of last week, had her dress caught on a shaft which drew her into the machinery. Both feet were severely bruised, and the flesh on one ankle and leg was terribly torn and mangled.

There seems to be no foundation to the report that Henry McGrath, of Canaan, who recently died suddenly there, met his death by poison. A post-mortem examination of the body gave no indications of that kind. The brain, heart and lungs were free from all traces of poison, and it is probable that he died from natural causes. The stomach has been taken to Boston for analysis.

Cincinnati woke up one fine day, last Spring, to find that a blundering lot of democratic legislators, in attempting to take away from Toledo the right to govern herself, had abolished the Cincinnati Board of Aldermen.

Moncure D. Conway has been passing the first few weeks of his stay in this country in the house of his father, who is a banker in Fredericksburg, Va. The sharp differences arising from his radical anti-slavery views led to an unhappy separation between Mr. Conway and his friends and relatives in Virginia before the war. All that has passed away with the war; and they now welcome him as a Virginian with true Virginia cordiality. Mr. Conway reports public opinion in his native State in a healthy condition. The representatives of the families which have most influenced the community in the past still occupy controlling positions: and both whites and blacks testify that the feeling between the races is all that could be desired.

Hon. M. C. Kerr has been in Illinois recently, examining into his prospects for the Speakership. As a result, it is announced that the entire Missouri delegation is pledged for him, and that he is certain to receive nearly the entire vote of the delegations from Illinois, Kentucky, Indiana, and nearly all the rest of the Western States. His friends are confident of his success.

The indications are very fine indeed that Bill Allen will be defeated by at least 30,000 majority, and Sam. Cary by about 50,000. The handwriting is on the wall to that effect.—Cleveland Leader.

But an explanation is furnished by the facts. It is not more currency that is needed; the broken, bankrupt speculators, no longer able to borrow money on bogus bonds and diluted stock, want the currency so reduced in value that it will be exchanged by those who hold it for anything; and this rotten, worthless currency they want that they may swindle their creditors by paying them at the rate of a few cents on the dollar.—Chicago Tribune.

Senator Ingalls of Kansas is the latest reinforcement to the republican stump in Ohio.

Speaking of the inflationists, the Edinburg Scotsman says: "Every one is interested in money, and the discussions concerning money now going on in America are peculiarly interesting, for the reason that a large and apparently increasing class of the disputants are proposing to make money more plentiful among themselves by declining to pay what they owe to us and their other creditors."

Carruth, the Vineland (N. J.) editor, whom Chas. K. Landis shot in the head, is sinking in consequence of his injuries, and doubts of his recovery are entertained.

The commission of Gen. Burt, as Postmaster at Boston, has been duly signed by the President. This settles Burt's official status for the present, notwithstanding the dissatisfaction of the Post Office department with Burt "personally," if not officially.

Frank Plunkett, recently appointed Assistant Paymaster in the Navy, is ordered to duty as assistant to the Naval Paymaster at Boston.

Information is received at the Navy Department from San Francisco that fraudulent certificates of indebtedness were issued by G. M. Pinney, clerk to Navy Inspector Spaulding, to the amount of about $750,000, but the loss will fall heavily upon individuals and not upon the Government.

John L. Chase, republican, was elected Representative from Standish and Baldwin, Me., Monday, by twenty-nine majority. At the first election there was a tie.

The body of John L. Benjamin, drowned with Rev. George B. Porteous in Hempstead Harbor, went ashore near Glen Cove, landing Sunday night. This will probably put at rest the rumors circulating in regard to Mr. Benjamin's swimming away after upsetting the boat. It is stated that Dr. Porteous carried a life insurance policy for $10,000 until last June, when he failed to pay the premium. His family are left with very little property.

Miss C. E. Angell, a graduate of Canton Theological Seminary, will succeed Mrs. Roberts as pastor of the Universalist Church at Kittery.

Prof. Gideon L. Soule, for fifty years Principal of the Phillips Academy in Exeter, lost his way while walking in the woods near that town, Sunday evening, and was not found till about ten o'clock at night. He started to walk at about four o'clock. An alarm was spread and some 500 people engaged in the hunt, and were organized in the woods by Gen. Gilman Marston. Luckily some academy students found the Professor near the river. He is upwards of 80 years of age. He could scarcely speak when found.

Mr. John Cairns, a man about fifty years of age, fell down stairs, Sunday night, at Dover, and broke his neck.

Bee culture is spreading rapidly in California. At the present rate of increase it is estimated that there will be in four years one million stands of bees in Los Angelos and the two adjoining counties, which will produce 100,000,000 pounds of honey, worth $20,000,000, which is more than the value of the sugar and molasses crop of Louisiana, Texas and Florida combined.

The wife of Charles A. Wiggin, of Stratham, while testifying on Monday in the case of Barker vs. Littlefield, in the office of Gen. Gilman Marston, at Exeter, before Dr. Geo. W. Kittredge of Newmarket as referee, died suddenly of apoplexy. Her age was forty-eight years.

Letter from Dartmouth.

HANOVER Oct. 4.

The number of students in the different departments are as follows: Academic, Seniors 70, Juniors 60, Sophomores 76, Freshman 78; Scientific, 1st class 11, 2nd 16, 3rd 21, 4th 28; Agricultural, Seniors 7, Middlers 14, Juniors 6; Medical, 84; Thayer School 6; —making a total of 477, this number being twenty more than were present at the last College year.

The University Base Ball Nine has been organized thus: Smith, '77, p.; Pomeroy, '79, c.; Clarke, '76, c. s. d., l. f. & capt.; Sewall, '77, c. f.; Hill, '76, c. s. d., r. f.; Morton, '77, s. s.; Staples, '76, 1 b.; Gerould, '78, c. s. d., 2 b.; Whidden, '79, 3 b.

On the 13th and 14th, a series of athletic sports is to be held upon the Campus, consisting of a three mile walk; three mile run; one mile walk; one mile run; one hundred yards dash; one hundred and twenty yards hurdle race; running and standing, long and high jump; three legged run; three consecutive jumps; hop, skip and jump; wheel-barrow race; sack race; throwing hammer; putting the heavy weight; and pole jump throwing base ball. The prizes for the winners of the above sports are now at hand and some of them quite costly. At the present there is no prospect of a Class regatta this Fall. There is a great deal of sickness here this term, the prevailing disease being typhoid fever. Among others sick with this disease is Lewis A. Drake, formerly of Portsmouth.

—Lotta, the charming little actress who plays the banjo and dances break-downs so sweetly, makes her great successes in staid old Boston, which affects to care only for the seriously classical. Lotta has been playing there to crowded houses in her second week. In San Francisco, also, she is a great favorite; and since she gave a fountain to the city they say it is a mortal offense to declare in public there that the lovely little girl is red headed.

Jottings.

On the occasion of the pastor of the Unitarian church resuming service, after vacation, on Sunday morning last, beautiful floral decorations from Mrs. Haley's greenhouse were furnished for the desk and altar, and the font was finely festooned with autumn leaves. At the vesper service in the evening, Rev. Mr. DeNormandie denounced and deprecated the too prevalent and growing custom of deadheadism, in all departments of business and pleasure—the popular desire and striving to gain something for nothing, in church and state. They were plain words plainly spoken, and contained much wholesome truth, if not the whole truth.

Mr. William H. Gardiner of this city has been elected Secretary of the class of '76 at Dartmouth.

The Amesbury neighbors of Dr. C. A. Norton constructed an effigy of him on Monday night, rode it on a rail, tarred and feathered it and hung it on a tree, near his residence—but he stayed indoors.

Maggie Mitchell plays "The Pearl of Savoy" here next Wednesday evening, and the audience will be limited only by the capacity of the Temple.

Editor Chronicle; How long are the people to suffer with the constant shifting of freight cars across Vaughan street, when it can be done just as well from the western end of the depot. This has become quite a nuisance and it makes one shudder when he sees the little ones between eight and nine o'clock in the morning watching for a chance to cross at Vaughan street on their way to school. * *

Chaplain Thomas A. Gill is detached from the receiving ship Sabine and ordered to the Navy Yard.

John Murray closes his engagement at the Temple this evening, appearing in the character of "Philip Nolan, the Man Without a Country." Mr. Murray is a strong character actor and Miss Lillian gives him good support. The drama is from Rev. E. E. Hale's story of the same name, and is exceedingly interesting.

A meeting of the veterans who are to attend the re-union at Manchester on the 12th, 13th and 14th insts., will be holden at Rechabite Hall, Market street, this evening at 7:30.

Murder in Pembroke.

Josia Langmaid, daughter of James F. Langmaid, between 17 and 18 years of age, left her home on Buck street, Monday morning, to go to the Pembroke Academy, where she was attending school, one and a half miles distant. She was last seen alive about a third of a mile from home, passing the house of Amos Hoyt. A younger brother left for the school half an hour before her, and as she did not appear at the school he supposed she had remained at home for the day. On returning from school at night he learned that she had not been at home, and her parents were made acquainted, for the first time, with the fact that she had not been to school. Search was commenced for her, and the news of her disappearance was sent to Suncook, a mile and a half distant, and a large number of persons turned out to join in the search, it being after dark when they left. Between seven and eight o'clock her body was found in some bushes, about three rods from the highway and about three-fourths of a mile from the academy. Her head was entirely severed from her body, and her person indicated that she had been ravished and horribly mutilated. Her hat was found lying ten feet from the body, toward the road. Physicians present gave it as their opinion that her head was cut off with a knife. She was a girl of excellent character and prepossessing appearance, and was held in general esteem by people who knew her. The road between her father's house and the academy is a lonely one, with only two houses, the one nearest to where the body was found being occupied by Nickerson Hartford, a foolish cripple, with his boy. The community are thoroughly aroused, and the threats of summary vengeance heard indicate that the act will be speedily punished by an injured community if the guilty one be known.

About two rods from where the remains were seen there was discovered the hat of the victim. It was uninjured with the exception of stains of blood. No trace of her shawl could be discovered. Early Tuesday morning, the head of the victim was found in the woods about 100 rods northward from where the body was discovered. It was wrapped up in a cape which the murdered girl wore. One eye was closed by a terrible blow on the side of the head, while one ear was cut entirely open. The ear jewels were missing. There was no evident attempt to conceal the head, excepting that it was wrapped up in the cape. It appeared as though the murderer was carrying the burden with him and carelessly dropped it upon the ground. It has also been ascertained that the girl's ring and breast pin had been taken. The other missing parts of the body were not found.

Living a mile or more from Mr. Langmaid's is Wm. T. Drew, a middle aged man having a family. From circumstances which it would not be prudent to make public now, suspicion has fallen upon this man. Tuesday forenoon he was found to be absent and officer Hildreth with a posse started out to arrest him. He was found in Hooksett on foot, walking as he said, to Manchester. He was taken by the officers, but made a desperate resistance. From Hooksett he was conveyed to the lockup at Suncook.

On arriving there an excited crowd gathered around the officers and clamored for Drew and said they would lynch him. The police were obliged to surround the prisoner with revolvers drawn in order to protect him from the excited throng. Officer Hildreth made some discreet remarks to the crowd, saying that there was not sufficient proof as yet to convict Drew, and that it was the duty of himself and his assistants to protect the prisoner. Drew was then committed to the lockup, and the building s now protected by a body of armed police.

Charles Moody has been arrested at Suncook on the charge of having a part in the murder. The evidence against Drew is strong. Both the parties are colored.

Rockingham County.

The Rockingham County commissioners, on petition of C. E. Kennard and others, have decided to lay out a new highway in the town of East Kingston, from the depot road to the Woodshed, so-called, a distance of eighty-two rods.

The same board has also decided, on petition of a portion of the tax-payers in School District No. 2, in the town of South Newmarket, to change the location of the schoolhouse in said district, removing it from a corner where it had been located about ninety years, and close to which the Boston & Maine Railroad has for several years run, to a more central and eligible lot about half a mile distant on the same highway, as requested by the petitioners, though the removal was strongly opposed by others.

For several years the inhabitants of School District No. 2, in the town of Brentwood, in which the Rockingham County Farm is located, have objected having the pauper children attend the public school, while the county commissioners have claimed their right to school privileges. There have been but four or five such children to attend school, and the commissioners have offered to pay more than the school tax assessed on the farm, if desired; but the inhabitants were unwilling their children should associate with paupers. Judge Foster of the Circuit Court has recently decided, in an elaborate and sensible argument, which has already been published in the CHRONICLE, that the genius of our free institutions demands that the poorest children should have full and equal school privileges with the rest, and that the school must admit the little outcasts. Upon this residents of the district have petitioned to the school committee and selectmen to set off and constitute the county farm a separate school district by itself, so the commissioners can expend the farm school tax in schooling the pauper children at the farm. A hearing was had before the selectmen on the 25th ult.

WHAT MAKES THE MAN.

A truthful soul, a loving mind,
Full of affection for its kind,
A spirit firm, erect and free,
That never basely bends the knee,
That will not bear a feather's weight
Of Slavery's chain, for small or great.
That truly speaks from God within;
That never makes a league with sin;
That snaps the fetters despots make,
And loves the truth for its own sake;
That worships God and him alone,
And bows nowhere but at his throne;
That trembles at no tyrant's rod,
A soul that fears no one but God;
And thus can smile at curse or ban,
This is the soul that makes a man.

500,000 ACRES
OF MICHIGAN LANDS,
FOR SALE!
The Lands of the Jackson, Lansing & Saginaw Railroad Company are now Offered For Sale.
They are situated along its railroad and contain large tracts of excellent FARMING and PINE Lands. The farming lands include some of the most fertile and well-watered hardwood lands in the State. They are timbered mainly with hard-maple and beech; soil black, sandy loam, and abound in springs of purest water. Michigan is one of the least indebted and most prosperous States in the Union, and the farmers have a greater variety of crops and resources than any Western state. While some of the Prairie States may produce corn in great abundance, they have no other resource, and when this crop fails destitution follows, as has been the case the past year in Kansas and Nebraska. Kidney Troubles.

LOWELL, MASS, July 20th, 1874.
T. W. LANE:—I have used one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, am glad to state in my case they have proved all that you claim for them. I have been troubled with Bad Blood and all its consequent diseases, and have tried several kinds of Bitters and Pills without receiving much benefit, until I tried the CONDITION PILLS, and they have nearly cured where all else failed. Please send me another package as soon as convenient.
Yours, very truly,
J. D. WHITAKER.

Testimony of a Clergyman---Liver and Kidney Troubles.
EAST TILTON, N. H., April 14, 1875.
MR. LANE.—Dear Sir:—DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS are not only the best, but the very best I ever used. My wife has been troubled with Kidney Complaint many years; one half of a package has cured her, so that she feels as well as ever. I have been troubled with Liver Complaint for many years; one-half of a package has done me more good than all the Pills I ever took. One of my neighbors took them, who has been troubled with Liver Complaint for many years: three Pills have helped him. Your Pills, where used, commend their virtues. Please send to my address one package.
REV. JOHN DAVIS.

Liver Compaint and Rheumatism so that he Could not Sleep Nights.
I was born and always lived in Pittsfield, N. H.; am now 50 years old; been troubled with Liver Complaint for 30 years, and Rheumatism for 20 years, sometimes so I could not sleep nights. I have taken one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, and they have done me more good and relieved more suffering than all the medicine I have taken during my life.
S. S. RING.
Pittsfield, N. H., Dec. 17, 1874.

Fever and Ague.
NEW BOSTON, N. H., Feb. 1, 1875.
T. W. LANE.—Sir:—Last month I sent to you for a package of DR. QUAIN'S PILLS. I had tried five so-called ague cures, and I received more benefit from five of your pills than from all the "Cures" "Cholagogues," "Quinine," &c., that I have taken in two years. I cannot recommend it too highly for diseases resulting from long standing Fever and Ague.
Yours, most respectfully,
MRS. C. GARLAND.

Scaly Humor Cured by One Package---Liver Complaint Helped.
NORTH SALEM, N. H., Jan. 5, 1875.
MR. LANE.—Dear Sir:—Your Pills are all they are recommended. I was troubled with a Scaly Humor on my legs; I took one package and my legs are quite smooth. My wife was troubled with Liver Complaint; she took one package and they helped her greatly.
Yours, with respect,
JOHN H. BLAKE.

From a Leading Citizen of Rindge.
WEST RINDGE, Cheshire Co., N. H., November 17, 1874.
THOS. W. LANE:—After taking three packages of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, I am prepared to say they are the very best, for I have tried a great many kinds, and faithfully too, believing they would help me, to no effect.—These I do believe are the very best ever made; just the kind a man needs. May they be spread all over the wide world, and Dr. Quain's name a household word.
Yours truly,
ASA STICKNEY.

Felt Better, Stronger and Gained Flesh in One Week,
AFTER TAKING DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS.
ROLLINSFORD, N. H.
THOS. W. LANE:—I commenced to take DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, and in one week I was heavier, felt better, and was stronger than before, and any one troubled with BAD BLOOD can find sure remedy in these Pills.
L. M. YEATON.
Nov. 3, 1874.

CHESTER, N. H., Feb. 24, 1875.
MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have been out of health for some time, and I took a very bad cold and it left my lungs in a very weak state. I received DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS and took them according to the directions, and my lungs are some better. I can recommend them to any one who is troubled with weak lungs, for they have done me good, and I think another package will cure me. Dr. Quain's Pills ought to be known throughout the world. Please send me another package as soon as convenient.
Yours, &c., CYRUS LANE.

HILLSBORO BRIDGE, Feb, 25, 1875.
MR. THOS. W. LANE:—Dr. Quain's Condition Pills are the best I ever used for lameness and pain. The first dose I took removed the pain and lameness that I have been troubled with for several years. Others have used quite a number of the pills besides myself. Please send another package by return of mail.
MRS. DANIEL KIMBALL.

GILMANTON I. W., N. H., Feb. 25, 1875.
MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have been taking Dr. Quain's Condition Pills, and can recommend them as far ahead of common pills for constipation of the bowels; they do not have the debilitating effect of common purgatives I have taken.
MRS. J. B. GOODWIN.

NORTHWOOD CENTRE, March 1, 1875.
MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I saw Dr. Quain's Condition Pills highly recommended, and sent for a package, and I feel that they have done more for me than all the medicine I have taken for years, and can freely recommend them to others, as a good and sure medicine. Please send me another package as soon as possible.
MARTHA SORCROSS.

BRISTOL, N. H., Feb. 27, 1875.
MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have made a fair trial of those Condition Pills, and liked them very much. I think they are all they are recommended. They are a good Liver invigorator.
N. F. DANFORTH.

SALEM DEPOT, N. H., March 8, 1875.
THOS. W. LANE:—I think these pills (Dr. Quain's Condition Pills) are all they claim to be; my wife and I are both victims of Liver and Kidney Complaint, and general debility. We have taken about half that package you sent me, and find a marked improvement in our health. I want four packages to give away in the north part of Vermont, to friends up there. I enclose $2.00, and if you can, send me four Packages.
ROYAL SCOTT.

SOUTH PLATTSBURGH, N. Y., March 11, 1875.
THOS. W. LANE:—I have given Dr. Quain's Condition Pills a trial, and find I can honestly recommend them, they having materially improved the soreness and lameness with which I have been afflicted since getting upon my feet after the Paralysis of left side that I suffered last October. I desire you to send me another package as soon as convenient, as I am anxious to continue their use. Though not now a resident of New England, I have lived in Central Vermont more than fifty years, and trust Dr. Quain's Pills will not long be seen in that section.
MOSES SHELDON.

THOS. W. LANE:—I have been troubled with Biliousness, Headache, and Dizziness, for a long time, and had the Dyspepsia so bad there were but few kinds of food my stomach would bear at all. I commenced taking your pills, have taken most of one package, and now enjoy eating as well as I ever did, am not troubled with dizziness unless by taking cold, and have been greatly benefited by the use of them.
A. L. PAGE.

FRANCESTOWN, March 13, 1875.
THOS. W. LANE:—I have found Dr. Quain's Condition Pills to be all you claim for them in Kidney Complaint, poor blood, and weak nerves. May they be circulated over the land and found in every household where medicine is needed.
I enclose 50 cts. for another package as soon as convenient.
JOHN T. FELCH.

Better Health than for 10 Years.
CHESTER, N. H., Oct. 17, 1874.
MR. LANE:—I have taken one package of Condition Pills; find them in my case all they are recommended; have not enjoyed so good health for the last ten years as I have since I commenced taking the Condition Pills. Shall be happy to recommend them to others.

The Lakeside Library

is published semi-monthly, and each issue contains a COMPLETE NOVEL, by one of the great authors of the world, as Charles Reade, Dickens, Scott, Anthony Trollope, Jules Verne, etc., etc. The completion of long and important novels in a single issue, is the most unique and valuable feature yet introduced into the periodical literature of the day, and is peculiar to The Lakeside Library.

Each issue of The Library contains a Complete Novel, that would cost in the book stores, on the average, $1.50 each; yet the price of the same in The Library is only 10 cents if you buy a single copy from your newsdealer, or only 9 cents if you subscribe for a year. The whole series of 24 numbers will contain Twenty-two Complete Novels, worth about $40.00, but costs only $2.15 in The Library!

Occasionally we shall issue double numbers, to contain unusually long and important works, as "The Law and The Lady," by Wilkie Collins, and Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Seas," by Jules Verne. When this is necessary, both numbers of the story will be issued together, so that the complete work will be in the reader's hands at once. In such cases three numbers will be issued in one month. ☞ Hence all subscriptions are received for 24 numbers.

Our next issue, Nos. 14 and 15, will be a splendid Double number complete and unabridged with Eight characteristic illustrations, containing the famous

Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Seas,"

By JULES VERNE.

This wonderful book is descriptive of a voyage of 20,000 leagues under the surface of the sea! No one acquainted with Verne's peculiar and dramatic style need be told that this, his greatest book, is most intensely interesting. It lays bare the mysteries of the mighty deep—its sunken wrecks; submarine forests; the grotesque, hideous and awful creatures who dwell therein; the beautiful coral caves; its treasures of gold, silver and jewels lost in Spanish ships of olden days. Yet so quaintly, and with with such an air of candor is the story told, that you can hardly believe you are not reading a transcript from a ship's log-book. Sent by mail by the publishers, post-paid, for 25 cents.

☞ There is only one other edition published, which costs $4.00.

Subscribe now, and get all the back numbers, that your set may be complete. The entire set of 24 numbers gives you a really choice library of Standard and Famous Novels, worth in book form about $40.00, and at a cost of only $2.15, including prepayment of postage—or about the price of one single book in ordinary book form. "The Portent," for instance, costs as a Bound Book, 1.75, and is published in No 12 of The Library for only 10 cents! And "Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Seas" costs as a Bound Book $4.00, and is published in Nos. 14 and 15 of The Library for only 25 cents!

☞ Each of these books is complete and unabridged, and costs in the bookstores from $1.0 to $4.00. Order a few samples.

Price, $2.15 for 24 numbers. Sold by all news dealers. Address,

LOCAL AGENTS WANTED.

An Agent Wanted for Each Town and County in the United States.

Parties desiring to act as agents must accompany their application by a letter of recommendation as to character and responsibility from and signed by the Editor of a newspaper published in the town or county for which the agent proposes to act The agency is to sell the bonds of the Industrial Exhibition Company.

BONDS, $20 EACH.
HALF BONDS, $10 EACH.
QUARTER BONDS, $5 EACH.

The Industrial Exhibition Company will furnish agents with circulars, etc., etc.

Each newspaper published in the town where an agent is located will, as soon as the agency is established, be given an advertisement, advertising such agency and the Company, and fully explaining the plans, purposes and objects of the Company. Such advertisement will continue in such papers as long as an agency is successfully conducted.

The Industrial Exhibition Company is the first to adopt the plan so long in use by the European governments of issuing bonds when the principal is made secure and not risked, but where there is a chance for a large premium, an investment of $20 is sure to return to the investor $21—one dollar more than cost—and the holder of a $20 Bond may obtain a premium either of $50, $100, $200, $500, $1,000, $2,000, $5,000, $10,000, $25,000 or $100,000. The interest, which is ordinarily distributed to all the bond holders pro rata, is in this loan distributed by chance. The purchaser of a bond knows he will receive back his investment, with a small rate of interest, he has a chance in the above named premiums, which are simply the distribution of interest on the whole loan.

Each bond participates in four drawings each year, until it has drawn a premium, when it is Surrendered, the premium paid, and the bond cancelled.

The Industrial Exhibition Company, under a special charter granted by the State of New York, is given authority to issue these bonds. The Legislature of the State, recognizing the great benefits which will arise from the success of this enterprise, have exempted all the real estate and property of the Company from taxation and assessments for five years, and has also conferred other great privileges.

Every American who understands the purposes of this Company will, of a necessity, feel a pride in aiding it to a successful termination.

Each individual who buys a bond becomes an owner and an interested party, and when he views the structure erected with his money can say, "I aided to erect in our country the most magnificent building the world has ever seen, a palace which, in truth, represents the industry, energy and mechanical genius of the American people."

The manufacturers and the inventors of America are peculiarly interested in the success of this enterprise, for the reason that it is to be their home, where all their inventions and manufactures can be exhibited and sold.

The building will contain 5,320,000 square feet of space.

Purchasers desiring Bonds before an agency is established where they reside, will communicate direct with this office, from where they can be supplied.

Parties desiring to act as agents or to purchase bonds will address

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung trying climate of New England,

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

USE

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

AWKWARD.

BY J. CHEEVER GOODWIN.

And so she's engaged to be married
To one of our class! I'm afraid
That if very much longer she tarried
Her degree would be O. M.—Old Maid.
"I know her?" Oh, yes, or I thought so;
But I'm more than inclined to believe
I was wrong. I'm the fellow she sought so,
But couldn't deceive.

"You're surprised?" I imagined you would be;
It's a thing I say little about;
'Twas as open a case as well could be—
"Did she love me?" There wasn't a doubt.
Why, she just threw herself at my head, Bill!
But I knew she'd no heart and less brains;
And though money will settle a bread bill,
It won't wash off stains.

"You're astonished at this?" My dear fellow,
What the deuce did I care for her age!
I like women like apples—when mellow.
But the fact was I knew every page
Of her history. "Flirted?" You'd think so.
"There was Harry McKeown, '63;
It was she that drove him to the drink so;
"Am I sure?" As can be.

She's a scheming coquette, and I know it;
She hasn't the least bit of soul
Or an atom of truth. "Doesn't show it?"
No; her feelings are under control.
Then it's nonsense to say she has beauty.
I pity the fellow she's caught.
It must be a matter of duty
With him, or he's bought.

Who the deuce can it be? There's Fred Baker;
You remember him?—scored for the Nine;
But there isn't much fear that he'd take her;
He wants blue blood, and not a gold mine.
"Chicken" Jones? No, he's married. 'Twas funny
How he ran a tie race with Jim Prout,
For the "class cradle," wasn't it? Money
He's got, and the gout.

"Tub" Abbott was sweet on her. Sandy
McGillum!—he must be the one,
By Jove it's old "Sandy, the dandy!"
It's not he? I give up, then. I'm done.
Is it one of our class, are you sure,
That the vixen has seized for her prey?
Who's the fellow? let's have it! What! you are?
The dickens you say!

THE MANSION OF SILENCE.

[New York Sun.]

The system introduced in the Albany Penitentiary thirty years ago by Gen. Amos Pilsbury, and still thoroughly maintained by his son, Mr. Louis D. Pilsbury, is a modification of the old cellular prison system and a combination of what have been deemed its best features with the best parts of the congregate plan of management obtaining now in each of our other New York prisons. It is customary among prison officials to speak of this penitentiary as a "model institution," and in one sense the phrase is correctly applied. It is certainly a model in the development of a system. Gen. Pilsbury's ideas were all in cubical form. Regularity, precision, and an uncompromising adherence to what he had once fixed as that which should be, were his distinguishing traits. Fortunately for him, or rather for the success of his plan of prison management and discipline, he was given autocratic control. That absolute sway he maintained during his life, and it has, since his death, been equally enjoyed by his son. In that system the basic principle was a profound impression upon the mind of the convict that implicit obedience had to be the first law of his being while under the Pilsbury iron rod. The story is told that the General when receiving a new comer usually said to him: "While you are here you will have to obey, blindly and unquestionably, all orders given you. If you do so, your life will be made as comfortable for you as will be consistent with the punishment of your offence against the law. If you rebel, however, you will be compelled to obey. Do you think compulsion will be necessary?"

"Well, no sir," the convict replied. "I'll do my best to obey."

"Very well, let us see how far you mean that. Look at that crack in the floor for five minutes, without speaking, moving or raising your eyes. If the prisoner stood the test satisfactorily he was encouraged and sent in to enter upon his new life, but if he grew restive or looked up he received a stern admonition that a second disobedience would entail punishment. What the life was to which this might be supposed to be the introduction, it will be interesting to learn.

The Albany Penitentiary stands on a hill just outside the city, near the Park. Looked at from the front, it resembles nothing less than a prison. It might be mistaken for a college. Tall trees cast a grateful shade on the broad gravelled path before the door; flowering vines droop over the windows; a smooth lawn slopes down to a little rivulet and rises again to the distant road; the air is full of the perfume of flowers, the songs of birds, and the hum of bees.

There are no other sounds than these. Even when you enter the spacious hallway and are in the institution itself, there is not a murmur to denote the presence of nearly nine hundred convicts only a few steps distant. This is the finest distinguishing characteristic of the system—silence.

Under the escort of Superintendent Pilsbury, Assistant Woodruff or Clerk Brower, the visitor will pass through the guard room, where a goodly store of repeating revolvers and rifles are within convenient reach, and enter the main, or cell, building. The thorough cleanliness of the place is worthy of notice. The corridors are fully fifteen feet in width, and the great hall is thirty feet in height, with perfect ventilation and purification. Not a trace of the prison smell is perceptible. Even in the cells, which are small and in the present overcrowded condition of the institution have in some instances to accommodate two prisoners where the system contemplates but one, there is no tainting of the air.

At the moment of our visit, several convicts are silently receiving, through an aperture in the wall between this hall and the kitchen, hundreds of deep tin pans, each of which contains the dinner of a convict. These pans they place in the cells whose doors are standing open—for there is no common dining-hall. Each convict must eat alone in silence in the solitude of his cell.

From here we step out into the yard. The walls and the two-story brick shops are at the opposite end of the yard, and the tides are all whitewashed and glare with a spotless, dazzling whiteness in the sunlight. Guards, with repeating rifles on their arms, pace the tops of the walls, or perch in their airy little look-out stations.

In the shoe shops—the manufacture of shoes, by contract, being the principal industry carried on here—we find about five hundred men at work. From one hundred to one hundred and fifty men are in each long room, under the constant supervision of a vigilant keeper. They do not have task work, as in other prisons, but are expected to labor steadily about ten hours a day. Here we first begin to appreciate the working of the system. These men are mere human machines, so thoroughly have they been subjected to discipline. Not one of them dares permit himself even a furtive glance at us as we pass. Their eyes are bent downward upon their work, their lips are closed, their hands are busy. Even when the pile of work on a convict's bench or table has been completed he does not venture to look up or ask for more, or glance about him. He must fold his arms before him on his bench and look downward in patient silence until the foreman or instructor sees fit to give further employment. Whether he has five minutes or hree hours to wait, he must not in that time occupy himself with aught else than his wretched self-communings. In the State prisons men who have no employment are permitted to beguile their leisure by reading, the fabrication of some little knick-knacks that they may sell to visitors, or in overwork for the contractors, for which they receive pay. In the penitentiary nothing of the kind is allowed. The prisoner must feel that during his incarceration here he has no right to himself.

The noon bell sounds. A long line of fifty or more convicts emerge from one of the shops and passes under charge of keepers along the smooth bitumen walks toward the door of the cell hall. They march at a slow space, with locked step, in single file; each man's left hand against his breast, his right upon the shoulder of the one in front, all in silence. The file leader leans backward against the one behind him, that close contact may be communicated all along the line, and he marks time with a hard stamp of his left foot every time he puts it down. All the others must stamp when he does. This line, thus moving and so compacted, crawls along like an enormous centipede. At the door each convict in passing must turn his face toward a keeper stationed there, that he may be identified. One by one the sad, sullen, or expressionless faces pass out of the sanlight. One by one they are swallowed up in the gloomy cells, the iron doors clanking and the bolts shooting into place after each. They are locked up to feed.

Another and another of these ugly centipedes crawls out, exactly as this one has done, and like it falls to pieces at the cell doors, until all the convicts are supposed to be at dinner. They will have an hour in which to swallow that cheerless meal. Then the centipedes will re-form and crawl back to the shops in which silent labor will fill in the rest of the day until 4:30 P. M., when they will march to their cells again to wash and get supper.

One other industry is carried on here—caning and braiding chairs—but only one hundred and fifty men and women are employed in it. Although in this department the convicts are nearly all petty criminals, they are subjected to the same rigid discipline that prevails in the shoe shops, and the perfection of its enforcement may be understood when it is said that even the women do not dare talk or look up at visitors. One woman here, Kate Rush, is a curiosity. She belongs in Albany, and has served pretty nearly all the time during the last past twenty-five years in the penitentiary. She has not been convicted of any other offence than drunkenness, and is not at liberty more than two or three days at a time. Generally she is sent to the institution on six months' sentences, so that she manages to have two sprees every year.

Life on week days in the penitentiary is the same all the year round. On Sundays there is a little change. Then the female prisoners are first marched up to the chapel hall and stowed away in the gallery, where they can neither see the male prisoners nor be seen by them. Afterward the centipedes form again and march up into the body of the hall. Each man goes to his place in silence, and a keeper's eye watches the movements of every one during the service. After the service, convicts may read in their cells, and happily the prison library is a good one of about 2,500 volumes. Twice a week there is an evening school, under direction of the chaplain, for such of the prisoners as desire to attend, and have merited that privilege by their good conduct.

The women's cells are in another wing of the building, and some of them evince in their adornment a fair degree of taste. The inmates are, however, generally of a low class, and are in on short sentences, so that they probably lack that sense of fixed residence enjoyed by the female convicts at Sing Sing, and consequently care less about making their cells attractive.

The hospital has not the thorough ventilation that it should have, and its furniture is not what it should be. F. L. Taintor, once cashier of the Atlantic Bank in Brooklyn, and sentenced to seven years' imprisonment for embezzlement, is the hospital steward, and is said to serve efficiently.

There is another person here worth looking at. That is Mr. Wm. M. Graham of Middletown, Orange county. He used to be President of the Middletown Bank, and has represented his county in the State Senate; but "embezzlement" was the ugly word they applied to the crowning act of his busy life, and so he passed into retirement here for a term of ten years. If he is not pardoned, those ten years will probably end his life in prison, for he is old, sick all the time, and becoming childish.

But there is abundance of good society in this institution. There is Major Virgil S. Eggleston, formerly a paymaster in the United States army, a very bright fellow, not yet middle-aged, an excellent accountant and very valuable to the shoe contractors who employ him in their office. He was on duty away out at Portland, Oregon, when his accounts failed to balance by $12,379.40. The facilities for balancing books there were not so good as in the army when the official report, "Books lost in action," or "lost in crossing a river," brought balm to many an anxious officer's heart. Eggleston couldn't fix things that way. So here he is for five years, to be followed by five more if he does not pay back the $12,379.40. He has been here a year, and hopes to get out in four more, not deeming it worth while to take a five-year contract of $2,475.88 per annum if he can get out of it.

The clergy is represented here by two brethren, one of the Presbyterian and the other of the Baptist persuasion, both for forgery and counterfeiting. Rev. John Cowan is the Presbyterian. He forged a $1,000 bond. He has been a year learning to make shoes, and will stay here another year. Then, if he pays a fine of $1,000, he may go forth to the world.

Rev. Bro. Larkin P. Blackburn is the Baptist. He is from North Carolina, and was sentenced to three years' imprisonment for counterfeiting.

Travis T. Brooks, formerly President of the Petersburg Bank of Petersburg, Va., will suffer here for four years longer for embezzlement.

They have Phelps here, that frigid C. H. Phelps, who used to be a Deputy State Treasurer of New York, and, after stealing a pile of money, skipped over to New Jersey and sent back a cheerful proposition for a compromise. Phelps is in for fifteen years.

Geo. W. Smith and John C. Henry, ex-United States revenue collectors from Mississippi, are here for embezzlement. Smith will be eligible for re-appointment in the revenue department in February next. Henry not for four years to come, and even then he will have to put up $5,234.43 before he may go free.

Tom Ballard, sometimes known as "the King of the Counterfeiters," has a steady job of shoemaking here, and George Albert Mason, who professes to be a victim of the Secret Service, pines in seclusion near him. Ballard is a very daring, shrewd, and energetic fellow, and has got out of pretty nearly every jail in the land, if report speaks truly, but it will be almost a miracle if by his own exertions he departs from Albany penitentiary alive for some thirty years to come. He dreaded this place, and begged hard for Auburn or Clinton prisons instead, but in vain. He has escaped from both. Mason is sentenced for twelve years on a charge of passing counterfeit money.

Charles Meredith and Charles Pardue, who fired a ship at sea some two years ago, are here, the former on a ten-years' term, the latter for life, having obtained that commutation from a death sentence.

George Long and James Moran, burglars, the former reputed one of the most skillful in the world, are serving out a five-years' term here, after which they will go to Clinton prison for twenty-five years, if they can be kept so long.

Charles H. O'Brien, a Washington policeman, who killed a man—in self-defence as he says—is expected to make shoes here the remainder of his life.

H. Slatter, also of Washington, who killed somebody, and was rich enough to spend $30,000 in his defence, was sent here for only four years, and hopes to get a pardon before the expiration of that time, as his bank account is still good.

James Campbell, alias "Shang," leader of the band of "masked burglars," who were the terror of Westchester county, will go out of this institution in about eight months.

There is only one punishment permitted in Albany Penitentiary, namely the dark cell or dungeon. Capt. Pilsbury has so great a respect for law that as long as he is legally restrained from corporal punishment he will not employ it secretly, but it is with great reluctance and only where it is positively necessary that he should do so, that he resorts to the dark cell as a means for the coercion of unruly convicts. Speaking with the weight of many years of experience, he declares the dark cell the most inhuman and injurious of all forms of punishment known in penal institutions. It breaks men down physically, he says, with fearful rapidity and certainty, and is exceedingly liable to destroy their mental organizations. The "cat" or "paddle" would do infinitely less harm and be more radically effective as a moral persuasive.

Finally, before quitting the Albany Penitentiary, let us say that this is one of the few institutions of its kind in the world that pays its way and even yields a revenue to the community. All prisoners sent here by the General Government, or from any other county of this State than Albany, have their board paid, and their labor is also paid for by contractors, so that the penitentiary comes out every year ahead of its expenses.

Humanitarians have raised the question whether it would not be better to let the convicts work by tasks, and give them opportunity to earn a little for themselves or their families. Sometimes the earnings of men so working are considerable, if they are industrious. For example, Jonas Hartwell went out of Auburn Prison a few days ago, on the expiration of a sentence of fifteen years' imprisonment for the crime of rape, taking nearly $400, and three or four years previous to the expiration of his term he sent to his family $500 of his earnings in the prison. Frequently men go out of Sing Sing and Auburn prisons with from $300 to $500. The money that they earn is held in trust for them by the Wardens until their discharge, or is, if they so direct, sent to relieve their needy families. In Clinton Prison they can earn less, their class of work there being peculiar; but still they realize something by making small trinkets of horse hair, bone, and wood.

But in this penitentiary the men are not permitted to make even trinkets for their own amusements, lest they may give them to keepers and so win some slight favoritism.

Daily Chronicle.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 7, 1875.

Ohio.

"F. D. M.," the pungent political corrospondent of the Cincinnati Times, who is following democratic speakers about Ohio, writes of Bill Allen: Mingled with disgust and contempt, one can not but feel pity for this poor old man, a cat's-paw in the hands of his wily manipulators. He is so feeble and attenuated and weak that it requires the utmost tender care and attention to keep him up and strengthen him to strut his brief hour upon the stage. When he eached Logan he had but an hour before e the speaking began, but Charley Sargent put him to bed immediately, and after a good rest got him up, got some food into him, and then dosed him with wine and started him for the speaker's stand. Charley watches him, and the moment he begins to maunder and say what he ought not to, or to totter and tremble too violently Charley promptly stops him with a pull at the coat tails, wraps him up carefully, places him in an easy carriage and drives away.

At Circleville he did not stop when Charley yanked his coat-tail, and after two or three pulls, Charley grabbed his arm, shoved it into his overcoat and pulled him away while he was still speaking. The old man is garrulous as a child about himself or anything connected with the campaign, and a word about the next Presidency will set him going like hail stone rattling on a shingle. And Charley watches him closely, and always has an ear out that he may not say something not down in the books. The poor, dear old man thinks he is sure to be President, thinks the democratic managers propose to nominate him if he succeeds in the State election. Poor old goose, with one foot in the grave and the other on the Ohio democratic platform. The object of contempt and laughter to his enemies, and stool pigeon and tool of his friends. How little he dreams that the dishonest political tricksters who manage Ohio democracy wish to keep the breath in his weak old carcass long enough to win their point in this State, and then will turn him off to hate himself to death at Fruit Hill; or, sadder still, to repeat in his closing days of life the passing away of the Great Editor who aspired to the Presidency before him. About all there is left of Bill Allen is his egotism, and that is as boundless as the universe, and sublime as divinity, and aggressive and annoying as a sliver in a sore toe.

Sam. Cary entertained a crowd of miners at Straitsville, recently, with one of his characteristic stump orations in which obscene and indecent jokes abounded. The following evening, Gen. Woodford of New York spoke for the republicans, the hall being crowded to suffocation and the audience very unruly. Gen. Woodford addressed them in an entirely different manner than they expected, treating them as reasoning, honest human beings, flattering their intelligence with appeals to their reason and discernment, obliging them to exercise their own thought and judgment, and never once sought to create a laugh or induce a sneer. After the speech was concluded, it was fully an hour before Governor Woodford could get away from the hall. The miners had got a new and unexpected light, and they crowded about him with eager and excited inquiries. They wanted to know more. They asked him all sorts of questions, and listened attentively to his simple, straightforward answers and explanations. Long after the hall was closed they stood about in groups discussing the inflation doctrine and financial questions generally, and no doubt doing it in a much more enlightened and intelligent manner than after the meeting on the evening before.

Another Tragedy.

A shocking murder has been discovered in Massachusetts, the victim being Mr. Julius Eishberg, a well known and wealthy German peddler. For many years Mr. Eishberg has been known as a shrewd and popular dry goods peddler, who had built up a large trade in all the principal towns of the section, including Barre, Athol, Ashburnham, Templeton, Hubbardston and Brookfield. He drove a pair of handsome horses, attached to a gorgeous cart, which was always filled with dry goods in an infinite and elegant variety. He was very popular among his customers, and he was as much of an institution in all the towns through which he had occasion to travel as is the corner grocery or the town pump. He was rather proud of his success, and he was in the habit of carelessly carrying large sums of money on his person, and displaying it whenever and wherever an opportunity offered. This weakness is supposed to have led to his tragic death at the hands of highway robbers and assassins, who doubtless overheard his boasts and determined to get possession of his money at all hazards. He left Ashburnham early on the 4th, and started, it is supposed, for Templeton, having a full stock of valuable goods in his wagon and a large sum of money, as usual, on his person. His horses and wagon have been found without a driver, and indisputable evidence is said to have been discovered that Eishberg had been waylaid, murdered and robbed by tramps, who have appeared in force in the vicinity of late. Eishberg was not a powerful man, being scarcely five feet in height, and nothing could have been easier than to successfully attack him in the lonely and unsettled region through which he was passing. The report of his murder has created intense excitement throughout the region where he was so well and favorably known, and at last accounts the authorities had departed for the scene of the supposed murder for the purpose of investigating the mystery and gaining further particulars of the remarkable affair. Eishberg is said to have been worth at least $100,000, having made that sum at his trade.

Jottings.

The alarm of fire between ten and eleven o'clock, Tuesday night, was caused by the burning of a small house on the farm of Mrs. Joseph Smith, at Durham Point.

Stockholders' meeting of the Wolfeboro' Branch Railroad will be held at Wolfeboro' next Tuesday.

Maggie Mitchell.

The Dayton (Ohio) Herald thus alludes to a recent performance of this distinguished artist and company in that city:

Maggie Mitchell and her manager may feel proud of her Dayton reception last night in Music Hall. The audience in numbers and culture, was finer than even the admirers of this sparkling comedienne had expected. It is the diverting, simple, graceful natural comedy which enchants the play-going public rather than the "Sceptred Pall of Tragedy." Maggie Mitchell was the same happy, sparkling "Cricket" as ever—wayward and resolute as your true peasant girl of the sunny land of France, vivacious and even magnanimous in her girlish ways. She was well sustained in "Barbeaud Pere," even more than in "Landry." "Mother Fadet" came up to her part with greater animation than has been seen in the representations of this sterling Old French comedy in Dayton for years. Mr. Harris, "Landry," appeared with the "Star of the Evening" three times before the curtain in response to the enthusiastic plaudits.

The Schools.

Last year the School street school's lower room contained ninety-five scholars with only fifty-five benches, thus forcing forty children to sit around the teacher. Now, I ask what could be the condition of the atmosphere in a room hardly large enough for fifty children and forced to contain ninety? The committee, in order to relieve the school of some of the little ones, proposed to put more benches into the State street school room and transfer all the scholars attending the School street school and living in Bow, Penhallow and Daniel streets to the former, which action relieved the latter school of twenty-five scholars. But as soon as this was done the School street room received new scholars, bringing the number up to ninety again. The city government was then asked to furnish an additional room in District No. One for primary scholars, and did so by fitting up the State street ward room, thus forcing little ones from five years and upward to travel from the extreme North-end, and from as far West as Parker Street, which has called out considerable complaint against the committee from the parents of the children transferred, notwithstanding they have done the best they could with the room at their disposal. The committee asked for a room in District No. One, and one should have been furnished in the vicinity of the factory. A room in that vicinity would have accommodated scholars above the factory who should go to the Cabot street school, but cannot on account of its crowded condition, there being 125 scholars with only 100 seats.

The new school house question is one of great importance and should command the attention of the new city government at once. With a new school house at the West end, the wants of the city would be supplied for a long time to come. Let it be built as large and contain as many rooms as the Haven School; then the Academy and Walker schools could be used for the Eastern portion of the city, and the new school house for the Western portion, the South part being already well provided for. The city would then have no further use for the School street school house, which could be sold; and all who know anything about the latter room would say Amen. A PARENT.

The Murder of Josie Langmaid

The horrible tragedy at Pembroke is the excited topic of conversation throughout the State. On the discovery of the mutilated body, a careful examination of the ground near the roadside revealed by its side the book Josie had taken for her day's study, an apple, and the club with which the assault had first been made. This—a red-oak stick, three feet and eight inches in length, of square, 1 2-4 inch timber—had been newly whittled at one end, to give a convenient handle. On the weapon were stains of blood; this when found, was broken in three pieces and appears to have been broken by the blow given the unsuspecting girl. These articles were, with the head, taken at once to the house of Mr. Langmaid, and the inquest made. Drs. Phillips, Laraby and Hildreth made an examination of the body and found the head bruised to a jelly where it had been struck; a cut on the cheek, front of the ear, three inches in length; the right cheek cut and bruised badly, and also the prints of the heel of a boot, as though the murderer in his fury had stamped upon his helpless victim. The head was severed completely from the body, between the first and second vertebra of the spinal column. The right hand was bruised and the bones badly fractured, which indicated that the hand had been thrown up to protect the head and received a portion of the blow. A picture more horrible cannot be imagined than that room presented, and a crime more terrible never committed than that perpetrated by this human fiend.

Josie wore on leaving the house a pair of ear jewels and a pin to match, gold with jet inlaid, all formerly having three pendents of gold, but of the ear jewels two had been taken from each, leaving but one for each of the ear jewels, and three on the pin. She also wore two rings, one a plain gold ring and the other a black gutta percha. These articles with the exception of one ear jewel are missing, and are supposed to have been taken by the murderer.

Josie was a person of the most agreeable and pleasing manner, of the best character, and of a kind and affectionate disposition. She is described by one who knew her best as a girl who had not an enemy in the world. In personal appearance she was very prepossessing, having a fine, erect figure, pleasant face and a full, intellectual brow, over which fell an abundance of waving brown hair. The parents are well known in the town as well-to-do farming people, respected by all, and a family the peer of any in the vicinity. The desire of the parents was to give their children an education that should fit them for the duties of life, and as soon as they reached an age that would permit they were sent to the Academy on Pembroke street. The Fall term commenced about six weeks ago. Josie and her brother resumed their studies, going to the building in the morning and returning at night to their home, walking the distance, nearly two miles, when it was not convenient for the father to take them with his horse.

A piece of poetry, or rather doggerel of the vilest character, was found near the spot where the body was found, which may possibly furnish a clue that will lead to the arrest of the fiend who committed the deed.

A tramp was arrested at Raymond, who passed through Pembroke on the day of the murder.

The police arrested a tramp on the night of the 5th, who they think is the murderer. He said his name was John Maher, and that he had walked from Suncook. His face was scratched and his shirt front saturated with blood. He is a burly, desperate looking character.

News and Notes.

Barnum will winter 500 of his horses and a large portion of his menagerie at Bridgeport.

The case, "The Rising Sun Stove Polish," against the "Rising Moon Stove Polish," which has been in litigation in the Court of Common Pleas, Philadelphia, for two years, has just been decided in favor of Morse Brothers, proprietors of "The Rising Sun," and the counterfeiter, and imitator, ordered to pay the costs of the suit, and damages sustained by Morse Brothers. The defendant claimed that his trade mark, "Rising Moon," was as different from "The Rising Sun," as night from day, and that there was no danger or probability of one being confounded with the other, but the Court held that the essence of Morse Brothers trade mark was an orb rising above the horizon, which had been infringed, the intention being evident, it being proved that parties had actually been deceived, and purchased one for the other.

George C. Campbell, son of James. M. Campbell, editor of the Manchester Union, and Fred. H. Perry, will leave about the middle of November for Florida, there to engage in the culture of tropical fruits. They will locate at Apopka, about two hundred miles south of Jacksonville, and near the centre of the State. They have already purchased one hundred and sixty acres of land, and will soon add one hundred and sixty acres more, which will make quite a nice little orange grove.

A painful accident occurred to a little boy eight years of age, son of Mr. George Colby of Bennington. While Mr. B. was driving a cow and the child the team, the horse became unmanageable and the boy was thrown so far that a stub entered in by the under side of the jaw bone and through the cheek just below the eye.

Hon. Lemuel P. Cooper is the most successful raiser of turkeys in Croydon, and he fats them on boiled turnips. Two years ago he sent eighty to market, averaging ten pounds each.

Little Josey Sullivan, whose mysterious disappearance about three weeks ago, from his home in New York, caused a stir among the citizens and police almost rivalling that of Charley Ross, was found dead not a block from his house. He had gone into a hay store and was playing among the bales, when they toppled over on him, and as the place was not frequented he starved to death.

At Carlinville, Ill., on the 5th, Charles Brink, in a fit of anger shot Mrs. Deborah Hall, his mother-in-law, and Ellen Brink, his wife, killing them instantly, and then killed himself by placing a pistol to his head. No good cause can be assigned for the deed.

DIED.

KNOX. In this city, Oct. 5th, Mrs. Emeline Knox, aged 55 years.

Funeral Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock from No. 10 Chapel Street.

An Unanswerable Argument.

The strongest argument which can be urged against the advisability of administering such corrosive and nerve-destroying poisons as arsenic and quinine for intermittent and remittent fevers, is the vastly superior success in the prevention and cure of such diseases of a medicine which is the very antipode of the above named drugs, both in respect of its composition and the results wrought by it. Such a medicine is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a purely vegetable preparation, which not only eradicates with wonderful promptitude every trace of fever and ague, and kindred types of malarious disease from the system, but is a certain preventive of all maladies begotten of miasma-tainted air and water. These results mineral anti-febrile remedies do not effect with certainty, and their continued use entails consequences highly pernicious to the system. The Bitters, on the contrary, not only afford speedy relief, but establish health on a permanent basis.

PULMOCINE CORDIAL.

—Adverse circumstances and the demands of justice are working up a corner in giants. After a life of activity that was constant and formidable, except when interrupted by occasional restraints in various prisons of the country, Ned O'Baldwin threw up the sponge after uttering those memorable words, "Bury me in Boston." Samson's weakness was in his hair, or rather in the lack of it; Goliah's was in his forehead; the Irish Giant's lay in neither of those appendages. His hair was scrupulously kept at the regulation length of his profession; his head would stand as much banging as that of a seasoned bull bison; and yet, thanks to that random bullet which worked so surely in the interests of society, a vulnerable spot was touched, and Giant Ned reposes beneath the willows. George Quaco was a colored boatman on the Morris, New Jersey, Canal. He was called by his admirers the "Guinea Giant," and with this prestige he might have aspired to the succession of the O'Baldwin, but it was not to be. He had assaulted a Chief of Police and was wanted by the officers to answer therefor. But he waded into the Delaware river and commenced firing large stones at his pursuers, which they returned with pistol shots, one of which took effect and so interfered with his attempt to swim the river that he was drowned. This is very serious, for what rough can now at such short notice be found to wear the laurels of these pantafilandos? The laureates of the prize ring should now invoke the Muses for their deepest inspiration.—Post.

OF MICHIGAN LANDS,

FOR SALE!

The Lands of the Jackson, Lansing & Saginaw Railroad Company are now Offered For Sale

They are situated along its railroad and contain large tracts of excellent FARMING and PINE Lands. The farming lands include some of the most fertile and well-watered hardwood lands in the State. They are timbered mainly with hard-maple and beech; soil black, sandy loam, and is sound in sap as to our east water. Michigan is one of the best watered and most prosperous States in the Union, and its farmers have a greater variety of crops and resources than any Western state. While some of the Prairie States may produce corn in great abundance, they have no other resource, and when this crop fails destitution follows, as has been the case the past year in Kansas and Nebraska. For Maps, Circulars and further information, apply to or address O. M. BARNES, Land Commissioner, Lansing, Michigan.

NEW TESTIMONIALS.

— FOR —

Weak Lungs, Constipation, Lameness, Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Paralysis, Poor Blood and Kidney Troubles.

One Box Dr. Quain's Condition Pills "Nearly Cured Where All Else Failed."

LOWELL, MASS, July 20th, 1874.

T. W. LANE:—I have used one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, am glad to state in my case they have proved all that you claim for them. I have been troubled with Bad Blood and all its consequent diseases, and have tried several kinds of Bitters and Pills without receiving much benefit, until I tried the CONDITION PILLS, and they have nearly cured where all else failed. Please send me another package as soon as convenient.

Yours, very truly, J. D. WHITAKER.

Testimony of a Clergyman---Liver and Kidney Troubles.

EAST TILTON, N. H., April 14, 1875.

MR. LANE.—Dear Sir:—DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS are not only the best, but the very best I ever used. My wife has been troubled with Kidney Complaint many years; one-half of a package has cured her, so that she feels as well as ever. I have been troubled with Liver Compaint for many years; one-half of a package has done me more good than all the Pills I ever took. One of my neighbors took them, who has been troubled with Liver Complaint for many years: three Pills have helped him. Your Pills, where used, commend their virtues. Please send to my address one package.

REV. JOHN DAVIS.

Liver Compaint and Rheumatism so that he Could not Sleep Nights.

I was born and always lived in Pittsfield, N. H.; am now 50 years old; been troubled with Liver Complaint for 30 years, and Rheumatism for 20 years, sometimes so I could not sleep nights. I have taken one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, and they have done me more good and relieved more suffering than all the medicine I have taken during my life. S. S. RING.

Pittsfield, N. H., Dec. 17, 1874.

Fever and Ague.

NEW BOSTON, N. H., Feb. 1, 1875.

T. W. LANE,—Sir:—Last month I sent to you for a package of DR. QUAIN'S PILLS. I had tried five so-called ague cures, and I received from you benefit from five of your pills than from all the "Cures" "Cholagogues," "Quinine," &c., that I have taken in two years. I cannot recommend it too highly for diseases resulting from long standing Fever and Ague.

Yours, most respectfully, MRS. C. GARLAND.

Scaly Humor Cured by One Package---Liver Complaint Helped.

NORTH SALEM, N. H. Jan. 5, 1875.

MR. LANE.—Dear Sir:—Your Pills are all they are recommended. I was troubled with a Scaly Humor on my legs; I took one package and my legs are quite smooth. My wife was troubled with Liver Complaint; she took one package and they helped her greatly.

Yours, with respect, JOHN H. BLAKE.

From a Leading Citizen of Rindge.

WEST RINDGE, Cheshire Co., N. H., November 17, 1874.

THOS. W. LANE:—After taking three packages of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, I am prepared to say they are the very best, for I have tried a great many kinds, and faithfully too, believing they would help me, to no effect.—These I do believe are the very best ever made; just the kind a man needs. May they be spread all over the wide world, and Dr. Quain's name a household word.

Yours truly, ASA STICKNEY.

Felt Better, Stronger and Gained Flesh in One Week,

AFTER TAKING DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS.

ROLLINSFORD, N. H.

THOS. W. LANE:—I commenced to take DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, and in one week I was heavier, felt better, and was stronger than before, and any one troubled with BAD BLOOD can find sure remedy in these Pills.

Nov. 3, 1874. L. M. YEATON.

CHESTER, N. H., Feb. 24, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have been out of health for some time, and I took a very bad cold and it left my lungs in a very weak state. I received Dr. Quain's Condition Pills and took them according to the directions, and my lungs are some better. I can recommend them to any one who is troubled with weak lungs, for they have done me good, and I think another package will cure me. Dr. Quain's Pills ought to be known throughout the world. Please send me another package as soon as convenient.

Yours, &c., CYRUS LANE.

HILLSBOROUGH BRIDGE, Feb. 25, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—Dr. Quain's Condition Pills are the best I ever used for lameness and pain. The first day I took removed the pain and lameness that I have been troubled with for several years. Others have used quite a number of the pills besides myself. Please send another package by return of mail. MRS. DANIEL KIMBALL.

GILMANTON I. W., N. H., Feb. 25, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have been using Dr. Quain's Condition Pills, and can recommend them as far ahead of common pills for constipation of the bowels; they do not have the debilitating effect of common purgatives I have taken.

MRS. J. B. GOODWIN.

NORTHWOOD CENTRE, March 1, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I saw Dr. Quain's Condition Pills highly recommended, and sent for a package, and I feel that they have done more for me than all the medicine I have taken for years, and can freely recommend them to others, as a good and sure medicine. Please send me another package as soon as possible. MARTHA NORCROSS.

BRISTOL, N. H., Feb. 27, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have made a fair trial of those Condition Pills, and liked them very much. I think they are all they are recommended. They are a good Liver invigorator.

N. F. DANFORTH.

SALEM DEPOT, N. H., March 8, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE:—I think these pills (Dr. Quain's Condition Pills) are all they claim to be; my wife and I are both victims of Liver and Kidney Complaint, and general debility. We have taken about half that package you sent me, and find a marked improvement in our health. I want four packages to give away in the north part of Vermont, to friends up there. I enclose $2.00, and if you can, send me four Packages. ROYAL SCOTT.

SOUTH PLATTSBURGH, N. Y., March 11, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE:—I have given Dr. Quain's Condition Pills a trial, and I can honestly recommend them, they having materially improved the soreness and lameness with which I have been afflicted since getting upon my feet after the Paralysis of left side that I suffered last October. I desire you to send me another package as soon as convenient, as I am anxious to continue their use. Though not now a resident of New England, I have lived in Central Vermont more than fifty years, and trust Dr. Quain's Pills will not long be new in that section. MOSES SHELDON.

THOS. W. LANE:—I have been troubled with Biliousness, Headache, and Dizziness, for a long time, and had the Dyspepsia so bad there were but few kinds of food my stomach would bear at all. I commenced taking your pills, have taken most of one package, now enjoy eating as well as I ever did, am not troubled with dizziness unless by taking cold, and have been greatly benefited by the use of them. A. L. PAGE.

FRANCESTOWN, March 13, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE:—I have found Dr. Quain's Condition Pills to be all you claim for them in Kidney Complaint, poor blood, and weak nerves. May they be circulated over the land and found in every household where medicine is needed. I enclose 50 cts. for another package as soon as convenient.

JOHN T. FELCH.

Better Health than for 10 Years.

CHESTER, N. H., Oct. 17, 1874.

MR. LANE:—I have taken one package of Condition Pills; find them in my case all they are recommended; have not enjoyed so good health for the last ten years as I have since I commenced taking the Condition Pills. Shall be happy to recommend them to others. WILLIAM H. FELLOWS.

M. T. BETTON & CO., No. 16 Congress street, Main & Winchester's Block.

The Lakeside Library

is published semi-monthly, and each issue contains a COMPLETE NOVEL, by one of the great authors of the world, as Charles Reade, Dickens, Scott, Anthony Trollope, Jules Verne, etc., etc. The completion of long and important novels in a single issue, is the most unique and valuable feature yet introduced into the periodical literature of the day, and is peculiar to The Lakeside Library.

Each issue of The Library contains a Complete Novel, that would cost in the book stores, on the average, $1.50 each; yet the price of the same in The Library is only 10 cents! If you buy a single copy from your newsdealer, or only 9 cents if you subscribe for a year. The whole series of 24 numbers will contain Twenty-two Complete Novels, worth about $40.00, but costs only $2.15 in The Library!

Occasionally we shall issue double numbers, to contain unusually long and important works, as "The Law and The Lady," by Wilkie Collins, and Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Seas," by Jules Verne. When this is necessary, both numbers of the story will be issued together, so that the complete work will be in the reader's hands at once. In such cases three numbers will be issued in one month. ☞ Hence all subscriptions are received for 24 numbers.

Our next issue, Nos. 14 and 15, will be a splendid Double number complete and unabridged with Eight characteristic illustrations, containing the famous

Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Seas,"

By JULES VERNE.

This wonderful book is descriptive of a voyage of 20,000 leagues under the surface of the sea! No one acquainted with Verne's peculiar and dramatic style need be told that this, his greatest book, is most intensely interesting. It lays before the mysteries of the mighty deep—its sunken wrecks; submarine forests; the grotesque, hideous and awful creatures who dwell therein; the beautiful coral caves; its treasures of gold, silver and jewels lost in Spanish ships of olden days. Yet so quaintly, and with with such an air of candor is the story told, that you can hardly believe you are not reading a transcript from a ship's log-book. Sent by mail by the publishers, post-paid, for 25 cents.

☞ There is only one other edition published, which costs $4.00.

Subscribe now, and get all the back numbers, that your set may be complete. LOCAL AGENTS WANTED.

An Agent Wanted for Each Town and County in the United States.

Parties desiring to act as agents must accompany their application by a letter of recommendation as to character and responsibility from and signed by the Editor of a newspaper published in the town or county for which the agent proposes to act. The agency is to sell the bonds of the Industrial Exhibition Company.

BONDS, $20 EACH.
HALF BONDS, $10 EACH.
QUARTER BONDS, $5 EACH.

The Industrial Exhibition Company will furnish agents with circulars, etc., etc.

Each newspaper published in the town where an agent is located will, as soon as the agency is established, be given an advertisement, advertising such agency and the Company, and fully explaining the plans, purposes and objects of the Company. Such advertisement will continue in such papers as long as an agency is successfully conducted.

The Industrial Exhibition Company is the first to adopt the plan so long in use by the European governments of issuing bonds when the principal is made secure and not risked, but where there is a chance for a large premium, an investment of $20 is sure to return to the investor $21—one dollar more than cost—and the holder of a $20 Bond may obtain a premium either of $50, $100, $200, $500, $1,000, $3,000, $5,000, $10,000, $25,000 or $100,000. The interest, which is ordinarily distributed to all the bond holders pro rata, is in this loan distributed by chance. The purchaser of a bond knows he will receive back his investment, with a small rate of interest, he has a chance in the above named premiums, which are simply the distribution of interest on the whole loan.

Each bond participates in four drawings each year, until it has drawn a premium, when it is surrendered, the premium paid, and the bond cancelled.

The Industrial Exhibition Company, under a special charter granted by the State of New York, is given authority to issue these bonds. The Legislature of the State, recognizing the great benefits which will arise from the success of this enterprise, have exempted all the real estate and property of the Company from taxation and assessments for five years, and has also conferred other great privileges.

Every American who understands the purposes of this Company will, of a necessity, feel a pride in aiding it to a successful termination.

Each individual who buys a bond becomes an owner and an interested party, and when he views the structure erected with his money can say, "I aided to erect in our country the most magnificent building the world has ever seen, a palace which, in truth, represents the industry, energy and mechanical genius of the American people."

The manufacturers and the inventors of America are peculiarly interested in the success of this enterprise, for the reason that it is to be their home, where all their inventions and manufactures can be exhibited and sold.

The building will contain 5,330,000 square feet of space.

Purchasers desiring Bonds before an agency is established where they reside, will communicate direct with this office, from where they can be supplied.

Parties desiring to act as agents or to purchase bonds will address

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung trying climate of New England,

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,
Croup,
Diphtheria,
Asthma, etc.,

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

TOT GOES TO CHURCH.

BY MARY C. BARTLETT.

[Christian Union.]

There was quite a commotion at "Arthur Brown's house" upon a certain Sunday morning. He and Agnes were going to take Tot to church.

"She will look as sweet as a pink in her new hat," said Agnes, ecstatically. "Come here, Tot, and let me wash your face."

"No," answered Tot, with becoming gravity, "I'th clean."

"O—h, what a ——. I mean you're very much mistaken. I can see everything you had for breakfast, Tot, almost."

Tot regarded this as a joke, and showed her small teeth approvingly. "What can you thee?" she inquired, curiously.

"Oh, beefsteak and potatoes."

Tot laughed aloud. "But I eated thome more. I eated five things more. What elthe can you thee?"

"I can't see anything else," replied Agnes, waxing impatient. "I haven't time. You must come right straight here if you want to go to church."

Tot came. Agnes mixed the soap and water with a liberal hand. "Now, look out, Tot, shut your eyes."

But poor little Tot wasn't quick enough. The blue eyes winked and blinked, then filled with tears.

"What made you put thoap in my eyeth, Agnes. My eythe wathn't dirty."

"I didn't mean to," said Agnes. "It went in itself. You must be very good now, and let me dress you. Arthur's waiting."

"Little girlth' eyeth never get dirty," remarked Tot, gravely.

"No, indeed. Here's your dress. Put your arm in, quick, Tot."

"Why don't little girlth' eyes get dirty?"

"Oh, because they don't. Stand still now while I fasten these buttons."

Tot stood very still, looking delightfully conscious. "What'll they thay to thith, Agneth?" she inquired, with a satisfied air.

"What'll who say?"

"The teacher, and all the peopleth."

"It isn't the teacher, it's the minister," replied Agnes. "And he won't say a word to you. Nobody will. You must sit as still as a mouse, and just listen. That's all you'll have to do."

"Aren't you almost ready, Agnes?" called Arthur from the hall. "The bell is ringing."

"Coming, coming, coming," cried Agnes, in reply. "Wait just half a minute. Here's your hat, Tot."

And in "just half a minute" the three children started, Agnes and Arthur having each a hand of Tot, and looking supremely happy.

"Won't the teacher thay thomething when he thees me coming?" asked Tot, incredulously.

"No," replied Arthur.

"Won't he thay—not one thingle word?"

"No," answered Agnes. "And you musn't say a word either."

"Oh. Tot would'nt talk in church," I know," said Arthur. "Only very little girls do that. You don't want to say a word, do you, Tot?"

"Yeth."

Agnes and Arthur looked at each other. Talking was the one thing which Tot generally did want to do. In season and out of season her little tongue was never at a loss for something to thay.

The older children became anxious. "Tot," said Agnes, speaking very slowly and impressively, "you must not say a word in church. Not one word. Everybody will look at you if you do. Do you hear?"

"Yeth."

"If you're very good, Tot, I'll buy you a banana to-morrow," said Arthur. "You'll like that, won't you?"

"Yeth."

Arrived at the church door, Tot's sharp eyes spied a group of young girls chatting socially in the vestibule.

"They do talk, Agneth; thome girlth do talk. Look there."

"We're not in church yet," answered Agnes. "Here we come now. Be very still."

As golden-haired Tot walked up the broad aisle, many eyes were fixed upon her. As the little maiden herself expressed it, "The peopleth were glad she came;" and she herself seemed glad of it, too, if one might judge by the beaming smile which she bestowed upon her many admirers.

To Agnes' great relief, the services commenced at once. The playing of the organ, the singing of the thtanding up peopleth who composed the choir held Tot's eyes and ears for a while, and when the "teacher" prayed she listened to his deep, earnest tones, and looked round upon the bowed congregation with a feeling in her little heart something akin to awe.

Then came the singing again, and she stood up, and held her book with the best of them; her only indiscretion (?) being an almost audible question, which quite disturbed Arthur's equanimity.

"If I should thing 'Henny Penny, Ducky Lucky,' what would they thay?"

Agnes shook her head warningly. "I wathn't going to thing it," whispered Tot in extenuation.

The sermon was to the little lady a long, incomprehensible "talking," in which the "teacher" seemed to have altogether too much to thay. She listened attentively for a few minutes, then the blue eyes wandered. Agnes watched them anxiously, hoping to soe the long lashes droop a little, but no. Tot hadn't the slightest idea of going to sleep.

Suddenly the minister warming with the earnestness of the subject, raised his voice. His manner became more impressive. He spoke of sweetness of living upon God,—partaking of his grace, as one partakes of daily bread,—of the blessedness of those who, leaving happiness for duty, are surprised to find the former following in the latter's wake, not as they wish, perhaps, but as God wishes, which is infinitely better.

Tot's eye grew large as she listened. A lady in the next pew brushed away a tear-drop furtively. The child knew perfectly well that the "teacher" had made her cry, but what it was all about, she couldn't divine.

At last came a pause—one of those pauses which mean so much. The minister's eyes were fastened upon Tot, who was resting her tired little limbs by standing, for a moment, upon the seat.

He looked as one who saw not, but Tot looked back at him as one who saw plainly. She smiled sweetly, but the grave face in the pulpit did not relax.

It was singular that, at this moment, should come into her little head the recollection of a circumstance which had happened at home nearly three weeks before—a circumstance which had impressed her very much at the time, but which had been totally forgotten since. Why it should occur to her now, no man knoweth. It was one of the unaccountables. It did occur to her, at all events, and just as the minister was returning to his text, a clear little voice piped out:

"When my mother wath taking down my nurthery book, she found a great big thpider in the book-cathe."

In the stillness every word was distinctly audible. Agnes and Arthur, horror-stricken, hid their blushing faces, and Tot looked straight at the minister, and he looked straight at her. He saw her now.

"A great big thpi—"

"Hush, Tot!" whispered Arthur, with a little shake.

As the minister looked into Tot's innocent face, his countenance changed. It was as if he had become suddenly conscious of the presence of one of the "little ones" whom Jesus loved.

"My dear little girl," said he tenderly, "you must sit very still now, and listen to me. You shall tell me all about it by and by."

Tot subsided at once. She and the "teacher" were firm friends now. She could wait.

Most of the congregation thought the rest of the sermon peculiarly impressive, and when, at the close of the services, the minister walked straight down to Tot's pew, and took her in his arms, you may be sure that spectators were not wanting.

"Now," said he, "tell me all about it."

But the child hid her face upon his shoulder, and spoke not a word.

"Haven't you any more stories to tell me?"

"Yeth," replied Tot, soberly, "but I don't know the retht."

"Queer doings!" muttered Miss Primkins to her neighbor, as they walked out of church. "How *re*diculous for a minister to speak from the pulpit to a baby like that! Parson Potts would have made short work of it. He'd have called the sexton, and had it carried out of church—if the parents hadn't sense enough to do it themselves. He wouldn't stand nothing of the kind."

"But its parents were not there, and the child didn't know any better," was the kind-hearted reply.

"Better keep it at home, then, till it learns. The minister won't make any friends by such performances, I can tell him that."

But Miss Primkins was mistaken. The minister had already made a friend whose love was by no means to be despised. It was Tot, who said complacently to her brother, as they walked home:

"I like that teacher. He 'th a good teacher. Next Thunday I'll go right into that big bracket and kith him."

"That depends," was Arthur's sententious reply.

"I don't believe you know what a naughty girl you've been, Tot," said Agnes, severely.

"Too naughty for bananath?" asked Tot, anxiously.

"I think I shall buy you one this time," replied Arthur, "that is, if you are very sure you can do good next time."

Tot thought she could. She thinks so still, and begs hard every Sunday to be allowed to go and "hear the teacher talk." It has been decided, however, to defer the second going until mamma is able to accompany her. So poor Tot's "next time" has not come yet.

Daily Chronicle.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 8, 1875.

Butler as a Financier.

[Prov. Journal.]

Mr. Benjamin F. Butler is undoubtedly a man of more than average mental ability. He has filled, and now fills a considerable space in the popular horizon; he has an influence, the extent of which it would be difficult to measure, but in a direction and among a class which it would be unwise to ignore. So late as the fourth day of this present month, he has written, for publication, a letter upon the currency question, which so shrewd an observer and so calculating a man would not have written save for the knowledge that it will meet a response more general than any honest and conservative mind is likely to imagine. The first proposition of Gen. Butler, put into plain language, is that any attempt to resume specie payment is a forced contraction of values in the interest only of the national banks. And he asserts that the country will rise up against and frustrate any endeavor to make a promise to pay a dollar anything more than a promise to pay a piece of paper containing an irredeemable promise to pay a dollar.

Now let us see what would be the effect of a carrying out of the Butler plan of inflation in a case which is only one specimen of thousands throughout the country. In 1861, a trustee for an orphan had deposited in a bank ten thousand dollars in gold. This sum he was to invest on the security of real estate for the benefit of the cestui qui trust. He did so invest it at five per cent. interest. It has remained in the same hands till this day. Now Mr. Butler would so inflate the irredeemable currency, that when this money is paid over to the trustees, it may be worth eight, it may be worth five, or it may be worth two thousand dollars, according to the time in the future in which the payment is to be made. And this, Mr. Butler argues, would be a great advantage to the people who do not manage banks, but who live upon their labor supplemented by a small income from interest. The very first class of persons which would be ruined by inflation, would be the women and children who, unable to work, are dependent upon the earnings of their ancestors, and that of the adults who are now passed the day of earning anything. The next class which would be injured, is the depositors in the savings banks, who as a rule are a class which has earned its money by the hardest, and which can ill-afford to lose it. Mr. Butler appears to anticipate with great glee a day when the savings institutions shall be called upon to pay all their depositors the amount due them. But what does this mean? The deposits in the savings banks are in a great measure loaned to persons of small means, who have built for themselves houses, which they can pay for by their earnings under the ordinary conditions of business. But let the banks be called upon for their deposits as a whole, the bank calls upon its mortgagees, estates are sold under the hammer, values are "contracted," and the poor man loses a large part, if not all of his savings. This is what Mr. Butler is laboring to bring about, and this is what some folks call "smart."

N. W. Randall Caged.

[Boston Herald.]

Rev. (?) Nathaniel W. Randall, who was arrested by Col. Kent of the United States secret service on the 8th of last month at Clinton, Me., on suspicion of having altered bank notes from ones to fives and tens and passing them as genuine fives and tens, was tried last week at the United States Circuit Court at Portland and convicted on two counts of attempting to pass altered bills, knowing them to have been altered. On the account for altering he was acquitted. He was ably defended by the Messrs. Clifford & Clifford, and the government was represented by Hon. Nathan Webb, United States district attorney, Randall himself taking part in the defence before the commissioner. On Saturday afternoon Mr. Webb moved for sentence, and when Randall was asked what he had to say before sentence was passed, made a little speech as follows: "Your honor, I am a husband and father, and hope you will be as lenient to me as you can. I have had an impartial trial, but I did not have my witnesses here. I sent for them in time, but they did not get here. I hope you will send me to a jail nearest to my home, which is at Auburn. To err is human, to forgive is divine."

Randall was born in Vassalboro', Me., and is 37 years of age. At the age of 12 years he was sent to sea for three years, when he came home and went to school till he was 19 years old, since which time he had claimed to be a school teacher, and for the past two years a minister. Since his arrest for the offence for which he was convicted, Col. Kent has in the course of his investigations ascertained that Randall has been guilty of gross frauds in obtaining pensions, and had he not been convicted on the charge of counterfeiting, would have at once been arrested on the latter charge. He is a man of pleasing address, but seems to have an element of cussedness in him. In 1867 he turned up in Clinton, Me., and represented himself as a Methodist minister, preached occasionally in schoolhouses, on his own hook, but was not recognized by that denomination. To fill up his time and his wallet he opened a little shop and sold cider and perhaps other dampness. In 1869 the town authorities appointed him on the school committee, but the teachers and people were indignant and ignored him He is said to have had a penchant for committing petty thefts and other mean acts. He strayed away, came back, tried for a commission as trial justice, failed in that, changed his middle name, tried again for a justice's commission, was foiled in his attempt and finally was captured by Officer Kent, who is entitled to much credit for his acumen and perseverance in bringing this pseudo divine to justice. Randall was very indignant when his arrest was published, and threatened dire vengeance on the press for showing him up. He has postponed his threatened libel suits for a few years.

A Skirmish.

[Newmarket Advertiser.]

Rather a comical and somewhat exciting affair occurred in Deerfield, on Thursday of last week, being occasioned by a quarrel which took place at the house of Samuel Woodman. The facts as near as we could ascertain are as follows: Mr. Woodman, who owns quite an extensive tract of farming land (situated on what is called the South road) and being a man who looks after his small change, has carried on the farm this season with the help of a Mr. Stephen Batchelder, and one of Africa's hard skull, woolly headed sons. Well, the day in question, after taking a sufficient quantity of cider to give old nature a joy, the Messrs. Woodman, Batchelder and Jenkins, (the man of color,) started for the farm to thrash out some oats; arriving there they commenced work in earnest, and everything seemed O. K., when Jenkins thought he would have a little fun, and so commenced putting sticks into the driving wheel of the thrashing machine. This he was ordered to quit by Woodman, which he refused to do, whereupon Mr. W. went for him with a pitchfork, and a lively time ensued, in which the dark man got the worst of, but not being daunted by so trifling a matter, he started for the house, returning soon after with a pistol in his hand, vowing that he would shoot Mr. Woodman on the spot. And suiting the action to his words he took aim and fired, but not being a good shot, the ball instead of striking Mr. Woodman, struck Stephen Batchelder in the left cheek, going completely through his cheek, and coming out of his mouth. Jenkins was immediately arrested by Deputy Sheriff A. L. Jenness, and was taken to Candia depot for a trial, but on the way it was talked over and it was concluded to settle the matter, and after due consideration it was decided that Jenkins should pay Batchelder some eight or ten dollars and cost, and Woodman should have for the assault made on him, his Summer wages, giving him in return, an old wagon and two bushels of potatoes, Jenkins to dig them and then leave town.—Newmarket Advertiser.

The Murder of Josie Langmaid

The funeral of Josie Langmaid took place on Wednesday, the 6th. At an early hour people from all parts of the town gathered at the house, and at least a thousand people were present. The services were of the most touching character, and as the vast number of people viewed the remains all were overcome with grief. The body was interred at Chichester.

A further search was commenced immediately after the ceremony, with the hope that traces of the murderer might be found. Hundreds of men scoured the woods in all directions. At about half-past four, a party looking near the road, where the body was found, discovered pieces of the belt-buckle worn by the victim, and lying near it the back comb and switch of false hair she had upon her head. These articles were found in some brakes near the highway, and less than a rod from the place of finding the murderous stick used to strike the girl down, and about eight rods from the body, and gave rise to the theory that the fiend may have struck his victim down, and, taking her to that place, ravished her, and then dragged her to the place where the body was found, when, finding her returning to life, he finished his work by cutting and mutilating her body, severing her head and taking it away.

John Mahar, the tramp arrested at Lowell, is very communicative and exceedingly nervous, often sighing heavily during his conversation. Being warned that his narrative would be important, for or against him, he expressed a determination to be very exact. In his recital as to the facts, he said he was born in Attleboro', Mass., that he has recently worked for an overseer in the Webster Mill, at Suncook, who is likewise a policeman; that he quit voluntarily, because he thought he could do better elsewhere; that he started from Suncook on foot at six o'clock the 3d, Sunday morning, having previously stated it was Saturday, and again Monday; that he got to Hooksett in season to breakfast with Bill Alvin, an acquaintance, at a French boarding house; that he walked to Manchester, which he reached in the afternoon, and where he slept out of doors; that Monday morning he got on the freight train by permission of the conductor and rode to Nashua, arriving at half-past five o'clock; from there he walked to Lowell, getting there at noon; that he stayed out over night and started to leave the city, but after going a short distance returned and spent Tuesday there. When accused of uttering contradictory stories, he said it was the result of liquor-drinking. He was anxious to know how soon he would be liberated and what he was held for. On being told the charge was murder, he became alarmed and besought speedy investigation. Although Pembroke is so near Suncook, he said he never heard of Pembroke before. He says he was never under arrest before, for any offence, and is entirely innocent of this crime.

Jottings.

One of those "sousing" rains which gladden the heart of nature, and all mankind who are safe in-doors, commenced falling on the night of the 6th, and poured down on the house-tops till every shingle responded musically to the rhythm of the lively tattoo. The foliage, now fast changing to inimitable colors of splendor and glory, put off its season of decay for the refreshing hues that are born of Spring, and when the bright sun burst through the clouds, clean streets, clean walks and clean leaves mirrored back the welcome rays. The storm was a good one while it lasted, the wind blowing a gale from the South-east, and the rain falling in torrents.

At the annual meeting of the Kearsarge Mills, held on the 5th, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: James L. Little, President; Wm. H. Thompson, Treasurer; R. B. Adams, Agent; A. R. H. Fernald, Proprietors' Clerk; James L. Little, James H. Beal, Edward Kidder, John F. Anderson, James H. Blake, Josiah G. Abbott, Alexander S. Wheeler, John Stavers, Directors. The general report shows a prosperous business.

Mr. Editor: Again we notice the mean schemes of some of the democratic party in this city. It is the removal of Mr. Enoch Jones as driver of the span of city horses. Mr. Jones has had charge of the horses ever since they were purchased by the city, and under his management they have improved greatly. He is a good and efficient man, and looks to the care of his horses as he would his children, but because some hungry man wants a pap to suck, no matter if he is not competent, a good man must be discharged. It looks as if their ruliags were, feed the party, cost what it may. L.

The Eastern Railroad.

At a meeting of the Directors of the Eastern Railroad, holden October 5, 1875, it was unanimously voted that the President be instructed to issue the following statement for the information of the stockholders:

STATEMENT.

The Directors of the Eastern Railroad Company having received the report of the Committee of Investigation submit to the stockholders the following statement: The entire indebtedness and liabilities of the corporation September 1, 1875, as shown by that report, were as follows:

Bonds		$5,691,448 00
Ten year notes, including Sinking Fund	$2,000,000	5,676,500 00
Notes maturing within eight months		1,677,990 59
Notes maturing within three years		280,000 00
Notes of P. S. & P. R. R. endorsed by E. R. R.		250,000 00
Other debts not bearing interest		344,400 67
		$13,926,248 67
Liability on purchase of Mill Pond Lands in Charlestown, assumed at time of purchase and maturing in 1877		724,125 00
		$14,650,373 67

There is also a contingent liability of the corporation as endorser of bonds of the Portsmouth, Great Falls & Conway Railroad, amounting to $514,000, that mature in 1892. Against this indebtedness, besides the road, stations, lands, equipment and all items properly included in construction account, and representing the whole permanent plant and income earning property of the corporation, it holds the following items of specific property, in excess of what is required for the business of the road, viz:

Lands at Charlestown, not required for use of the road at assessors' valuation		$1,300,200 00
Lands at East Boston, Lynn, Malden and other places on the line of the road, not required for use, and shares in connecting railroads, and other items of property, valued by committee at		1,211,551 44
Balance due from other roads, agents, etc		460,976 72
		$2,972,728 16
To this add:
Coal, wood and iron on hand	$316,229 08
Cash	130,395 66
		$3,419,632 90
The above items do not include the investment of the corporation in the P., G. F. & C. R. R., consisting of 5513 shares of stock, costing		551,300 00
Bonds, costing at par		486,000 00
		$1,037,300 00

The value of this investment depends of course, in great measure, upon the ultimate success of the Eastern Railroad, which operates the P., G. F. and C. R. R. under a lease made by that corporation to the Eastern Railroad in New Hampshire. The Directors see no reason to doubt that before the maturity of its bonds, the P., G. F. and C. R. R. will be self-sustaining and ample security for the debt which they represent, and that its shares will at all times have an appreciable value. Without estimating these securities of the Conway road, it will be seen that if the property owned by the corporation, not required for railroad purposes, could be made available it would reduce the debt of the corporation to $11,230,720.77. The apparent increase in the net amount of debt since the last annual report is in part accounted for by the entire omission of these securities of the P., G. F. and C. R. R. from the present valuation of the property of the road, the diminished valuation put upon the property of the road, by payments made upon pre-existing contracts for steel rails and additional lands in Charlestown, and by discount on sales of securities. The Directors realize that the report of their Investigating Committee and the above statement, based upon that report, are at least as unfavorable to the road as the facts will warrant, but not withstanding the adverse appearance of these figures, made during the most disastrous year since the inauguration of the railway system in this country, they believe that the views of the committee, expressed in the subjoined extract from the concluding paragraph of their report, are true and will commend themselves to the public. "However discouraging the present aspect of the financial condition may seem to be, we must not forget that the increase of population and business is steadily going on. The receipts of the road must continue to grow in the future as they have grown in the past. From 1861 to 1871 the increase of travel was from 1,122,405 in 1861 to 3,545,649, in 1871, so that it is fair to suppose that the increase in population along the line of the road, which has in Essex county alone been 10 per cent. during the last five years, will still continue. We are also aware of the recent great development of business in Maine and New Hampshire, through the increase of railroad facilities, which will probably still grow in the future, so that by carefully watching and accommodating the traffic, and reducing our expenditures to within the lowest practical bounds, we may look forward with confidence to a return of prosperity in the affairs of the road."

By order of the Directors.

JNO. WOOLDREDGE, President.

The Manchester Mirror calls for a ton and a half of corned beef and ham, fifteen hundred loaves of bread, and fifty bushels of doughnuts, as a nucleus for the veteran soldiers ration-al disposition of at the reunion. The court of inquiry at Mare Island navy yard into the defalcation of Paymaster Spaulding's clerk, Pinney, proceeds with closed doors. Paymaster Spaulding promises a revelation that will make a fluttering among the politicians, as regards the influences which retained Pinney in his position, if the inquiry is pressed too hard upon him. In this connection it is susceptible of proof that a certain paymaster, anxious to be assigned to that station, made application for such assignment and was told he would be obliged to confer with a certain Congressman. The paymaster did so, and declined to press his application, stating that the conditions of securing this assignment were such that as an honorable man he could not accept them. He was detailed to other duty. Gen. Lagrange, Superintendent of the Mint at San Francisco has tendered his resignation, owing to the connection of his name with the appointment of Pinney.

A mysterious outrage is reported in Pawtucket, Rhode Island, where the dwelling of widow Dora Wilkinson was entered and chloroform applied to herself and a young lady occupying the same bed. Mrs. Wilkinson was dragged to an adjoining chamber and outraged. The man escaped as the woman recovered consciousness. Mrs. Wilkinson is about 35 years old, of an entirely respectable character, and went from New Hampshire. Parties in the house were awakened by the struggles, but before they could get to her apartments the villain had accomplished his crime and fled.

OF MICHIGAN LANDS,

FOR SALE!

The Lands of the Jackson, Lansing & Saginaw Railroad Company are now Offered For Sale.

They are situated along its railroad and contain large tracts of excellent FARMING and PINE Lands. The farming lands include some of the most fertile and well-watered hardwood lands in the State. They are timbered mainly with hard-maple and beech; soil black, sandy loam, and abound in springs of purest water. Michigan is one of the least indebted and most prosperous States in the Union, and its farmers have a greater variety of crops and resources than any Western state. While some of the Prairie States may produce corn in great abundance, they have no other resource, and when this crop fails destitution follows, as has been the case the past year in Kansas and Nebraska. DR. QUAIN'S MAGIC CONDITION PILLS.

NEW TESTIMONIALS.

— FOR —

Weak Lungs, Constipation, Lameness, Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Paralysis, Poor Blood and Kidney Troubles.

One Box Dr. Quain's Condition Pills "Nearly Cured Where All Else Failed."

LOWELL, MASS, July 20th, 1874.

T. W. LANE:—I have used one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, am glad to state in my case they have proved all that you claim for them. I have been troubled with Bad Blood and all its consequent diseases, and have tried several kinds of Bitters and Pills without receiving much benefit, until I tried the CONDITION PILLS, and they have nearly cured where all else failed. Please send me another package as soon as convenient.

Yours, very truly,
J. D. WHITAKER.

Testimony of a Clergyman---Liver and Kidney Troubles.

EAST TILTON, N. H., April 14, 1875.

MR. LANE.—Dear Sir:—DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS are not only the best, but the very best I ever used. My wife has been troubled with Kidney Complaint many years; one-half of a package has cured her, so that she feels as well as ever. I have been troubled with Liver Compaint for many years; one-half of a package has done me more good than all the Pills I ever took. One of my neighbors took them, who has been troubled with Liver Complaint for many years; three Pills have helped him. Your Pills, where used, commend their virtues. Please send to my address one package.

REV. JOHN DAVIS.

Liver Compaint and Rheumatism so that he Could not Sleep Nights.

I was born and always lived in Pittsfield, N. H.; am now 50 years old; been troubled with Liver Complaint for 30 years, and Rheumatism for 20 years, sometimes so I could not sleep nights. I have taken one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, and they have done me more good and relieved more suffering than all the medicine I have taken during my life. S. S. RING.

Pittsfield, N. H., Dec. 17, 1874.

Fever and Ague.

NEW BOSTON, N. H., Feb. 1, 1875.

T. W. LANE.—Sir:—Last month I sent to you for a package of DR. QUAIN'S PILLS. I had tried five so-called ague cures, and I received more benefit from five of your pills than from all the "Cures" "Cholagogues," "Quinine," &c., that I have taken in two years. I cannot recommend it too highly for diseases resulting from long standing Fever and Ague.

Yours, most respectfully,
MRS. C. GARLAND.

Scaly Humor Cured by One Package---Liver Complaint Helped.

NORTH SALEM, N. H., Jan. 5, 1875.

MR. LANE.—Dear Sir:—Your Pills are all they are recommended. I was troubled with a Scaly Humor on my legs; I took one package and my legs are quite smooth. My wife was troubled with Liver Complaint; she took one package and they helped her greatly.

Yours, with respect,
JOHN H. BLAKE.

From a Leading Citizen of Rindge.

WEST RINDGE, Cheshire Co., N. H., November 17, 1874.

THOS. W. Lane:—After taking three packages of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, I am prepared to say they are the very best, for I have tried a great many kinds, and faithfully too, believing they would help me, to no effect.—These I do believe are the very best ever made; just the kind a man needs. May they be spread all over the wide world, and Dr. Quain's name a household word.

Yours truly,
ASA STICKNEY.

Felt Better, Stronger and Gained Flesh in One Week.

AFTER TAKING DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS.

ROLLINSFORD, N. H.

THOS. W. LANE:—I commenced to take DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, and in one week I was heavier, felt better, and was stronger than before, and any one troubled with BAD BLOOD can find sure remedy in these Pills.

L. M. YEATON.
Nov. 3, 1874.

CHESTER, N. H., Feb. 24, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have been out of health for some time, and I took a very bad cold and it left my lungs in a very weak state. I received DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS and took them according to the directions, and my lungs are some better. I can recommend them to any one who is troubled with weak lungs, for they have done me good, and I think another package will cure me. Dr. Quain's Pills ought to be known throughout the world. Please send me another package as soon as convenient.

Yours, &c., CYRUS LANE.

HILLSBOROBRIDGE, Feb. 25, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—Dr. Quain's Condition Pills are the best I ever used for lameness and pain. The first dose I took removed the pain and lameness that I have been troubled with for several years. Others have used quite a number of the pills besides myself. Please send another package by return of mail.

MRS. DANIEL KIMBALL.

GILMANTON I. W., N. H., Feb. 25, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have been taking Dr. Quain's Condition Pills, and can recommend them as far ahead of common pills for constipation of the bowels; they do not have the debilitating effect of common purgatives I have taken.

MRS. J. B. GOODWIN.

NORTHWOOD CENTRE, March 1, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I saw Dr. Quain's Condition Pills highly recommended, and sent for a package, and I feel that they have done more for me than all the medicine I have taken for years, and can freely recommend them to others, as a good and sure medicine. Please send me another package as soon as possible.

MARTHA NORCROSS.

BRISTOL, N. H., Feb. 27, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have made a fair trial of these Condition Pills, and liked them very much. I think they are all they are recommended. They are a good Liver invigorator.

N. F. DANFORTH.

SALEM DEPOT, N. H., March 8, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE:—I think these pills (Dr. Quain's Condition Pills) are all they claim to be; my wife and I are both victims of Liver and Kidney Complaint, and general debility. We have taken about half (one) package of each, and find a marked improvement in our health. I want four packages to give away in the north part of Vermont, to friends up there. I enclose $2.00, and if you can, send me four Packages.

ROYAL SCOTT.

SOUTH PLATTSBURGH, N. Y., March 11, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE:—I have given Dr. Quain's Condition Pills a trial, and find I can honestly recommend them, they having materially improved the soreness and lameness with which I have been afflicted since getting upon my feet after the Paralysis of left side that I suffered last October. I desire you to send me another package as soon as convenient, as I am anxious to continue their use. Though not now a resident of New England, I have lived in Central Vermont more than fifty years, and trust Dr. Quain's Pills will not long be new in that section.

MOSES SHELDON.

THOS. W. Lane:—I have been troubled with Biliousness, Headache, and Dizziness, for a long time, and had the Dyspepsia so bad there were but few kinds of food my stomach would bear at all. I commenced taking your pills, have taken most of one package, and now enjoy eating as well as I ever did, am not troubled with dizziness unless by taking cold, and have been greatly benefited by the use of them.

A. L. PAGE.

FRANCESTOWN, March 13, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE:—I have found Dr. Quain's Condition Pills to be all you claim for them in Kidney Complaint, poor blood, and weak nerves. May they be circulated everywhere, and found in every household where medicine is needed. I enclose 50 cts. for another package as soon as convenient.

JOHN T. FELCH.

Better Health than for 10 Years.

CHESTER, N. H., Oct. 17, 1874.

MR. LANE:—I have taken one package of Condition Pills; find them in my case all they are recommended; have not enjoyed so good health for the last ten years as I have since I commenced taking the Condition Pills. Shall be happy to recommend them to others. WILLIAM H. FELLOWS.

☞ DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS are sold by the Agent of the American Medicine Co. A package will be forwarded upon receipt of fifty cents, by THOMAS W. LANE, agent, Manchester, N. H.

M. T. BETTON & CO., No. 16 Congress street, Main & Winchester's Block.

The Lakeside Library

is published semi-monthly, and each issue contains a COMPLETE NOVEL, by one of the great authors of the world, as Charles Reade, Dickens, Scott, Anthony Trollope, Jules Verne, etc., etc. The completion of long and important novels in a single issue, is the most unique and valuable feature yet introduced into the periodical literature of the day, and is peculiar to The Lakeside Library.

Each issue of The Library contains a Complete Novel, that would cost in the book stores, on the average, $1.50 each; yet the price of the same in The Library is only 10 cents if you buy a single copy from your newsdealer, or only 9 cents if you subscribe for a year. The whole series of 24 numbers will contain Twenty-two Complete Novels, worth about $40.00, but costs only $2.15 in The Library!

Occasionally we shall issue double numbers, to contain unusually long and important works, as "The Law and The Lady," by Wilkie Collins, and Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Seas," by Jules Verne. When this is necessary, both numbers of the story will be issued together, so that the complete work will be in the reader's hands at once. In such cases three numbers will be issued in one month. ☞ Hence all subscriptions are received for 24 numbers.

Our next issue, Nos. 14 and 15, will be a splendid Double number complete and unabridged with Eight characteristic illustrations, containing the famous

Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Seas,"

By JULES VERNE.

This wonderful book is descriptive of a voyage of 20,000 leagues under the surface of the sea! No one acquainted with Verne's peculiar and dramatic style need be told that this, his greatest book, is most intensely interesting. It lays bare the mysteries of the mighty deep—its sunken wrecks; submarine forests; the grotesque, hideous and awful creatures who dwell therein; the beautiful coral caves; its treasures of gold, silver and jewels lost in Spanish ships of olden days. Yet so quaintly, and with with such an air of candor is the story told, that you can hardly believe you are not reading a transcript from a ship's log-book. Sent by mail by the publishers, post-paid, for 25 cents.

☞ There is only one other edition published, which costs $4.00.

Subscribe now, and get all the back numbers, that your set may be complete. The entire set of 24 numbers gives you a really choice library of Standard and Famous Novels, worth in book form about $40.00, and at a cost of only $2.15, including prepayment of postage—or about the price of one single book in ordinary book form. "The Portent," for instance, costs as a Bound Book, 1.75, and is published in No 12 of The Library for only 10 cents! And "Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Seas" costs as a Bound Book $4.00, and is published in Nos. 14 and 15 of The Library for only 20 cents!

☞ Each of these books is complete and unabridged, and costs in the bookstores from $1.0 to $4.00. Order a few samples.

LOCAL AGENTS WANTED.

An Agent Wanted for Each Town and County in the United States.

Parties desiring to act as agents must accompany their application by a letter of recommendation as to character and responsibility from and signed by the Editor of a newspaper published in the town or county for which the agent proposes to act. The agency is to sell the bonds of the Industrial Exhibition Company.

BONDS, $20 EACH.
HALF BONDS, $10 EACH.
QUARTER BONDS, $5 EACH.

The Industrial Exhibition Company will furnish agents with circulars, etc., etc.

Each newspaper published in the town where an agent is located will, as soon as the agency is established, be given an advertisement, advertising such agency and the Company, and fully explaining the plans, purposes and objects of the Company. Such advertisement will continue in such papers as long as an agency is successfully conducted.

The Industrial Exhibition Company is the first to adopt the plan so long in use by the European governments of issuing bonds when the principal is made secure and not risked, but where there is a chance for a large premium, an investment of $20 is sure to return to the investor $21—one dollar more than cost—and the holder of a $20 Bond may obtain a premium either of $50, $100, $200, $500, $1,000, $3,000, $5,000, $10,000, $25,000 or $100,000. The interest, which is ordinarily distributed to all the bond holders pro rata, is in this loan distributed by chance. The purchaser of a bond knows he will receive back his investment, with a small rate of interest, he has a chance in the above named premiums, which are simply the distribution of interest on the whole loan.

Each bond participates in four drawings each year, until it has drawn a premium, when it is surrendered, the premium paid, and the bond cancelled.

The Industrial Exhibition Company, under a special charter granted by the State of New York, is given authority to issue these bonds. The Legislature of the State, recognizing the great benefits which will arise from the success of this enterprise, have exempted all the real estate and property of the Company from taxation and assessments for five years, and has also conferred other great privileges.

Every American who understands the purposes of this Company will, of a necessity, feel a pride in aiding it to a successful termination.

Each individual who buys a bond becomes an owner and an interested party, and when he views the structure erected with his money can say, "I aided to erect in our country the most magnificent building the world has ever seen, a palace which, in truth, represents the industry, energy and mechanical genius of the American people."

The manufacturers and the inventors of America are peculiarly interested in the success of this enterprise, for the reason that it is to be their home, where all their inventions and manufactures can be exhibited and sold.

The building will contain 5,330,000 square feet of space.

Purchasers desiring Bonds before an agency is established where they reside, will communicate direct with this office, from where they can be supplied.

Parties desiring to act as [agents or to purchase bonds will address

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

s no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung trying climate of New England,

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

USE

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

An Obtuse Man.

[Detroit Free Press.]

She was a stylish young lady about 18 years old, and to accommodate a friend she took the baby out for an airing. She was wheeling it up and down the walk when an oldish man, very deaf, came along and inquired for a certain person supposed to live on that street. She nearly yelled her head off trying to answer him, and he looked around, caught sight of the baby, and said:

"Nice child, that. I suppose you feel proud of him?"

"It isn't mine," she yelled at him.

"Boy, eh? Well, he looks like you."

"It isn't mine," she yelled again, but he nodded his head and continued:

"Twins, eh? Where's the other one?"

She started off with the cab, but he followed and asked:

"Did it die of colic?"

Despairing of making him understand by word of mouth, she pointed to the baby, at herself, and then shook her head.

"Yes—yes, I see—'tother twin in the house. Their father is fond of them, of course?"

She turned the cab and hurried the other way, but he followed and asked:

"Do they kick around much nights?"

"I tell you 'taint mine," she shouted, very red in the face.

"I think you're wrong there!" he answered; "children brought up on the bottle are apt to pine and die."

She started on a run for the gate, but before she had opened it he came up and asked:

"Have to spank 'em once in a while, I suppose?"

She made about twenty gestures in half a minute and he helped the cab through the gate and said:

"Our children were all twins, and I'll send my wife to give you some advice. You see——"

But she picked up a flower-pot and flung it at him. He jumped back, and as she entered the house he called out:

"Hope insanity won't break out on the twins!"

The Tare.

[N. O. Repub.]

A "Ruby" customer tackled a dignified looking member of the Chamber of commerce, the other evening, as the member came out from the meeting, and attempted to gain some commercial information. It was a mellow evening, and the placid moon sent down soft rays on the soft head of the customer, as pillowed against an iron post it rested.

"What's er Chamber been doin'?"

"Been fixing a tare on sugar."

"Sno such thing."

"I ought to know."

"Sno such thing. Can't have no tare on sugar."

"You know nothing about sugar. Don't bother me."

"Know nothing about sugar? I was raised on sugar; I was. I always took it in mine. Yer bloody old Chamber ain't been fixing for a tare on sugar. Take a drink, deacon; I'll show you what a tare is; I am a spoiling to go on one."

The deacon told the customer to come around in the morning, when the atmosphere was less mixed, and he passed on.

"The old buffer," said the customer. "Talking about going on a tare with sugar. He's drunk, and he'll go home and say 'twas the sugar. I've been there; but the old woman told me my breath was a little off from sugar. The Chamber fellows are fixing for a tare on whisky, and I know it. What did the old chap say about being mixed? It's] impossible to mix things like whisky and sugar, I say, Bob, can you mix—"

The customer disappeared behind the green screen, as if to get the opinion of the barkeeper, and he was seen no more until he was set out on the sidewalk with the beer kegs when shutting up time came. He had struggled with commerce, and had fallen. Yet he was a man, for when trying to pull his coat off in an argument with the barkeeper, he had said so several times, distinctly.

More Ancient Than Honorable.

[N. Y. Graphic.]

That odd chap, Geo. Alfred Townsend, writes the following squib to the New York Graphic from Baltimore: How slowly the low tide-water country picks up, though many cities are strung along it, neighboring and rich. The mosquito and the ague are the small pests of some of this country, yet until within one or two generations our fathers lived nowhere but on the marshes and the rivers. George Whitefield preached with mosquitoes singing out of his hymn-book; Washington wrote his farewell address probably with a horse-fly in his ear; Mrs. John Adams was lost in the woods going to Washington to rule over the state dinners. But in our day the shoemaker's wife declines to accept of a villa because of the chills and the gnats. The age is too natty.

It appears to me that the suppression of the ague is attended by a decline of religious interest. Here is a point for Moody and Sankey—what extraordinary names are these, dreadfully low-spirited! Religious revivals follow the course of the fever and ague; each of the great denominations began in low tide-water, where quinine was assisted to expel the miasma by religious depression; as we mounted the highlands and left the poison of the alluvial below us, we forthwith had whiskey insurrections, border feuds, and so forth; down in the Ohio Valley faith revived and people had the jerks, illuminations, second sight, and so forth, and finally the Mormons started up on the swampy parts of the Cayuga and the Missouri and shook off a little theocratic empire. Down on the eastern shore of Maryland there is as much religion as ever; over in lower Jersey, where the sand absorbs the malaria, there is none at all. These facts would seem to indicate that the first step toward a religious revival is to abolish quinine.

News and Notes.

The Albany Journal says: "The practical question is, who have caused and swelled the taxes, and who have done effective work in cutting them down? In the management of the canals the democrats have spent 50 per cent more for ordinary repairs than the republicans, and nearly 100 per cent., or $1,000,000 a year more, for extraordinary repairs. Out of every hundred dollars collected, the democrats have paid into the treasury only $28.48, while the republicans have paid in $75.86, or nearly three times as much. In consequence of this fidelity, the republicans were able to pay off seventeen millions of canal debt while they had control, and the democrats have not paid off a million. But still more directly to the point, the republicans, by wiping out twenty millions of the general indebtedness of the State within the last four years, have made it certain that the State tax for the next year will be reduced $5,000,000. They do not simply promise this reduction—they point to it as the assured and certain result of their management of the finances."

Engineers have commenced the survey for a highway to the Tip-Top House, Mount Chocorua, to be built by subscription.

Hon. L. W. Pond, one of the heaviest manufacturers of machinists' tools in Worcester, Mass., has disappeared under very mysterious circumstances. He went to Boston on a business trip, intending to return the same night. While in Boston he collected about $2,500, but instead of returning, telegraphed his son from Fall River that he was going to New York on business. He took the steamer Providence for New York. He or a man supposed to be him, was last seen in a state-room on the boat. The next morning a coat, hat and pair of shoes, which have been identified as Mr. Pond's, were found in the state-room, and one of the berths had evidently been occupied. His money and watch are missing. It is believed by members of his family that he has been murdered.

Gen. John M. Haines, late Adjutant General of this State, died in Charlestown, Mass., on the 5th.

A fire at Concord, on the 5th, destroyed a three-story brick building on Main street, at the south end of the city, owned by L. T. Woodman & Sons. The building was entirely destroyed. It was occupied by Woodman & Sons, whose loss on the building, stock and machinery is about $9000; insured. The other occupants were: H. M. Ray, carriage maker; loss, about $500. H. O. Mathews, painter; loss, $300; no insurance; J. P. Leavitt, blacksmith; loss, about $300; no insurance.

John Worthen, of Enfield, thrashed out with his little machine, 147 bushels of oats in 158 minutes.

A writer in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat is enthusiastic over the discovery that a variety of the smart weed, which grows wild in Missouri in such profusion as to be a nuisance, surpasses bark in its tanning qualities.

Nearly half a million photographs and lithographs of Charlie Ross have been printed and distributed all over the civilized world.

The Golden Age, founded by Theodore Tilton, has stopped publication. Mr. Tilton has done nothing for it lately, but the public did not realize that, and it was snuffed out by the Beecher trial. Mr. Clarke of the Graphic has recently had it in charge, and will now give up his whole time to the illustrated paper.

A defective chimney caused the destruction of the dwelling-house of Levi Mooney in Canaan, with a portion of its contents. nsured for $300.

A newspaper correspondent, looking pale and haggard, passed through the city yesterday. He was from the Ohio campaign. Within a few days, from seven hundred to eight hundred more speeches are to be made in the State, and General Thomas Ewing and General Woodford are to hold eight discussions on the finances. If all the wind expended in this contest should suddenly concentrate somewhere and start for somewhere else, the rest of the tornadoes would retire from the business.—Louisville Cour.-Jour.

Mr. T. J. Wiggin of Bedford has a parsnep which although but an inch and a quarter in diameter at the top end, had stretched out to four feet and seven inches in length, tapering to a fine string at the end.

Charles Dickens, Wilkie Collins, and many other distinguished visitors to New York, have made their home at the Westminster Hotel, from which fact it may be inferred that the Westminster is one of the most select and comfortable of the New York hotels. The rates of charges, however, are not higher than those of other first-class houses, but the unexcelled accommodations, the excellent and convenient location, and the comparative quiet of the neighborhood, give it peculiar and decided advantage. It is conducted on the European plan, and located almost in the centre of the city, on 16th street and Irving Place, but one block from Broadway and Union Square, near the great stores and theatres. See card in advertising columns.

The critics who were all severe on the President for keeping horses are now equally incensed because he has sold them off.

We are rejoiced to say that there are good reasons for believing that the tide of general business affairs is turning; that the ebb is ended and that the flood is rising. Newark is a business bee-hive. Nowhere is any change felt sooner than here. A Journal reporter has spent two days interviewing representatives of our leading industries, and reports a condition of things no less cheering than surprising. Nowhere were matters found to be any worse than they have been, and in many places things were found to be greatly improved. Hatting, we are told, was never better. Leading firms say that every journeyman in Newark is on full time and more men in demand. Other equally important branches of Newark's industry are reported to be in equally improved condition.—Newark Journal, Sept. 29th.

The New York Milliner and Dressmaker, a very handsomely illustrated magazine, devoted not alone to fashions, but containing the choicest selections for family reading, art, science, home culture and general literature, will be sent to any address until January, 1877, on receipt of One Dollar, including a choice of either of the beautiful Chromos, entitled "The Old Oaken Bucket" or "Our Little Darling." A hog disease is desolating the porcine tribe of Cincinnati, and 1000 have died.

Many fancy that much currency means high wages. They forget that inflated prices hurt more than inflated wages help them. In times of fluctuation, "wages, of all things, go up last and least, and fall down first and lowest."

H. Quince, a Wilton correspondent, has the following on politeness and dignity. At Lyndeboro' a very fleshy lady weighing some 300 pounds stopped at a friend's house to rest on her way home. After waiting half an hour she hailed a stranger driving by and asked the privilege of riding home with him. "Certainly, madam," said he, and added, "shall esteem it an honor the favor of your company." As the wagon was quite high she asked her lady friend if she would not give her a "boost" which she did, the gentleman also dropping the reins, taking the lady's hand in the way of assistance; but the lady's weight (some 300 pounds before mentioned,) proved too much for the gentleman and a good deal too much for the lady, for she lost her balance, and in falling pulled the man from the wagon, and; her lady assistant assumed a horizontal position in her door yard. The fat lady apologized and suggested that she had better get a chair from the house, and started to get it, but while absent the stranger gathered up the reins and drove away without regarding in the least the shouts for an extension of the gallantry already offered.

The United States steamer Swatara has been ordered to Brazil to bring to this country the remnant of the Southern people who left the country after the war to settle there. This Colony is reduced to abject poverty. The Swatara will then visit Venezuela and remind that Government of its unpaid claims.

The N. Y. Post says that some of the largest exporters of breadstuffs and provisions, while complaining of the condition of the gold and foreign exchange markets, say they nevertheless are doing a good business and that there are unmistakable indications of a large trade in their line from now until Spring. There is an active export demand for what they have to ship, and grain is beginning to come forward in large amounts from the West. This movement of grain will quicken trade in all departments.

The woolen mills at South Berwick have orders sufficient to give business to double their capacity.

The Portland Advertiser is disconsolate over the fact that there were 3145 voters in Maine who, at the recent election, voted against a constitutional provision against bribery at elections.

Before Delano's successor is appointed it should be ascertained that he is thoroughly rested. It took Columbus 42 per cent. of his time to get over his fits of fatigue.—Cincinnati Gazette.

Bowles has a bad stomach and refuses his Rice. One thousand years hence, when the great seal of the heavens is broken, a man named Bowles will rise to remark: "Unless we have Charles Francis Adams there can be no general judgment." If the motion is entertained Adams will merely reply: "Take me out of that crowd."—Graphic.

The victory of Monday was not a republican victory, although the republican party profited by it. It was a victory of the honest citizens over the demagogues and political rings; and the more of such victories the merrier.—New Haven Journal & Courier.

Gen. Stewart L. Woodford, who emerged from his political retirement to do such excellent service to the cause of hard money in Ohio, without compensation, and to the neglect of his private affairs, has been obliged to decline all invitations to speak in Pennsylvania. He will not be able to take part in the New-York canvass, his business requiring his attention.

We don't want to be over-sanguine, but it really looks as if the republicans were going to win a good old-fashioned victory in Massachusetts. We were willing to discount the majority for 10,000 a week ago, but we want 30,000 now.—Lowell Courier.

Geo. W. Pemberton, who murdered Mrs. Bingham at East Boston, was hanged at Boston at ten o'clock, Friday. He made no confession and died in fifteen seconds.

Two crops of potatoes in one year is an unusual thing for New Hampshire, yet Mr. Daniel Dearborn of Woodstock has just harvested the second crop, both good ones, from the same lot. The last crop was planted July 28th and dug October 2d.

The Boston republicans have opened the campaign with an earnestness and enthusiasm that promises splendid results. Faneuil Hall was crowded on Thursday evening, and speeches were made by Hon. Richard H. Dana, Jr., Vice President Wilson, Hon. Alexander H. Rice and others. As an indication of a revival of the old-time spirit of republican progress and determination to do, it is especially encouraging to republicans in other States, who have looked with regret on the continued apathy maintained in the old Bay State, after its glorious record with John A. Andrew in the executive chair. We hail it as a token that in the important struggle at hand, Massachusetts is again to lead off with an old-fashioned, rousing majority for the republican ticket.

The Supreme Court of the United States, Chief Justice Waite delivering the opinion, has decided the old claim of Woodhull, Anthony, et al., that woman was entitled to vote under the Fourteenth Amendment—and decided it unanimously in the negative, reaffirming the principle that the right of conferring suffrage on any one rests only with the States, and could not therefore have been exercised by the Fourteenth Amendment.

The tramp arrested at Lowell on suspicion of murdering Josie Langmaid has been discharged, having proved that he was not in Pembroke. Sheriff Hildreth is of the opinion that William Drew is not the guilty party, but as he has been arrested and suspected so long he considers it due to the prisoner that he should be pronounced innocent beyond a doubt before his release. At the mills of Osgood and one other owned by the Cloughs, stakes exactly like the one used before it was cut off and whittled were found. They are sawed out to be used as uprights in mangers of horse stables, and are got out in many different lengths. The stick used by the murderer now seems the only remaining clue to be used by the officers, and there seems to be no definite idea entertained by them as to the criminal, though all seem to agree in the opinion that it must have been some one living in the vicinity.

George W. Nowell and Charles H. Harriman of Great Falls were arrested in Fall River, for embezzling money from their employers, Hodsdon Bros. Their whereabouts were discovered by the Post Office detectives.

In the Circuit Court at Nashua, Henry M. Fairfield recovered $6000 from the town of Amherst for an injury caused by a defective highway.

It is reported that Hon. Jacob Hart Ela, of New Hampshire, Fifth Auditor of the Treasury, is to be Secretary of the Interior.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Portsmouth and Concord Railroad was held at Manchester on Friday. The road is in a flourishing condition; 1048 shares were represented, and the following officers were elected unanimously: Directors, Stephen Kenrick, of Franklin; Samuel N. Bell, of Manchester; Samuel P. Dow, of Epping; Benjamin F. Martin, of Manchester; Joseph B. Walker, of Concord; Nathan Parker, of Manchester, and John J. Pickering, of Portsmouth. At a subsequent meeting of the Directors Hon. Stephen Kenrick was re-elected President and Col. William H. Hackett, of Portsmouth, Clerk.

Mr. Rufus Hatch's yacht Resolute lost a race with yacht Estelle on the 5th, by time allowance. The race was sailed in a tremendous sea and gale, the sea continually sweeping the decks of both yachts. The Resolute lost a topmast and broke foreboom.

It is estimated that over five thousand weavers are now idle at Fall River, many of them being rejected by the different mills, owing to the part taken by them in the recent "vacation," and others lost their places in consequence of new help coming in while they hesitated. There are also quite a number of spinners and carders compelled to remain out, their names appearing upon the "black list."

The special town meeting at Great Falls, to take action in building a new bridge between Great Falls and Berwick, referred the matter to a committee of three to get estimates for wood and iron bridges, to confer with the authorities at Berwick and report at another meeting to be held Nov. 3.

Attorney-General Clarke has filed an information in the Circuit Court of Coos County against the Portland and Ogdensburg Railroad corporation, asking for an injunction restraining them rom building their road from the point intersecting with the Boston, Concord and Montreal in Dalton, thence through Carroll to the eastern line of Vermont, instead of building through the towns of Littleton and Bethlehem, as provided in their charter. The charter provides that the latter route shall be followed and no other unless found impracticable on account of grades. The information alleges that the grades have not been impracticable, and the charter has been violated, to the great damage of the citizens of the State, etc.

The competitive examination for a West Point cadetship from the Third Congressional District (Col. H. W. Blair's) occurred at West Lebanon, and resulted in the recommendation of Edward H. Catlin, of Meriden, over eight competitors.

A tramp called at the residence of Norman Boynton in South Coventry, Conn., on the 3rd, and was taken violently sick. He was taken care of by Mr. Boynton, but died. From a paper found in his possession his name is supposed to be George Somers, of Webster, Mass.

A Narrow Escape.

A well known citizen of the South End awoke from a sound sleep just before the clock struck twelve on Thursday night, and feeling that something was wrong, arose, and looking out of the window, saw a bright, glowing light, about the bigness of a man's hat, burning near the foundation of the wood shed. Hastily dressing, he rushed down stairs, seized a bucket of water and speeding to the scene of the fire, soon quenched it; although it took three pails of water to fully extinguish it, so great a headway had been obtained. A pile of soot, which was supposed to be perfectly free from anything like even a spark of fire, had, during the day, been deposited in the corner of the yard against the sill of the wood shed in question, and for twelve hours the little treacherous spark that lurked in the pile was quietly at work burning the mass of soot to a live heap of fire, that soon communicated with the building with the result as above stated.

But the most singular part of the story is in relation to the matter of awakening in season to prevent a conflagration that must have been of great magnitude from the fact of the compactness of the buildings surrounding that which took fire. A brisk wind blew open a blind and then flapped a curtain with such vigor as to wake one of the sleepers, who "roused up" to close the window; but the breeze dying away a little, and not being thoroughly awakened, he dozed off into sleep again. Again the friendly wind seized the curtain and shook it with such force as to compel our citizen to get up; and while attempting to lower the window he discovered the fire! He is quite willing to let his friends call it a "special providence," if they like.

Maggie Mitchell.

Many of the men and women who have become prominent upon the stage have a popularity largely of a local character. One will be a favorite in San Francisco, for instance, but fail to attract in the East after the first curiosity is satisfied. Another may be a great local favorite in Chicago, or at the South, and fail utterly when transferred to the boards of the principal theatres of this vicinity, and made to face the critical audiences of New York and Boston. And some who please these audiences find very different greetings when they appear in the West and South. But Maggie Mitchell seems to please everybody, and at a second appearance anywhere always attracts a larger audience than on a first visit. She is a favorite in every city she visits, large or small; more generally so, probably, than any actress now before the public. Here is what the Boston Journal says of her recent successful engagement in that city:

"Maggie Mitchell concludes to-day one of the most successful engagements ever played in this city by any artist. Night after night the spacious theatre has been crowded to overflowing, and this, too, on the stormiest of nights. Flippant critics have counseled the withdrawal of the dramas Miss Mitchell has made so familiar, but we think the enormous business of the past two weeks, added to the great success which attended the representations of "Jane Eyre," warrants their continuance. When audiences of three thousand persons are gathered to witness "Fanchon," "The Pearl of Savoy," or "Little Barefoot," while hundreds upon hundreds are turned away from the doors, it is pretty good evidence that the public are not tired of witnessing these pieces. It is needless at this late day to enter into any extended discussion of Miss Mitchell's beautiful impersonation of Amry. Like her Jane Eyre, her Fanchon and her Marie, it is a perfect performance in its way."

And so it is everywhere; not for one night alone but for a succession of nights, the people turn out to witness the performances of Maggie Mitchell. None of the "tragedy queens" attract night after night as do the lighter personations of this vivacious and charming actress. She thoroughly pleases the great public, that is certain. There is no yawning in the audience when Maggie is upon the stage, and no desire to have the curtain fall; and after it has fallen, and the audience carry away the memory of a pleasant evening, they are glad of an early opportunity to greet the actress again.

An Unanswerable Argument.
The strongest argument which can be urged against the advisability of administering such corrosive and nerve-destroying poisons as arsenic and quinine for intermittent and remittent fevers, is the vastly superior success in the prevention and cure of such diseases of a medicine which is the very antipode of the above named drugs, both in respect of its composition and the results wrought by it. Such a medicine is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a purely vegetable preparation, which not only eradicates with wonderful promptitude every trace of fever and ague, and kindred types of malarious disease from the system, but is a certain preventive of all maladies begotten of miasma-tainted air and water. These results mineral anti-febrile remedies do not effect with certainty, and their continued use entails consequences highly pernicious to the system. The Bitters, on the contrary, not only afford speedy relief, but establish health on a permanent basis.

500,000 ACRES

OF MICHIGAN LANDS,

FOR SALE!

The Lands of the Jackson, Lansing & Saginaw Railroad Company are now Offered For Sale.

They are situated along its railroad and contain large tracts of excellent FARMING and PINE Lands. The farming lands include some of the most fertile and well-watered hardwood lands in the State. They are timbered mainly with hard-maple and beech; soil black, sandy loam, and abound in springs of purest water. Michigan is one of the least indebted and most prosperous States in the Union, and the farmers have a greater variety of crops and resources than any Western state. While some of the Prairie States may produce corn in great abundance, they have no other resources, and when this crop fails destitution follows, as has been the case the past year in Kansas and Nebraska. For Maps, Circulars and further information, apply to or address. O. M. BARNES, Land Commissioner, Lansing, Michigan.

CONDITION PILLS.

NEW TESTIMONIALS.

— FOR —

Weak Lungs, Constipation, Lameness, Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Paralysis, Poor Blood and Kidney Troubles.

One Box Dr. Quain's Condition Pills "Nearly Cured Where All Else Failed."

LOWELL, MASS, July 20th, 1874.

T. W. LANE:—I have used one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, am glad to state in my case they have proved all that you claim for them. I have been troubled with Bad Blood and all its consequent diseases, and have tried several kinds of Bitters and Pills without receiving much benefit, until I tried the CONDITION PILLS, and they have nearly cured where all else failed. Please send me another package as soon as convenient.

Yours, very truly,
J. D. WHITAKER.

Testimony of a Clergyman---Liver and Kidney Troubles.

EAST TILTON, N. H., April 14, 1875.

MR. LANE.—Dear Sir:—DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS are not only the best, but the very best I ever used. My wife has been troubled with Kidney Complant many years; one half of a package has cured her, so that she feels as well as ever. I have been troubled with Liver Compaint for many years; one-half of a package has done me more good than all the Pills I ever took. One of my neighbors took them, who has been troubled with Liver Complaint for many years: three Pills have helped him. Your Pills, where used, commend their virtues. Please send to my address one package.

REV. JOHN DAVIS.

Liver Compaint and Rheumatism so that he Could not Sleep Nights.

I was born and always lived in Pittsfield, N. H.; am now 50 years old; been troubled with Liver Complaint for 30 years, and Rheumatism for 20 years, sometimes so I could not sleep nights. I have taken one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, and they have done me more good and relieved more suffering than all the medicine I have taken during my life.

Pittsfield, N. H., Dec. 17, 1874. S. S. RING.

Fever and Ague.

NEW BOSTON, N. H., Feb. 1, 1875.

T. W. LANE,—Sir:—Last month I sent to you for a package of DR. QUAIN'S PILLS. I had tried five so-called ague cures, and I received more benefit from five of your pills than from all the "Cures" "Cholagogues," "Quinine," &c., that I have taken in ten years. I cannot recommend it too highly for diseases resulting from long standing Fever and Ague.

Yours, most respectfully,
MRS. C. GARLAND.

Scaly Humor Cured by One Package---Liver Complaint Helped.

NORTH SALEM, N. H., Jan. 5, 1875.

MR. LANE.—Dear Sir:—Your Pills are all they are recommended. I was troubled with a Scaly Humor on my legs; I took one package and my legs are quite smooth. My wife was troubled with Liver Complaint; she took one package and they helped her greatly.

Yours, with respect,
JOHN H. BLAKE.

From a Leading Citizen of Rindge.

WEST RINDGE, Cheshire Co., N. H., November 17, 1874.

THOS. W. LANE:—After taking three packages of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, I am prepared to say they are the very best, for I have tried a great many kinds, and faithfully too, believing they would help me, to no effect.—These I do believe are the very best ever made; just the kind a man needs. May they be spread all over the wide world, and Dr. Quain's name a household word.

Yours truly,
ASA STICKNEY.

Felt Better, Stronger and Gained Flesh in One Week,

AFTER TAKING DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS,

ROLLINSFORD, N. H.

THOS. W. LANE:—I commenced to take DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, and in one week I was heavier, felt better, and was stronger than before, and any one troubled with BAD BLOOD can find sure remedy in these Pills.

Nov. 3, 1874. L. M. YEATON.

CHESTER, N. H., Feb. 24, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have been out of health for some time, and I took a very bad cold and it left my lungs in a very weak state. I received Dr. Quain's Condition Pills and took them according to the directions, and my lungs are some better. I can recommend them to any one who is troubled with weak lungs, for they have done me good, and I think another package will cure me. Dr. Quain's Pills ought to be known throughout the world. Please send me another package as soon as convenient.

Yours, &c., CYRUS LANE.

HILLSBORO BRIDGE, Feb. 25, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—Dr. Quain's Condition Pills are the best I ever used for lameness and pain. The first dose I took removed the pain and lameness that I had been troubled with for several years. Others have used quite a number of the pills besides myself. Please send another package by return of mail.

MRS. DANIEL KIMBALL.

GILMANTON I. W., N. H., Feb. 25, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have been taking Dr. Quain's Condition Pills, and can recommend them as far ahead of common pills for constipation of the bowels; they do not have the debilitating effect of common purgatives I have taken.

MRS. J. B. GOODWIN.

NORTHWOOD CENTRE, March 1, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I saw DR. Quain's Condition Pills highly recommended, and sent for a package, and I feel that they have done more for me than all the medicine I have taken for years, and can freely recommend them to others, as a good and sure medicine. Please send me another package as soon as possible.

MARTHA NORCROSS.

BRISTOL, N. H., Feb. 27, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have made a fair trial of those Condition Pills, and liked them very much. I think they are all they are recommended. They are a good Liver invigorator.

N. F. DANFORTH.

SALEM DEPOT, N. H., March 8, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE:—I think those pills (Dr. Quain's Condition Pills) are all they claim to be; my wife and I are both victims of Liver and Kidney Complaint, and general debility. We have taken about half that package you sent me, and find a marked improvement in our health. I want four packages to give away in the north part of Vermont, to friends up there. I enclose $2.00, and if you can, send me four Packages. ROYAL SCOTT.

SOUTH PLATTSBURGH, N. Y., March 11, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE:—I have given Dr. Quain's Condition Pills a trial, and find I can honestly recommend them, they having materially improved the soreness and lameness with which I have been afflicted since getting upon my feet after the Paralysis of left side that I suffered last October. I desire you to send me another package as soon as convenient, as I am anxious to continue their use. Though not now a resident of New England, I have lived in Central Vermont more than fifty years, and trust Dr. Quain's Pills will not long be new in that section. MOSES SHELDON.

THOS. W. LANE:—I have been troubled with Billiousness, Headache, and Dizziness, for a long time, and had the Dyspepsia so bad there were but few kinds of food my stomach would bear at all. I commenced taking your pills, have taken most of one package, and now enjoy eating as well as I ever did, am not troubled with dizziness unless by taking cold, and have been greatly benefited by the use of them. A. L. PAGE.

FRANCESTOWN, March 13, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE:—I have found Dr. Quain's Condition Pills to be all you claim for them in Kidney Complaint, poor blood, and weak nerves. May they be circulated over the land and found in every household where medicine is needed. I enclose 50 cts. for another package as soon as convenient.

JOHN T. FELCH.

Better Health than for 10 Years.

CHESTER, N. H., Oct. 17, 1874.

MR. LANE:—I have taken one package of Condition Pills; find them in my case all they are recommended; have not enjoyed so good health for the last ten years as I have since I commenced taking the Condition Pills. Shall be happy to recommend them to others. WILLIAM H. FELLOWS.

A Whistling Compositor.

He came into the office about three months ago (says an interior California paper,) with his mouth puckered, and the "Arkansas Traveller" issuing therefrom.

It was not a loud, shrill, whistle; it was not that lively and cheerful whistle that betokens the heart easy and the mind free from care. On the contrary, he sawed up and down through the staves like a buzz saw ripping through a pine log, and verse followed verse without the least variation.

He looked around the office complacently, never losing a note, and, finally, sliding up to the foreman, he stopped whistling for an instant to inquire, "How's work?"

But before the reply could be given he had picked up that whistle, right where he had left it off, and was rolling it out—

Tilly tum, tally tally, tum, tilly, oh! with his mouth puckered, but ears wide open. Well, that fellow was put to work, and he whistled around for a sick and rule, whistled up to the copy, book, whistled over to his case again, and picking up an em quad, drew a fresh breath, and whistled all through the "take" till he whistled over to the galley to empty it.

But it was the same old whistle—the "Arkansas Traveller" over and over again, until it would seem that the traveller had worn his shoes out, and was hunting a place to rest.

The thing at first was a novelty, and amused "the boys;" but finally it became monotonous, and as the water continually dropping on a rock will wear its surface, so did this everlasting refrain of the "Arkansas Traveller" grate and lacerate the sensitiveness of his brother-compositors.

Low, angry murmurs betokened the rising storm, and broad hints, uncomplimentary to his musical abilities were thrown out. But he paid no attention to them, and just kept right along, whistling and setting type.

Finally human nature could endure no more. Loud cries of:

"Give us a rest!"
"Oh, let up!"
"Hire a hall!"
"Go East!"
"Cheese it, Cully!"
"Cork up!"
"Take a spin round the block!"
"You're engaged!"
"Won't you tumble?"
"Shoot him!"

—mingled with groans, cat-calls and hisses filled the office, and made the composing-room resemble a large and thriving lunatic asylum.

But it was no use. The fellow never let up, but just went right ahead with his little old whistle, but never missed a note except when he came to a hard word in his copy, when he would dwell on the last note until he found out what it was and then go ahead again.

He took the storm of old shoes, slippers and boots that was showered upon him with the utmost sang froid, and we believe the cuss actually thought it was intended for applause.

At last the hands in the office hit upon a plan to stop this everlasting whistle. One night, when he was asleep, they went up to his room, and clapped a tremendous strong sticking plaster right over his mouth, and then retired, thanking God that the unendurable nuisance was forever abated.

The next morning that misguided young man went over to a carpenter shop, borrowed a gimlet, bored a hole through the plaster, and waltzed into the office, where he horrified the establishment by the same old tune in a new dress.

So he still does nothing but suck soup through that hole and blow the "Arkansas Traveller" out of it.

Three of the compositors have already gone to Stockton, and unless some one murders the whistler, this office will soon be whistled out of existence.

The Death of American Girl.

[N. Y. Herald.]

American Girl, who died at Elmira, recently, was a horse more fortunate than the vast majority of mankind. Although she died young, even in the computation of equine lives, her career was full of splendor and success. It was bright and swift, like a comet, and the time of her circling course was calculated with almost as much mathematical accuracy as the orbit of a celestial body. One quarter of a second was as important in the measurement of her speed as it would be in that of the transit of Venus. She was waited upon like a princess; she lived in a stable which was more comfortable than many Italian palaces; when she appeared in public it was amid the acclamation of admiring thousands, and she was worth $25,000, which is greatly above the commercial value of most men, excepting congressmen and legislators. Her personal qualities were excellent; she was gentle, kind and modest; victory was never known to turn her head; indeed, she often won by a neck, and, with more consistency than many politicians, she was never known to bolt.

The death of American Girl, like that of Garrick, will sadden the gayety of nations. So far as sorrow is concerned, the world could have better spared a better man. Wherever the horse is loved this magnificent specimen of the race will be lamented, but regret will be softened by the superb dramatic feat with which her career was closed. As it was figuratively said of Earl Chatham, Thaddeus Stevens and other distinguished statesmen, so may it literally be said of her that she died in harness. Death and Goldsmith Maid were almost the only brutes that could beat her. The old Queen of the Turf has kept a full length in front of death for nearly twenty years, but, baffled in his attempt to catch her, he entered invisibly in the Elmira races, and, mounted on the w. g. Pale Horse, distanced poor American Girl in the first heat. This defeat broke her heart; but let us trust that the rainbow which, according to the high authority of the Associated Press, rested on the head of the dying mare, is typical of her radiant future. If there is indeed a horse heaven she has gone to it. There she will meet with Bucephalus, with the horses of Achilles, with Baalam's ass, Rosinante-Dapple and all the mighty steeds of antiquity, to sport with them in fields of immortal bloom and feed upon celestial oats. The ghost of Alexander may be proud to mount her and race against all other quadruped shades, with infinity for a course and eternity for time.

When we remember American Girl in her prime and all other good horses like Eclipse, Fashion, Flora Temple, Goldsmith Maid and the stallion Patchen, then the terrible satire of Swift's "Gulliver," where he tells of the Houyhnhums, or horses of superior reason, who had men for servants, seems deprived of much of its sting and bitterness. The inferiority of humanity to the equinal race ceases to be so humiliating. Farewell, then, American Girl! May the monument which shall be raised to thy memory fitly celebrate thy deeds and virtues! Well may it be said of thee, "Green be the turf above thee!" for in life never was there a horse who stepped more lightly upon it.

Financial Advice.

George Alfred Townsend writes in the New York Graphic: I sat in a newspaper office when the editor's chair was vacant. An old Irish woman with bleached hairs but vigorous body and step came in:

"Where's himself?" she said, meaning the editor. It was a financial newspaper.

"He's out; what is it?"

She carried her apple basket, as she had probably done for thirty years in that dense mercantile quarter of Broad street.

"I want to know if himself says that I shall take my money out of the Pierchip Bank and put it in the Cable-top Savings Bank. I've got $500 there and $600 in the Smithfield and $800 in the Oldfry. But I've got $2,000 in the Cable-top, and one told me it was safer there than in the Pierchip."

There was not a particle of anxiety in her face; solid and hoar as the basalt of the Giant's Causeway, this aged daughter of Eve, still peddling the apple that made our woe, looked around with stolid sagacity. She had the sense to know without inquiry that in the financial editor she would find authority for action. A word reassured her.

"Money is worth nothing now; it embarrasses the saving banks to pay interest on so great deposits. Nobody will steal it because there are no investments to be made."

She took it in, grunted, and said: I see. It will be better where it is." And down she went with a peck of apples to trade again.

A Positive Disadvantage.

[Atlanta Constitution.]

Marse John, gimme four bits, please sir; you ain't treated dis nigger sence de war," said Si to the son of his old owner, yesterday.

"What do you want with it, Si?" queried the young man.

"Want to go to de circus, Marse John. You knows how a nigger is!"

"But Si, 50 cents won't take you in now. The Civil Rights bill made you as good as a white man at the shows and you'll have to pay a dollar as I do."

"Is dat de truf, Marse John?"

"Just as true as preaching."

Si scratched his head for a full minute, then looked up with mournful eyes and said:

"Dar it is agin! I tole dem niggers dey was spilen de horn when dey wanted dem sibil rights, and hyar's de truf of it p'int blank! I allus was a mighty up-spoken nigger, ez you enows, Marse John, and 'twixt us I say dam de sibil rights, speshilly when de circus is around!"

Si got his four bits, but he's mad yet.

The Way it Rains in Florida.

[Cincinnati Commercial.]

It is hard for a Northern farmer, who watches the horizon with aching eyes, to understand the clock-like regularity of this rainy season South. Occasionally, as this year, it is delayed; but once set in goes on regularly. There is a misty or clear morning, the air transfused with a blushing, rainbowy effulgence that melts away in the ardent kisses of the sun into an intense dazzle of sunlight up to two o'clock. Then the skirmishers of the rain rush in on cool, dewy winds, and by sharp three o'clock the whole line is platoon firing in great, heavy fusilades. Such rains! Gorgeous, glorious, rushing, a magnificent enthusiasm of plunging moisture. Then the long roll of the thunder drums; the crackling artillery, with its splendor of electric flash, toned off in low rolls; and, before you are aware, the mobile army has gathered up its splendid wings, its fire and after guard and reserves, and only in the West you see its grand, victorious battle flags ribbing the sky with broad bands of color. Mix in a few rainbows some foggy mornings when the whole air is prismy, and the clear, still lake looks like an under-sky, and you have some idea of Florida in the rainy season. Regular as the clock that marshalling and grand battle panorama goes on at set two o'clock, to be closed positively—no change on account of the weather—by five o'clock, P. M.

The Murder of Josie Langmaid.

Some three years ago there was a young lady by the name of Mary Lake teaching school in the Langmaid district, who boarded at Mr. Langmaid's. There sprang up an intimacy between the two which continued even after the close of the school, the relation being kept up by frequent correspondence. When the news of the horrid death of Josie reached the Lake mansion at Chichester, the young teacher was not present, but was soon afterward told the tragedy by her mother. As soon as she learned of the facts she said: "I know who did it. It was Bill Drew;" and then told that Josie had some time ago confided to her the fact that Drew had several times insulted her with improper advances, and that she was afraid of him. On being asked why she did not tell her father she said: "He said he would kill me and cut me into pieces if I told father, as I once threatened to do." These statements were told to Mr. Josiah Carpenter, of Pittsfield, who made them known. An interview with Mr. Langmaid resulted in throwing no light on the matter, although he rather discredited the report and had grave doubts of Drew's guilt. He thought Drew capable of the crime but still could not believe he did it.

The Manchester Dispatch says: A man with a blue coat and black mustache has been seen by several persons lurking in out of the way places, but who he is no one knows. A schoolmate of Josie's named Cofran, saw a man skulk into the bushes, Saturday morning; thinking it was a schoolmate he called him, but got no reply, nor could he find him. This was near the place where Josie was killed. A butcher named Doe saw a man with a black mustache, twice last week on this same cross road, but who went into the woods on his approach, each time. Drew has made so many contradictory statements that the most doubtful ones begin to feel that he is the guilty party.

A young man who works in a stable at Hooksett, says Drew went to Hooksett, and stated in his presence before the head was found, that the girl's throat had been cut twice, and this proved to be the fact after the head was discovered.

A new bit of evidence has come up in the fact that Mrs. Moses R. Lake and her son both saw Drew on his way for a physician on the day of the murder, and noticed that he wore a peculiar new blue shirt such as they had not known him to wear before.

Ohio.

Gen. Woodford has had the best of it in the joint discussion with Gen. Thos. Ewing, in the Ohio campaign. He has seemed to carry the crowds with him, too. He surprises those who have heretofore known him only by his elaborate rhetorical efforts, with his readiness at repartee. Here is the way he closed at Shawnee: "When you do work you have to be paid. We want to pay you in gold dollars instead of paper ones. Won't you take the gold ones? [Voice—'We'd rather have the greenbacks.'] My friend prefers a greenback dollar to a gold dollar. There are not many in Shawnee that do. I can sell that five-dollar gold piece for sixteen cents premium. Five times sixteen is eighty. I can get from your storekeeper a bill like that and eighty cents in fractional currency besides. Won't five dollars and eighty cents buy more than five dollars? Put that bee in your bonnet. Now, my friend says we keep the gold and silver in Wall steet. Well, suppose you printed your greenbacks and had them all piled up there, one thousand eight hundred millions of them, enough to pay all the debt, how are you and I going to get them? [Voice—'Work for them.'] I don't know of but four ways. If I have got something that I can sell, I sell it, and they pay me the greenbacks; or, if I know how to do something, and anybody wants my work, I work, and the man that has got the greenbacks pays me, or if my credit is good I borrow the note, and then I give my note, and some day I have to pay it; or if I am hard up, and you are generous, I beg and you give. I can sell and get greenbacks; I can work and get greenbacks; I can borrow and get greenbacks; I can beg and get greenbacks. Is there any other way? [Voice—'Steal 'em.' Laughter.] My friend suggests that you can steal. Now, that is the democratic platform, and the democratic theory put in just two words." [Great applause and laughter.]

At the little town of Rock Creek, in Ashtabula County, four thousand people turned out to hear Wade and Sherman. The republican enthusiasm in the Reserve has not been one particle exaggerated—it is immense. Heading the delegation from one township was a company of ladies on horseback.

News and Notes.

The alleged murderer of William Noe has been arrested in New York. The prisoner is a well-known thief, about 26 years of age. When confronted with the pawnbroker with whom he had pawned the watch he was immediately identified.

The prohibitionists in the republican party are somewhat in the condition of Joseph in that Rice raising country, Egypt, who first chose the "chief" Butler and now the "chief Baker" to rid them of their difficulties. "But the Chief Butler remembered not Joseph."—Boston Herald.

Judge Elcock has sentenced Westervelt, charged with being implicated in the abduction of Charlie Ross, to seven years in the penitentiary, at solitary confinement, and fined him $100. Westervelt received his sentence calmly.

Robert Dale Owen has been returned to the world, as his physicians say, completely restored.

Manchester's Prosperity.

The Manchester manufacturers have been prospering, notwithstanding the hard times. The treasurer of the Manchester Mills reports 37,881,538 yards of cloth printed, dyed and finished the past year; sales $3,716,356.03; semi-annual dividends three and four per cent.; profits of fourteen months' business, $258,808.39; quick capital $1,118,808.39. The producing capacity of the printing department has been increased 50 per cent. The worsted department has been thoroughly overhauled, the machinery perfected and the work systematized and economized. The old Manchester Print Works wound up their affairs under the act of the legislature passed June, 1875, in which their charter was repealed, the new corporation having bought the real estate and machinery in March, 1874, for $1,000,000.

The treasurer of the Amoskeag Company reports for the year, from a product of 9,506,104 pounds, a profit of $327,000, or about eleven per cent. on the capital of $3,000,000; semi-annual dividends of eight and six per cent., amounting to $420,000; quick capital, $2,408,032.55. Product of the year 27,330,492 yards; estimated cost of improvements in progress and in contemplation, $1,000,000.

The treasurer of the Stark Mills reports 12,579,734 yards of cotton and linen goods, and of bags, 1,738,547 pounds. Earnings first six months, $86,817, last six months, $56,387; total, $143,204; semi-annual dividends of five and four per cent.; quick capital $350,000. An outlay of $150,000 for new machinery is proposed.

The Langdon Company's treasurer reports for the year a product of 4,631,859 yards from 1,243,257 pounds; profit $40,744.62; semi-annual dividend of eight and five per cent., amounting to $65,000; quick capital, $110,689.35. This company's mills are now running full time and nearly full capacity, but a cut-down is anticipated before long, as they are not making a profit.

About Florida.

Col. Pratts' Palatka Herald objects strongly to certain passages in Mr. J. F. Tenney's Florida correspondence to the CHRONICLE, and says:

To us it is not surprising that the St. Johns river, up to the close of the war, was, comparatively a wilderness. While slavery existed this section was not considered a good planting country. The cultivation of the orange was hardly thought of then. Why say anything about the curse of slavery, as you call it? It only tends to stir up bad feelings. This dead issue should never be brought up, unless it is to vindicate Southerners from the odious term "curse," which does not apply to them and which was very much out of place in the communication. As to the old settlers scattered along the banks of the St. Johns before the war, we will assert that their intelligence and good breeding was fully up to the highest standard of Northern society.

We clip from the Herald the following:

There is a railroad in Florida on which the cars run eleven miles an hour—exactly eleven miles an hour—eleven miles by the watch, and the stock-holders swing their hats, and shout 'horay!" This must be the Tocoi Railroad.

That thriving and interesting population on the head waters of the Ocklawaha known as the upper lakes, will have the enjoyable pleasure this winter of gathering and shipping the fruit from ten thousand orange trees. A good report this, from the labor of the last seven or eight years.

There are a great many banana trees in Monticello, all of which are very well fruited. There is no telling what this genial climate and productive soil will produce, until it has been given a fair trial.

Drake Point on the south side of Lake Harris, head waters of the Ocklawaha, near Yalaha, contains a grove of over 3,000 orange trees, with a banana orchard containing most of the delicate West India and South China variety of tropical and semi-tropical fruits.

The first ripple of the northern wave of travel has just touched the environs of Palatka. The tide of human life is just feeling its way to the sunny shores of Florida, and will continue to swell, until the Northern flood, with its wealth and fashion submerges our peninsula, leaving frost and ice and snow and bleak winds and congealed air, far behind. The snow clad mountains, the ice bound rivers, the despairing wail of winter and the shivering agroans of suffering and poverty are forgotten in this 'Land of Flowers.' The new comers will turn their backs on those disagreeables, they will clear the fair forests, they will grasp the implements of husbandry, they will plant their beautiful orange groves and in a few years, they will surround their homes with happiness and ease and prosperity. The poor and the rich are all indiscriminately preparing to encounter the wilds of Florida. The fashionable, the curious, the scientific, the philosophic, the religious, the political, the strong and the weak, and even the women, are taking part in transforming East and West Florida into one vast fruit garden. Since the recent discovery that our State is neutral ground for all people from all sections of the United States, and the further fact that there is money to be made in the orange culture, the wings of the goddess of Fortune are fluttering over this lovely country of ours and Venus and Adonis will soon be making love in the luxurious gardens now being prepared for them on our silvery lakes, on the banks of our lovely rivers or in the shade of the groves of evergreen.

Democratic Troubles.

There has been a continual struggle since the democratic party came into power in Portsmouth, between its best and worst elements. It is just as sure as "sin entered the world" that that party out of power professes more than it ever performs or intends to perform when power is attained. When it is powerless as a party to achieve victory its leaders howl lustily for retrenchment and reform, for a pure administration of the government and for the elevation of the best citizens to office. Yet it only nominates such men in order to secure power, and distributes the loaves and fishes selfishly and regardless of the common decencies. The rank and file are jealous of every movement and fond of criticism. Never was a "ring" more quickly developed than that of last year when they came into power. A division of offices was quickly made, a few of them judicious selections and others poorest of the poor. Luckily, the school board was beyond political control, but the designing leaders thought to secure it this year beyond a doubt. Their schemes have been developed, though not successful. Their effort to elect strong partisans to the High School committee has been balked and the failure only stimulates them to transfer their political chicanery to other fields. In the street department they are now strenuously urgent for a purely political crushing machine. As a sample of the aims and intentions of the democratic party this only shows that it is only virtuous when there is no patronage at its disposal. Then it paves its way with declarations of good intentions, which it repudiates at the earliest moment of success.

One of the necessities of a civilized community is the preservation of order. A good police force is as necessary to Portsmouth as pure air. There is an abundance of work at certain times which requires all the available force at hand to preserve peace. The democrats bungled badly, last year, over their appointments on this force. By trade and dicker they put on the force men who have more personal than public interest. Some of them are possessed of bravery, and when they decide to make arrests, do so in good shape. Some are shrewd and ambitious to use their position for advancement over their superior officers. But the force lacks coherence and the city loses. So disorderly have certain sections been the past year that democratic liquor sellers even, on the streets where the democratic majorities are largest, have complained of too much noise—and so patent is the failure to maintain order, and so inefficient is the force as a whole, though composed of fearless men, that Mayor Goodrich made no mention of it in his annual address. One of the chief troubles of the situation is occasioned by the fact that the disorderly element of the city originally elevated to power the city government of 1874-75 and put its immediate friends on the police force, and deems it an exhibition of ingratitude on the part of the officers if not allowed to work its own sweet will, get drunk and become noisy when it chooses, and act as democratic majorities are liable to act when uncontrolled. Ex-City Marshal Johnson and his able assistants preserved the peace of the city by overawing the turbulent classes and by performing their duties without fear or favor, and so well were they kept in check that the change to the present condition of affairs is especially notable.

Police News.

John Hogan, William Mitchell and Thomas Lancey, three hard-looking tramps, were brought before Judge Page on Saturday charged with brawl and tumult on Daniel street, and Mitchell was fined $8.04. On a charge of stealing two overcoats from E. Leveen & Co., Hogan and Mitchell were held in the sum of $300 each to appear at the approaching term of court. Lancey was then re-arrested and pleaded guilty of being guilty of being accessory to the theft, and was held in the same sum. When arrested Mitchell and Hogan had on the stolen overcoats.

The three worthies, after stealing the coat, went down Daniel street and quarreled over the division of the spoils. Lancey was "counted out" of his share by his associates, and during the fracas which followed was wounded with a knife by one of them. He shouted "Murder" and "Watch," which brought out from a neighboring house policeman Sam. Hurley, who had gone home for his lunch at nine o'cloak. The two thieves ran into the yard of Wm. B. Lowd, Esq., followed by Lancey shouting for help. They went over fences into a neighboring alley and Hurley after them, arresting them both on State street. The third chap was a remarkable howler, and filled the air with shouts until special officer Anderson took him in charge, but he ran away when he got out into the street, and soon turned up at the lock-up, where he voluntarily surrendered. Officer Hurley is receiving the congratulations of his friends over his prompt and energetic action.

After Judge Page had decided to hold the three tramps, he sentenced John McGrath to the House of Correction at Brentwood for ninety days, on the charge of being a common drunkard.

A Knock-Down and a Sit-Down.

Street Commissioner Holmes' horse sauntered off alone, Friday afternoon, turned out of Cabot street and went off on a run up Islington. Mr. Edward E. McIntire's mare stood silently hitched to a stone post, at the residence of Mr. Thomas Martin, headed down street. The Holmes horse collided with and knocked her down all in a heap, the shafts of the buggy pinning her so that she was unable to rise. The wagon attached to the horse dissolved into several parts, but he kept on with two wheels, breaking the stone post short off at the ground and smashing several rods from the fence beyond. Continuing on he crossed the street, and endeavored to turn a short corner into Dover street. But that was where he made his mistake! The wheel nearest the sidewalk went inside the post and the horse outside. A destruction of impetus ensued and the animal was thrown on his haunches, where he remained sitting until relieved by human aid. It was difficult to decide which was the more astonished, the horse or the mare. The latter presented a woe-begone appearance as she regained her feet, with dishevelled mane covering her eyes, the bit dangling under her throat and the harness parted. As it gradually dawned on her that she was more frightened than hurt, indignation rather than sorrow took possession of her, and she snorted with such a tone of rebuke as must have convinced the reckless steed who had assaulted her that she was not to be trifled with nor made the object of notoriety, with impunity. She never speaks to him now, when she meets him on the street, and he turns black in the face at such a decided "cut."

Maggie Mitchell.

The rush for tickets to the Maggie Mitchell entertainment shows that first-class artists are fully appreciated in Portsmouth. When the hour which had been announced for the sale of tickets to commence, arrived, a large crowd gathered to secure the first choice of seats. A report was in circulation that the sale of some of the best seats had been made previous to the hour appointed, but in justice to Dr. Preston we may say that the story is false and without a shadow of foundation. Not a slip was disposed of until the time specified for the sale to begin, after which time of course the numerous crowd had to take their chances. As Dr. P. gets no commission or reward for the task of selling these tickets, it seems particularly hard to falsely accuse him of favoritism in the matter. The opportunity of being able to secure tickets at so central a place as Preston's drug store is a public convenience and patrons of public entertainments should appreciate it.

The Kansas City, Mo., Herald says: The "Pearl of Savoy" is a beautiful play, and Miss Mitchell's rendering of Marie is a charming piece of emotional characterization. The simple peasant girl in the first act, her love for her parents, and her sorrow at being compelled to part with them, her purity and strength of character, were well portrayed. The parting scene could not be more affecting. The lesson scene in the next act was so natural that it called down the repeated plaudits of the audience. Throughout, the semblance of nature was so apt that it was not a difficult thing to imagine one looked upon the real Marie. The mad scenes were especially strong. Marie was indeed dead to all save her mother's prayer.

The Boston Globe says of a recent performance in that city: "The Pearl of Savoy" was performed for the last time last evening, and in spite of the terrible weather there was an immense house. "Standing Room Only" was placarded at the entrance long before the hour of performance, and the theater was densely packed. Miss Mitchell's performance of Marie aroused the greatest possible enthusiasm, as much, indeed, as if the play had been new to the audience, instead of familiar as household words, as it certainly must be to all Boston theater goers.

Richards Avenue.

The work is now being done on the fourth culvert of Richards Avenue, the drainage toward the pond requiring four wide culverts, which have been built of heavy stone brough from Cape Ann. The Avenue, by reason of this work, is impassable below the residence of J. D. Butler, Esq. The preparation for drainage is costly, the pay roll for labor the past fortnight amounting to about $800.

The fence posts have been set, and as soon as the design for the fencing is determined upon, it is stated, the building of the fence will be awarded by contract. Parties in Cape Ann, Biddeford and Portsmouth have made bids for the flagging of the walks, the widening of the walks will afford a fine promenade, care being taken to protect the trees on either side, although the change of grade at many points may possibly require others to be set out in place of some that may be injured by raising the grade of the walk. As the trees increase in size the propriety of thinning out in number seems obvious. A small piece of ledge near Rockland street is being blasted.

Jottings.

There is a change in the Eastern Railroad trains, by which the six o'clock train from Boston, due here at eight o'clock, P. M., and the express train formerly leaving here for Boston at 11:03 are discontinued. Trains for Boston leave Portsmouth at 3:57, 7:05, 8:23, 11:18, A. M., and 5:24 P. M. Trains for Portsmouth leave Boston at 8:30 A. M.; 12:30, 3:15, 4:45 and 8 o'clock P. M.

Schooner John Cadwallader made the trip from Philadelphia to South Newmarket inside of five days, from wharf to wharf.

The Portsmouth Bridge compasy are now at work on a long-needed improvement. They are building 350 feet of new bridge at the Easterly end of the bridge and raising the grade eleven feet in order to avoid the hill on the Kittery side.

Mr. Charles Lamprey is building a barn near the Gravelly Ridge School, 42 by 80 feet.

A little son of George H. Clark fell through the open space beside the sidewalk, between James Sanborn's shoe store and Martin Garrity's saloon on Daniel street, last May, receiving severe injuries and disfiguring his face permanently. The father of the boy has made a claim against the city for damages, but the danger of persons falling upon the ragged rocks is still incurred by the neglect of our watchful city authorities to compel the owners to fence this space, where passers-by are so liable to fall by the way.

Frank W. Hackett, Esq., of this city, has been appointed by the Court of Commissioners of Alabama Claims a special counsel of the United States, to assist Hon. J. A. J. Creswell, Government counsel, in the trial of cases in that Court.

The Marion is expected to be ready for her officers about the 25th of November.

Mr. Martin Hoyt discovered smoke issuing from a double tenement house on School street, Saturday afternoon about one o'clock. The house was occupied by Mr. John Tibbetts, a navy yard watchman, and a room occupied as a work-shop in the upper story of the house was discovered on fire, from some cause unknown. An alarm was promptly given, and a few buckets of water extinguished the flames. The fire department rallied promptly, but there was little need of their services.

The new city directory has 3104 names and 125 streets, avenues and lanes in the compact part of the city, and on the outskirts 33 streets, roads and lanes. It gives 53 grocery stores and 38 liquor saloons.

S. P. C. A.

At a meeting of the Executive Committee of Mr. Bergh's society in New York, recently, a resolution was passed empowering him to take measures to enforce the law against the use of severe bits and accumulated check-reins. Since the 1st of May two hundred and ninety-three cases of cruelty have been prosecuted by the society. An ornamental diploma was exhibited, presented to Mr. Bergh by the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and signed by the Earl of Harrowby and the Baroness Burdett-Coutts.

A correspondent of the Bangor Whig and Courier is commenting on a recent pigeon shoot near Bangor says: Probably no one of them have reflected on the great amount of suffering that will be caused by this proposed promiscuous wholesale slaughter of the innocent and harmless creatures, created by an all-wise and good God, and for a purpose not fully understood, for the best good of the human race. I earnestly hope that after these gentlemen who have arranged for this "match" and "supper" have properly considered the subject, they will conclude to have a spelling match, or something else that will afford equal amusement and secure quite as good a supper that will be partaken of without the reflection that it was obtained at the expense of so much life and suffering of those who shall be maimed and not killed outright.

The same remarks will apply to a recent affair of the kind that occurred in this city.

COMMON SENSE vs. PREJUDICE.

By R. V. PIERCE, M. D., of the World's Dispensary, Buffalo, N. Y., Author of "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser," etc., etc.

I am aware that there is a popular, and not altogether unfounded, prejudice against "patent medicines," owing to the small amount of merit which many of them possess. The appellation "Patent Medicine," does not apply to my remedies, as no person has ever been asked for or obtained upon them, nor have they been urged upon the public as "cure-alls." They are simply some favorite prescriptions, which, in a very extensive practice, have proved their superior remedial virtues in the cure of the diseases for which they are recommended. Every practicing physician has his favorite remedies, which he oftenest recommends or uses, because he has the greatest confidence in their virtues. The patient does not know their composition. Even prescriptions are usually written in a language unintelligible to any but the druggist. As much secrecy is employed as in the preparation of proprietary medicines. Does the fact that an article is prepared by a process known only to the manufacturer render that article less valuable? How many physicians know the elementary composition of the remedies which they employ, some of which have never been analyzed? Few practitioners know how Morphine, Quinine, Podophyllin, Leptandrin, Iridin, or Chloroform, are made, or how nauseous drugs are transformed into palatable elixirs; yet they do not hesitate to employ them. Is it not inconsistent to use a prescription, the composition of which is unknown to us and dissent another preparation simply because it is accompanied by a printed statement of its properties with directions for its use?

Some persons while admitting that my medicines are good pharmaceutical compounds, object to them on the ground that they are too often used with insufficient judgment. I propose to obviate this difficulty by enlightening the people as to the structure and functions of their bodies, the causes, character, and symptoms, of disease, and by indicating the proper and judicious employment of my medicines, together with such auxiliary treatment as may be necessary. Such is one of the designs of the People's Medical Advisor, forty thousand copies of which have already been published, and are sold at the exceedingly low price of $1.50, and sent (post-paid) to any address within the United States and Canada.

If you would patronize medicines scientifically prepared, use my Family Medicines. Golden Medical Discovery is tonic, alterative, or blood cleansing and an unequaled cough remedy; Pleasant Purgative Pellets, scarcely larger than mustard seed, constitute an agreeable and reliable physic; Favorite Prescription, a remedy for debilitated females; my Compound Extract of Smart-Weed, a magical remedy for pain, bowel complaints, and an unequaled Liniment for both human and horse-flesh; while Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy is known the world over as the greatest specific for Catarrh and "Cold in the Head," ever given to the public.

These standard remedies have been before the public for many years—a period long enough to fully test their merits, and the best argument that can be advanced in their favor is the fact that their sale was never so great as during the past six months.

Stewart's $10,000 Carpet.

This carpet, which was manufactured for Napoleon III., is thus described: "Its size is about forty feet square. The centre piece, its most prominent object, occupying nearly one-half of the whole area, represents a beautiful, oval-shaped picture, set in gold fringe, and if suitably hung would at a distance be easily mistaken for an elegant painting. The picture shows the harbor, castle and surrounding country of Marseilles, France. In the foreground, one is charmed by the blue water and the stately ships at anchor; further back, the harbor and ancient castle, rising grandly in its magnificent whiteness against the green foliage enveloping the base of the mountains which form the background, and lift their hoary heads into a blue sky flaked with fleecy clouds. Napoleon's coat of arms surmounts the picture, and a Latin motto, wrought in gold on blue ribbon-like ground, lies half unrolled at the base.

Immediately surrounding this lovely picture, in a bed of rich brown, is a garland of beautiful flowers, much larger than natural size, but so brilliant and so delicately and accurately represented that it seems as if one might stoop and lift the petals one from another. Outside of this garland, and serving as a border to the carpet, is a wreath formed of overlapping oak leaves and acorns, also in natural colors, their various shades of green and brown blending in exquisite beauty.

It is quite impossible to give an idea of this wonderful fabric, which was made with the needles of poor women, who wrought it in sections, and set together after the manner of the camel's hair shawls. Its texture is as delicate as a silken robe, and no painter could portray color or detail with greater skill. It actually cost ten thousand dollars to make it. Mr. Stewart saw it at the Paris Exposition, and purchased it as a novelty to exhibit to friends.

—As an innocent-looking old man was going up Washington street, Vicksburg, a drayman nodded to him and asked: "Want a dray, mister?" "N—o, I guess not," replied the old man, "I'm too fur from home, and can't pay freight on it. Much obleeged, though. Vicksburg is a powerful nice town. A feller back there asked me if I didn't want a coat, another inquired if I wanted a hack, and now you offer me a dray! I wish I lived here."

—Precise old party: "Conductor, do, pray, get on. I've an appointment——" Conductor: "All right, sir! Now, look alive, Bill, here's a bold gent wants to meet 'is young 'ooman."—Punch.

OF MICHIGAN LANDS,

FOR SALE!

The Lands of the Jackson, Lansing & Saginaw Railroad Company are now Offered For Sale.

They are situated along its railroad and contain large tracts of excellent FARMING and PINE Lands. The farming lands include some of the most fertile and well-watered hardwood lands in the State. They are timbered mainly with hard-maple and beech; soil black, sandy loam, and abound in springs of pure wet water. Michigan is one of the best-indebted and most prosperous state in the Union, and its farmers have a greater variety of crops and resources than any Western state. While some of the Prairie States may produce corn in great abundance, they have no other resource, and when this crop fails destitution follows, as has been the case the past year in Kansas and Nebraska. DR. QUAIN'S MAGIC CONDITION PILLS.

NEW TESTIMONIALS.

— FOR —

Weak Lungs, Constipation, Lameness, Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Paralysis, Poor Blood and Kidney Troubles.

LOWELL, Mass, July 20th, 1874.
T. W. Lane:—I have used one package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills, am glad to state in my case they have proved all that you claim for them. I have been troubled with Bad Blood and all its consequent diseases, and have tried several kinds of Bitters and Pills without receiving much benefit, until I tried the Condition Pills, and they have nearly cured where all else failed. Please send me another package as soon as convenient.
Yours, very truly,
J. D. WHITAKER.

Testimony of a Clergyman---Liver and Kidney Troubles.

East Tilton, N. H., April 14, 1875.
Mr. Lane.—Dear Sir:—Dr. Quain's Condition Pills are not only the best, but the very best I ever used. My wife has been troubled with Kidney Complaint many years; one half of a package has cured her, so that she feels as well as ever. I have been troubled with Liver Compaint for many years; one-half of a package has done me more good than all the Pills I ever took. One of my neighbors took them, who has been troubled with Liver Complaint for many years: three Pills have helped him. Your Pills, where used, commend their virtues. Please send to my address one package.
REV. JOHN DAVIS.

Liver Compaint and Rheumatism so that he Could not Sleep Nights.

I was born and always lived in Pittsfield, N. H.; am now 50 years old; been troubled with Liver Complaint for 30 years, and Rheumatism for 20 years, sometimes so I could not sleep nights. I have taken one package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills, and they have done me more good and relieved more suffering than all the medicine I have taken during my life.
Pittsfield, N. H., Dec. 17, 1874. S. S. RING.

Fever and Ague.

New Boston, N. H., Feb. 1, 1875.
T. W. Lane.—Sir:—Last month I sent to you for a package of Dr. Quain's Pills. I had tried five so-called ague cures, and I received more benefit from five of your pills than from all the "Cures" "Cholagogues," "Quinine," &c., that I have taken in two years. I cannot recommend it too highly for diseases resulting from long standing Fever and Ague.
Yours, most respectfully,
Mrs. C. Garland.

Scaly Humor Cured by One Package---Liver Complaint Helped.

North Salem, N. H., Jan. 5, 1875.
Mr. Lane.—Dear Sir:—Your Pills are all they are recommended. I was troubled with a Scaly Humor on my legs; I took one package and my legs are quite smooth. My wife was troubled with Liver Complaint; she took one package and they helped her greatly.
Yours, with respect,
John H. Blake.

Thos. W. Lane:—After taking three packages of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills, I am prepared to say they are the very best, for I have tried a great many kinds, and faithfully too, believing they would help me, to no effect.—These I do believe are the very best ever made; just the kind a man needs. May they be spread all over the wide world, and Dr. Quain's name a household word.
Yours truly,
Asa Stickney.

Felt Better, Stronger and Gained Flesh in One Week,

AFTER TAKING DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS,

Rollinsford, N. H.
Thos. W. Lane:—I commenced to take Dr. Quain's Condition Pills, and in one week I was heavier, felt better, and was stronger than before, and any one troubled with bad blood can find sure remedy in these Pills.

Chester, N. H., Feb. 24, 1875.
Mr. Thos. W. Lane:—I have been out of health for some time, and I took a very bad cold and it left my lungs in a very weak state. I received Dr. Quain's Condition Pills and took them according to the directions, and my lungs are some better. I can recommend them to any one who is troubled with weak lungs, for they have done me good, and I think another package will cure me. Dr. Quain's Pills ought to be known throughout the world. Please send me another package as soon as convenient.
Yours, &c., Cyrus Lane.

Hillsboro Bridge, Feb. 25, 1875.
Mr. Thos. W. Lane:—Dr. Quain's Condition Pills are the best I ever used for lameness and pain. The first dose I took removed the pain and lameness that I have been troubled with for several years. Others have used quite a number of the pills besides myself. Please send another package by return of mail. Mrs. Daniel Kimball.

Gilmanton I. W., N. H., Feb. 25, 1875.
Mr. Thos. W. Lane:—I have been taking Dr. Quain's Condition Pills, and can recommend them as far ahead of common pills for constipation of the bowels; they do not have the debilitating effect of common purgatives I have taken.
Mrs. J. B. Goodwin.

Northwood Centre, March 1, 1875.
Mr. Thos. W. Lane:—I saw Dr. Quain's Condition Pills highly recommended, and sent for a package, and I feel that they have done more for me than all the medicine I have taken for years, and can freely recommend them to others, as a good and sure medicine. Please send me another package as soon as possible.
Martha Norcross.

Bristol, N. H., Feb. 27, 1875.
Mr. Thos. W. Lane:—I have made a fair trial of those Condition Pills, and liked them very much. I think they are all they are recommended. They are a good Liver invigorator.
N. F. Danforth.

Salem Depot, N. H., March 8, 1875.
Thos. W. Lane:—I think these pills (Dr. Quain's Condition Pills) are all they claim to be; my wife and I are both victims of Liver and Kidney Complaints, and general debility. We have taken about half that package you sent me, and find a marked improvement in our health. I want four packages to give away in the north part of Vermont, to friends up there. I enclose $2.00, and if you can, send me four Packages.
Royal Scott.

South Plattsburgh, N. Y., March 11, 1875.
Thos. W. Lane:—I have given Dr. Quain's Condition Pills a trial, and find I can honestly recommend them, they have greatly improved the soreness and lameness with which I have been afflicted since getting upon my feet after the Paralysis of left side that I suffered last October. I desire you to send me another package as soon as convenient, as I am anxious to continue their use. Though not now a resident of New England, I have lived in Central Vermont more than fifteen years, and Dr. Quain's Pills will not long be new in that section.
Moses Sheldon.

Thos. W. Lane:—I have been troubled with Biliousness, Headache, and Dizziness, for a long time, and had the Dyspepsia so bad there were but few kinds of food my stomach would bear at all. I commenced taking your pills, have taken most of one package, and now enjoy eating as well as I ever did, am not troubled with dizziness unless by taking cold, and have been greatly benefited by the use of them.
A. L. Page.

Francestown, March 13, 1875.
Thos. W. Lane:—I have found Dr. Quain's Condition Pills to be all you claim for them in Kidney Complaint, poor blood, and weak nerves. May they be circulated over the land and found in every household where medicine is needed. I enclose 50 cts. for another package as soon as convenient.
John T. Felch.

LOCAL AGENTS

WANTED.

An Agent Wanted for Each Town and County in the United States.

Parties desiring to act as agents must accompany their application by a letter of recommendation as to character and responsibility from and signed by the Editor of a newspaper published in the town or county for which the agent proposes to act. The agency is to sell the bonds of the Industrial Exhibition Company.

BONDS, $20 EACH.
HALF BONDS, $10 EACH.
QUARTER BONDS, $5 EACH.

The Industrial Exhibition Company will furnish agents with circulars, etc., etc.

Each newspaper published in the town where an agent is located will, as soon as the agency is established, be given an advertisement, advertising such agency and the Company, and fully explaining the plans, purposes and objects of the Company. Such advertisement will continue in such papers as long as an agency is successfully conducted.

The Industrial Exhibition Company is the first to adopt the plan so long in use by the European governments of issuing bonds when the principal is made secure and not risked, but where there is a chance for a large premium, an investment of $20 is sure to return to the investor $21—one dollar more than cost—and the holder of a $20 Bond may obtain a premium either of $50, $100, $200, $500, $1,000, $5,000, $25,000, $10,000, $25,000 or $100,000. The interest, which is ordinarily distributed to all the bond holders pro rata, is in this loan distributed by chance. The purchaser of a bond knows he will receive back his investment, with a small rate of interest, he has a chance in the above named premiums, which are simply the distribution of interest on the whole loan.

Each bond participates in four drawings each year, until it has drawn a premium, when it is surrendered, the premium paid, and the bond cancelled.

The Industrial Exhibition Company, under a special charter granted by the State of New York, is given authority to issue these bonds. The Legislature of the State, recognizing the great benefits which will arise from the success of this enterprise, have exempted all the real estate and property of the Company from taxation and assessments for five years, and has also conferred other great privileges.

Every American who understands the purposes of this Company will, of a necessity, feel a pride in aiding it to a successful termination.

Each individual who buys a bond becomes an owner and an interested party, and when he views the structure erected with his money can say, "I aided to erect in our country the most magnificent building the world has ever seen, a palace which, in truth, represents the industry, energy and mechanical genius of the American people."

The manufacturers and the inventors of America are peculiarly interested in the success of this enterprise, for the reason that it is to be their home, where all their inventions and manufactures can be exhibited and sold.

The building will contain 5,320,000 square feet of space.

Purchasers desiring Bonds before an agency is established where they reside, will communicate direct with this office, from where they can be supplied.

Parties desiring to act as Agents or to purchase bonds will address

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

For the terrible diseases engendered by the luxury trying climate of New England,

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Relieve Your Lungs.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" in "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

The Lakeside Library

is published semi-monthly, and each issue contains a COMPLETE NOVEL, by one of the great authors of the world, as Charles Reade, Charles Dickens, Anthony Trollope, Jules Verne, etc., etc. The completion of long and important novels in a single issue, is the most unique and valuable feature yet introduced into the periodical literature of the day, and is peculiar to The Lakeside Library.

Each issue of The Library contains a Complete Novel, that would cost in the book stores, on the average, $1.50 each; yet the price of the same in The Library is only 10 cents if you buy a single copy from your news dealer, or only 8 cents per copy, subscribe for a year. The whole series of 24 numbers will contain Twenty-two Complete Novels, worth about $40.00, but costs only $2.10 in The Library!

Occasionally we shall issue double numbers, to contain unusually long and important works, as "The Law and The Lady," by Wilkie Collins, and "Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Seas," by Jules Verne. When this is necessary, both numbers of the story will be issued together, so that the complete work will be in the reader's hands at once. In such cases three numbers will be issued in one month. ☞ Hence all subscriptions are received for 24 numbers.

Our next issue, Nos. 14 and 15, will be a splendid Double number complete and unabridged with Eight characteristic illustrations, containing the famous

Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Seas,"
By JULES VERNE.

This wonderful book is descriptive of a voyage of 20,000 leagues under the surface of the sea! No one acquainted with Verne's peculiar and graphic style need be told that this, his great est book, is most intensely interesting. It lays bare the mysteries of the mighty deep—its sunken wrecks; submarine forests; the grotesque, hideous and awful creatures who dwell therein; the beautiful coral caves; its treasures of gold, silver and jewels lost in Spanish ships of olden days. Yet so mutually, and with with such an air of candor is the story told, that you can hardly believe you are not reading a transcript from a ship's log book. Sent by mail by the publishers, post-paid, for 25 cents.

☞ There is only one other edition published, which costs $4.00.

Subscribe now, and get all the back numbers, that your set may be complete. The entire set of 24 numbers gives you a really choice library of Standard and Famous Novels, worth in book form about $40.00, and at a cost of only $2.15, including prepayment of postage—or about the price of one single book in ordinary book form. "The Portent," for instance, costs as a Bound Book, 1.75, and is published in No 12 of The Library for only 10 cents! And "Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Seas" costs as a Bound Book $4.00, and is published in Nos. 14 and 15 of The Library for only 20 cents!

☞ Each of these books is complete and unabridged, and costs in the bookstores from $1.0 to $4.00. Order a few samples.

Facts in Natural History.
["Gris" in Saturday Night.]

Frogs never take any food but that which is alive. No "dead-heading" into their stomachs.

Serpents will live six months and longer without food, and yet there are men who can't stand it fifteen minutes without a drink.

If a lobster loses a claw another soon grows out; so the lobster is rarely without eclat.

Turtles bury their eggs in the sand and leave them to be hatched out by the sun. This is because they cannot bury them in the sun with any expectation of their being hatched by the sand.

Naturalists say that a single swallow will devour six thousand flies in a single day. Six thousand flies in a single swallow! Its too much for me to take down.

A whale suckles its young and is therefore not a fish. A mother larrups its young and is therefore a whaler.

Serpents shed their skins annually. I have seen Kentucky boys shedding their skins by nailing them on the cow shed. They were coon skins.

Toads become torpid in winter and hide themselves. Winters, when I was a boy and got torpid, the schoolmaster used to "hide" me.

Turtles and tortoises have their skeletons partly outside their body. This would be a handy arrangement for a man who wanted to sell his skeleton to the doctors. He could go around among the fraternity while he was alive and show them what he had.

It is believed that crocodiles live to be hundreds of years old. What an old crocodile Bill Allen must be.

In South America there is a honey bee that has not been furnished with a stinger. They call him Death, and ask him where his sting is.

In the darkest night fish can pursue their movements the same as by daylight. Wonder they don't run a keno room.

Seals are very intelligent. They may be taught many tricks like dogs, and I have frequently seen a seal-skin quote.

The head of a rattlesnake has been known to inflict a fatal wound after being separated from the body. It is hard to get a-head of a rattlesnake.

If the eye of a newt is put out another is soon supplied by rapid growth—that is, if the creature newt when it was done.

Fishes have no eyelids, and consequently sleep with their eyes open; and I's open for correction if I's wrong.

There are agricultural ants in Texas that actually plant grain and reap before the harvest. This would seem to prove that insects have souls; they feel called upon to reap-ant.

An Affecting Biography.

Gen. Samuel F. Cary, democratic candidate for Lieutenant Governor of Ohio, has outraged the decencies of political controversy even, by stumping the State and retailing falsehoods and obscene stories to his audiences. The Cincinnati Times, a wide-awake republican paper, goes after him as follows:

When Mr. Samuel Cary comes out of this campaign, clear behind his ticket, and doubly beaten, he will at least have the satisfaction of knowing that he has made the world quite familiar with his history. In quiet morning, over his after-breakfast cigar, he can peruse in the columns of almost any newspaper the romantic history of his Tar Spring and Petroleum Company—the history of how he sold twenty thousand acres of worthless land at a magnificent price, leaving the purchasers nothing wherewith to console themselves except certificates of stock in a wild-cat company, with Samuel's name at the bottom as President.

Satisfied with this narrative he can pick up another newspaper and read the appetizing account of how he cheated the Government out of its taxes on $25,500, by putting the amount in bonds, and then went on to the stump to howl against the iniquity of the bond-holders.

After rolling this sweet morsel under his tongue, he can turn again to his newspaper file and read at length of how he went to Colorado, as an attorney for a company of gentlemen, to buy a silver mine; of how he bought it for $22,000, and telegraphed to his principals that it cost $50,000; and of how he divided the extra $28,000 between his Colorado pals and himself.

After chuckling sufficiently over this piece of strategy, Samuel can then revel in the charge of having beaten Billy Armstrong out of fifty dollars; of having lied in England about his gratuitous temperance lectures for thirty-five years, and his losses by fire; of having made an ass of himself by first howling for the total abolition of alcohol, and then bowling for unlimited whisky. And, finally, when all these passages in his written history have been perused, Samuel can take one last fond look at the common summing up of all his biographers, to-wit: That he is the most miserable case of demagogue that ever was placed on a political ticket. "Dost like the picture?"

—"Pa, I guess our man Ralph is a good Christian." "How so, my boy? "Why, pa, I read in the Bible that the wicked shall not live out half his days; and Ralph says he has lived out ever since he was a little boy."

A Little Game of "Draw."
[Virginia, Nev., Chronicle.]

It was a pleasant and right sociable little party that sat around a little pine table in the rear of a C street grocery, night before last. There were five men in the party, and they sat on candle-boxes, end up. A candle illuminated the board, enabling the reporter (who had dropped in to get a pound of sugar) to see that each man had a number of white beans in front of him. They were playing cards, and kept pushing, from one to the other, a big jack-knife, which they called "the buck" probably from the fact that it had a buckhorn handle, maybe, perhaps. One man seemed to be doing most of the talking. His name was Sam. Griggles. He talked like a philosopher, and the reporter sat down on a beer keg and listened to him.

"I tell you there's no use talking. The best thing a man can do is to git married. Gimme three and bet you five beans. Bein' single has its advantages. See it and raise you six. But the comfort a man takes in having a wife and a home of his own can't be told. Raise me ten Yeh? See it an' call. D—— it, you've got the pot agin.' Jim, put a bit of ice in mine an' dash o' bitters. Yes, boys, a wife's a good thing? you bet your bottom dollar. Whew! Ten to come in! All right, Jim; straddle your blind. Now when a man get's through his day's work an' feels tired an' worn out, what's nicer'n to go home an' find a good little wife waiting fur you to throw her arms round yer neck an'—Oh Lord!"

A hush fell upon the corner grocery as she walked in with a shawl over her head and brought him one on the side of the head that sent his cards flying and upset his cocktail. Neither of them spoke a word, but he looked as if he had lost one foot of his six as he followed her out. Even the subdued snicker behind him couldn't make him look meaner.

—The "three-masted schooner" is now the prevailing build for sail vessels in the United States. Where formerly it was the custom to rig a hull as a brig or a barque, it is now the fashion to make her a fore-and-aft vessel, with three masts and generally a centreboard; and these schooners sometimes reach a thousand tons burthen. They are doing the chief lake, coastwise, West India, and Gulf trades by sail, and occasionally some of the larger ones venture across the ocean. It has been suggested that, as they can make an ocean voyage with probably as great safety as a square-rigged vessel, they ought to go more largely into the foreign trade, and of late this tendency is shown. There is a drawback, however, to these schooners engaging in foreign trade, which does not affect a square-rigged vessel, though this drawback is merely contingent. Their masts are enormous sticks of timber, eighty to ninety feet in length, requiring the largest trees of the forest to make them. These trees are getting scarce in this part of the country, and in Europe they are entirely unavailable. Hence if a large schooner crossing the ocean carries away a mast it would be impossible to replace it with a similar one, and she would have to come back as a squar rigged vessel, which requires smaller spars. This is a very costly risk, and it deters those who are interested from making transatlantic ventures. There is no other weighty reason, however, which would operate to prevent it, and, with the growing demand for foreign tonnage, it is probable, if the underwriters are satisfied, that these schooners will be found gradually more and more numerous in our foreign trade.—Philadelphia Ledger.

—Dr. J. G. Holland writes: The way in which edifices are built nowadays really necessitates a new formula of dedication. How would this read: "We dedicate this edifice to Thee, our Lord and Master; we give to Thee and Thy cause and kingdom subject to a mortgage of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars ($150,000). We bequeathe it to our children and our children's children, as the greatest boon we can confer on them (subject to the mortgage aforesaid), and we trust that they will have the grace and the money to pay the interest and lift the mortgage. Preserve it from fire and foreclosure, we pray Thee, and make it abundantly useful to Thyself—subject, of course, to the aforesaid mortgage."

—A free bridge is usually considered a public blessing, but they do not take that view of it in Peoria, Ill. It being proposed to make the the bridge free there across the Illinois River, a woman and a housekeeper enters her protest. "What will we do," she says. "with our vagrants, scamps and scalawags in general if we have a free bridge?" Now, it seems, these worthies are sent across the bridge to rid the city of them. Not having any means to pay toll back, they stay put out; but with a free bridge they would be back again. Wherefore the cry in Peoria is, "No free bridge until we get a workhouse!"

—A jeal-ous lit-tle boy who lives on Aber-deen street be-came ver-y an-gry because his lit-tle bro-ther was giv-en a whole ta-ble-spoon-ful of cast-or oil, while his kind mam-ma on-ly gave him half as much, and cry-ing that she al-ways loved Je-re-mi-ah bet-ter than she did him, threw his toy can-non through the big look-ing-glass in the draw-ing room. But his kind mamma, stoop-ing down, took off her slip-per, and said to her jeal-ous lit-tle boy: "E-bene-zer, come here to me."—Chicago Tribune.

—A little fellow, five or six years old, who had been wearing undershirts much too small for him, after having been washed, was put into another garment as much too large as the other was too small. The six-year-old shrugged his shoulders, shook himself, walked around, and finally burst out with "Ma, I do feel awful lonesome in this shirt."

News and Notes

Pembroke was crowded with 5000 of the excited populace of the adjoining towns on Sunday. There is a disposition in some quarters to discredit the testimony of Miss Lake. A town meeting was held on Saturday evening to approve of the action of the selectmen in offering a reward for the murderer.

The democratic papers are so hard to please. While President Grant made no speeches or very short ones, they abused him for that, and now that he has made a very good one of some length, they abuse him still worse. It is discouraging.—Indianapolis Journal.

A Kansas Judge has decided that a man and wife can go to any place of amusement on a ticket that says "admit one," as by law they are considered "one."

Dr. M. H. Woodbury, a native of Lancaster, and recently from California, dropped dead in the street in New Bedford, Thursday. His death is supposed to have been caused by chloral, incautiously administered by himself.

Samuel Wilson of Derry, while riding through Pelham, Saturday afternoon, was thrown against a tree by the running away of a horse, and broke one of his legs.

William Waterman, a brakeman on the Boston, Concord and Montreal Railroad, was caught by his hips and rolled between a freight car and the platform of the freight depot in a space of about six inches. No bones were broken, but he was injured internally, perhaps fatally.

The flowage case of J. L. Perley vs. Marshall & Latham, which has been on trial for eight days in the Circuit Court at Laconia, was brought to a close on Saturday morning by a verdict for the defendant.

Timothy Collins wanted to die in New Milford, Conn., but the poormaster kindly thought of Boston, generous, open-hearted Boston, the city that loves to do good deeds for charity's sake, and he unselfishly put Timothy on a train bound for that city and paid his way. Boston was deprived of doing anything more for him than to give his corpse a proper burial. He died in the depot.

The State Normal School has about eighty students enrolled for the Fall term, and a larger attendance than usual is promised for the Winter and Spring terms. The new teachers are doing very successful work. Large additions has been made to the geological cabinet apparatus and library, and the professional character of the school is constantly improving.

At a special town-meeting held in Bennington on the 25th ult., the town voted to reconsider the vote passed three years ago, instructing the selectmen to take stock to the amount of five per cent. of the town valuation in the Peterborough & Hillsborough railroad, when said road is fully under contract, and voted the same as a gratuity to the Manchester & Keene railroad, on condition that it be built within a specified distance of the village. The President of the company pledged himself that the road should be located immediately upon the passage of the vote. The amount of gratuity thus voted is $9000.

One firm in Lyme has just sold 8000 pounds of wool. Price 40 cents per pound.

In the United States Circuit Court, Friday, Judge Clark delivered an opinion in the case of the United States vs. Trombly, indicted last term for illegal voting at Manchester for members of Congress. Last March a demurrer was filed on the ground that the law was unconstitutional, and the proceedings of information by the District Attorney illegal. The Court overruled the demurrer, and the cases were set for trial on Tuesday. This will be remembered as the Manchester repeating case. Two of the parties held in jail are D. D. O'Connor and Patrick Mangan, from Boston.

The Internal Revenue receipts show an increase of about $2,000,000, as compared with the same period last year, and the Commissioner estimates the receipts for the entire year at about $20,000,000, or $10,000,000 more than was collected last year.

A meeting of the Soldiers' Committee for the grand reunion at Manchester, October 12th, 13th and 14th has been held to perfect arrangements for an escort to the visiting soldiers. F. W. Challis presided, and remarks were made by many gentlemen present. The escort will consist of military companies and veteran soldiers of Manchester, numbering 6000. Arrangements for a grand reunion such as was never before had in New Hampshire are nearly complete, and the project will be a great success in every respect. Letters have been received by the members of the committee from soldiers from all parts of the United States, and fully 2500 will be present, should the weather prove favorable.

Some soft-headed chap wants people interested in Mrs. Tilton, and who stayed away from Theodore's Boston lecture, to contribute the sum they might have spent (by means of the Boston Globe) to Elizabeth —because—because—because—

Gen. Judson Kilpatrick announces himself a thoroughgoing hard-money man. He says he believes in the Government keeping its promises, regardless of consequences. He told a reporter of the Toledo Blade recently that, in his opinion, the questions of finance and the schools were not the most important in the campaign, and the election this Fall will not decide those of next year. The old democratic party would split up as they did on the question of slavery, and a new democratic party, with an entirely new platform, would be formed before the beginning of the political strife of 1876.

The Kentucky tobacco crop is in magnificent condition, with an acreage 200 per cent. larger than last year. How can the republican party stand up under such a responsibility as this?—Cinn. Times.

The recent arrest in Florida of the defaulting teller of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, of Montreal, was brought about in a peculiar way. The bank, it will be remembered, was robbed about a month ago by one of the attaches, who, with his father, immediately absconded, and until lately nothing had been heard of either. As soon as the robbery was discovered a picture of the absconder appeared in the New York Graphic, together with a notice announcing that $5000 reward would be paid for the arrest of Thos. W. Nichols, who had absconded from Montreal, taking with him a number of Dominion legal-tender notes, the property of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, of the denominations of $500 and $1000. A full description of Nichols accompanied the notice, stating that he was 21 years old, dark brown hair, smooth face, etc. Shortly after the advertisement appeared, an elderly gentleman with his son arrived in St. Augustine, Florida, and took lodgings at a private boarding-house. They made known their desire to purchase an orange grove, and inquired if Canadian bonds would be received as security there. On the same day that the strangers arrived at St. Augustine, several copies of the Graphic containing the photograph of the young bank robber and his father had arrived there, and the Sheriff of St. John's county was very much struck by the resemblance they bore to them. The description answered perfectly and taking into consideration the fact that the young man gave his name as Thomas Nichols, the Sheriff communicated with the municipal authorities, who at once telegraphed back that they were without doubt the robbers, and to arrest them at once. Accordingly the Sheriff proceeded to the house where the fugitives were stopping and effected the arrest while they were at dinner, without experiencing any difficulty. When they were shown the photographs sent to St. Augustine the older said, "Well, they do look a good deal like us."

The vigilant republicans of Pennsylvania are still exposing points in Pershing's political history which prove him to be quite unworthy to govern a loyal people who have been combatting his sentiments and deeds for the past fifteen years.

A Spanish paper states that Minister Caleb Cushing, acting under instructions from the United States Government, has notified the Spanish Secretary of State that if the Cuban rebellion is not quelled by the 1st of January the belligerent rights of the Cubans will be recognized by the American Government.

The English steamer Biscay has stranded off Jutland while on a voyage from Cronstadt to Bremerhaven. Eleven persons were drowned. The Biscay was an iron steamer, built in 1872.

Some prominent republicans from Mississippi are in Washington, representing that the causes of the disorders in that State spring from corrupt intrigues of Governor Ames to secure his own election to the United States Senate.

Peterson's Magazine is on our table for November. The principal steel engraving, "Mamma's Flower Girl," is very beautiful. So, also, is the mammoth colored steel fashion plate. But, as a cotemporary says, the stories, the fashions, the patterns, in short, everything in "Peterson" is the best of its kind. For 1876 great improvements will be made. Among these will be a series of illustrated articles, describing the Centennial Exhibition, which will alone be worth the subscription price. But, in addition to this, every subscriber will be presented, as a Centennial gift, with a steel engraving (large-sized for framing) of Trumbull's great picture, "The Signing of the Declaration of Independence." These very extraordinary inducements will make this magazine for 1876 more desirable than ever. The price will remain the same, viz.: Two dollars a year, the postage prepaid by the publisher. The prices to clubs are low, (postage also pre-paid,) viz.: three copies for $4.80, with a superb Mezzotint (21 inches by 26) "Christmas Morning" to the person getting up the club; or five copies for $8.40, (postage pre-paid,) and both an extra copy and the premium engraving to the person getting up the club. For large clubs the prices are even lower. Specimens of the Magazine are sent, gratis, if written for. Address Charles J. Peterson, 306 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

—"Father," asked a Vicksburg boy at the dinner table recently, "are you a big man?"

"Well, I dunno," musingly answered the parent. "Why?"

"Cause I heard some men talking over at the hotel, and they said you were one of the biggest men in town."

"Well, I suppose I do stand pretty high," replied the parent, looking pleased and consequential.

There was half a minute of silence, and then the boy added:

"They said it was a wonder how you carried your feet around!"

The boy can't understand yet why he should have received a box on the ear which made his head roar for two long hours.

—The natural result of an equal commingling of the sexes in a Wyoming jury was recently exemplified in a case wherein five days and nights of deliberation led—not to a verdict, of course—but to five elopements; and there would undoubtedly have been six if the remaining juror woman hadn't been a mature mother-in-law.

Jottings.

U. S. S. Emerald has been hauled up for a general overhauling to her hull and machinery, and her place is filled by one of the steam cutters.

C. H. Mendum & Co. occupy a full column to-day for their Fall and Winter announcement of new goods, fresh from New York, Mr. Locke having returned from there with an extensive line purchased at very low prices. One of the satisfactory results of trading with this firm is the fact that they have the most complete stock of dry goods in the city to select from and customers are shown better facilities for gratifying their tastes than if the quantity and variety were small. The firm order anything in their line by telegraph or express if the customer is not suited with the stock on hand, and are desirous of showing the goods they advertise. A perusal of to-day's announcement will be interesting reading for the ladies, and the store will doubtless be thronged and the courteous "salesmen" be exceedingly busy until the present stock is disposed of.

Mr. Melvin Stimson of Kittery is the crack gunner of this region.

The neatest cards of invitation we have seen are those issued by C. N. Shaw & Co. from the press of Mr. Charles W. Gardner, for the grand Fall and Winter opening of millinery goods, (latest styles of New York bonnets and hats,) at No. 3 Market street, Wednesday and Thursday. These openings are events long looked forward to by the ladies, the exquisite taste displayed in making up the ornamental coverings for the heads of the dear creatures causing them one and all to visit Market street en masse. This season, C. N. Shaw & Co. have returned from New York with a large stock of the handsomest styles which have ever pleased the fancy or delighted the sight of the fair devotees of fashion, and there will necessarily be a rush to see the new and elegant patterns.

On his present Western tour, Grant was dead-headed over the railroads from Long Branch to Colorado.—Boston Post.

Sad, isn't it? But is that quite so bad as fitting up the best frigate in the navy to bring Frank Peirce to Portsmouth when he was President? Tell us about it, Post!

The democracy of the city have been hankering for a democratic administration for the last fifteen years, and now that they have it we have the humorous spectacle of a prominent democrat now petitioning a republican Board of County commissioners, to come to our city and widen one of our most public streets, after vainly petitioning his political friends to carry out the needed improvement. When will they be satisfied?

Sailmaker A. A. Warren is detached from the receiving ship Sabine and ordered to equipment duty at the navy yard in place of Sailmaker Stephen Seaman, detached from duty and placed on waiting orders.

Mr. John Young was struck in the face by several shots at the shooting match in the trotting park, recently. Mr. Young was standing looking on, when a careless person who was firing at the pigeons who got away on the outside, fired his blunderbuss, and the shot flew into the crowd. Mr. Young narrowly escaped losing aneye.

During the twenty-five years that Portsmouth has been a city, the democrats have had full control of the city government seven, the "Know-Nothings" one, the whigs two, and the republicans fifteen.

William Quinn got tired of playing hide and go seek with the police, after ten days' fun, and walked into the police station on Monday, and surrendered. Judge Page sentenced him to thirty days in jail and ordered him to pay $18.04 fine and costs for throwing rocks and fighting on Washington street.

Those guns from the sea-coast were fired by the "Saw Hims" of Chelsea, who had their annual gathering at the Wentworth, Saturday, Sunday and Monday.

The pupils of the city schools are soon to have an opportunity to compete for prizes offered by friends of the S. P. C. A., for the best essays and declamations, the "Humane Treatment of Animals" to be the subject. The exercises will be public and the prizes will be awarded by a committee chosen from the audience.

Mr. H. W. Briant, brother-in-law to Dr. S. C. Whittier, is to open the new apothecary store at the corner of Daniel and Market streets about the first of November, with elegant fittings and a large stock. If he is as genial a gentleman and as fair-minded a citizen as the Doctor, he will not lack friends.

Maggie Mitchell.

About 350 reserved seats have been sold for the entertainment to-morrow evening.

The Kansas City (Mo.) Journal, in an articled descriptive of the "Pearl of Savoy," said of a recent performance there:

If anything further were necessary to prove the high appreciation in which Maggie Mitchell is held by the people of Kansas City, it was certainly supplied at her benefit at the Opera House last night. The audience, notwithstanding the coldness of the night, was one of the largest and most appreciative that our town ever brought before any star on that stage. An observer would readily pronounce it the best audience of the engagement, and we learn it was larger than that which attended the opening night in St. Joseph.

The play contains, in the first three acts, much that appears but common-place, but from the first to fourth act develops and defeats a vile plot, which brings in several interesting scenes which demand fine acting and show to great advantage the genius and skill of the star. The Mother's Prayer, in the first act, the Father's Curse, in the fourth act, and the return home, in the fifth act, are decidedly impressive, and drew heavily upon the artists' emotional resources. They were all magnificently rendered.

An Unanswerable Argument.

The strongest argument which can be urged against the advisability of administering such corrosive and nerve-destroying poisons as arsenic and quinine for intermittent and remittent fevers, is the vastly superior success in the prevention and cure of such diseases of a medicine which is the very antipode of the above named drugs, both in respect of its composition and the results wrought by it. Such a medicine is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a purely vegetable preparation, which not only eradicates with wonderful promptitude every trace of fever and ague, and kindred types of malarious disease from the system, but is a certain preventive of all maladies begotten of miasma-tainted air and water. These results mineral anti-febrile remedies do not effect with certainty, and their continued use entails consequences highly pernicious to the system. The Bitters, on the contrary, not only afford speedy relief, but establish health on a permanent basis.

Consumption is impossible when coughs, cold and other acute affections of the throat and lungs are promptly met with the required doses of HALE'S HONEY OF HOREHOUND AND TAR. For sale by al druggists.

LYON'S KATHAIRON prevents the Hair from falling out or turning gray, renews its growth, and gives strength and vigor. It is delightfully perfumed, and makes a splendid dressing. It is the cheapest and most desirable Hair Tonic ever produced. Used by the elite. Price only 50 cents.

VERY DURABLE AND CHEAP!

PULMOCINE CORDIAL.

Daily Chronicle.

—The Natchez Democrat-Courier of a recent date gives an interesting account of a number of Chinamen employed in Chicot County, Arkansas. They are more serviceable as tenants than as employes, and in the economy of time and the facility with which their tasks are performed, display far more ability than the negro. The terms usually made are one hundred pounds of lint cotton to the acre, the planter furnishing a mule with which to cultivate the crop. At early dawn the Chinaman has had his breakfast and is in the field to do his work. At eleven o'clock one of their number is sent in to cook their dinner, the hour for which is announced by the display of a small pennant. Half an hour is usually consumed at the meal, and returning to the field they continue at work until dark. During ploughing time planters are compelled to see to it that their animals have sufficient time to rest and eat, as the Celestials appear to be blessed with no compunction where mules are concerned, and would keep one unfed and at work all day did the opportunity present itself. Their ploughing is represented to be the best, with furrows straight as a rule. They also seem to be adepts in the cultivation of vegetables, all their gardens being kept in the most perfect order. A supply of the principal vegetables is carefully dried and kept for Winter. Their houses are described as the personification of neatness, every utensil being scoured bright as silver, while their clothes are always clean, and in personal appearance they are never offensive. Their time, too, is fully employed, it being with great difficulty they can be restrained from working on Sunday.

—A man whose credit is not of the best stripe, not having the ready money by him, resorted to the following ready-witted experiment: Going to one of our grocers, accompanied by his son, a lad of eight or ten years' growth, he called for a few pounds of sugar, which was weighed out and nicely stowed into a paper bag. He then called for a pound of rice, at the same time giving the sugar to the boy, saying, "Now run right home with this, and I'll bring the rice when I come." The rice being "done up" he requested the clerk to "charge it," which he declined to do. Sharpie had no money and the sugar was gone off with the boy—what would they do about it? Sugar and grocer both sold! It was charged to profit and loss, especially to the latter.—Kenosha (Wis.) Telegraph.

—On the day that the great tent in which Beecher preached at the Twin Mountain House was first occupied, Beecher was offering prayer, when the stentorian voice of Asa Barron broke on the ears of the worshippers, ordering out the hose to sprinkle down the ground around the tent. When the services were over Mr. Beecher approached the senior proprietor of the house and said, "Asa, we shall always be glad to have you take part in our religious services, but you must be careful not to interrupt others. It was very appropriate while I was praying for a shower of divine grace inside, for you to be calling for the hose to shower the dusty ground outside; but you mustn't pray louder than I do when you pray at the same time."

—A story is told of a German soldier in Lorraine, which serves to illustrate the impossibility of rooting out French sympathies in that Province. The soldier was suffering from a cold in the head, and blew his nose in a way very common with German soldiers, but not quite in accordance with civilized manners. A woman in the crowd exclaimed: "What! with all our five milliards, they have not got pocket handkerchiefs yet!" A police agent heard her, and she was marched off to the lock-up, where she was fined five thalers. The crowd that followed her at once got up a subscription, and, in addition to paying the fine, gave her another five thalers "for the pleasure she had caused them."

—"What do I care for a depreciated currency," said a lazy loafer to a man who tried to prove that inflation meant depreciation; "fifty cents on a dollar will do for me," continued the loafer. "I'll take your dollar at ten per cent. on its face. You fellows that work may object to them, but I go for the value I find in them. I don't care to sweat over a gold dollar, if I can get enough depreciated currency for nothing. I go for inflation!" This philosopher ought to stamp Ohio for Allen.—Columbia, S. C., Union Herald.

—"Enfant Terrible" (after contemplating visitor for some time).—"O, Mr. Brown, let's have a game! We've got a whacking big sponge up stairs! I wish you'd sponge on 'ps now; it'd be such fun. He says you always do at the club—!!!" Tableau!—Punch.

OF MICHIGAN LANDS,
FOR SALE!

The Lands of the Jackson, Lansing & Saginaw Railroad Company are now Offered For Sale.

They are situated along its railroad and contain large tracts of excellent FARMING and PINE Lands. The farming lands include some of the most fertile and well-watered hardwood lands in the State. They are timbered mainly with hard-maple and beech; soil black, sandy loam, and abound in springs of pure cool water. Michigan is one of the least indebted and most prosperous State in the Union, and its farmers have a greater variety of crops and resources than any Western state. While some of the Prairie States may produce corn in great abundance, they have no other resource, and when this crop fails destitution follows, as has been the case the past year in Kansas and Nebraska. For Maps, Circulars and further information, apply to or address O. M. BARNES, Land Commissioner, Lansing, Michigan.

T. W. LANE:—I have used one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, am glad to state in my case they have proved all that you claim for them. I have been troubled with Bad Blood and all its consequent diseases, and have tried several kinds of Bitters and Pills without receiving much benefit, until I tried the CONDITION PILLS, and they have nearly cured where all else failed. Testimony of a Clergyman---Liver and Kidney Troubles.

EAST TILTON, N. H., April 14, 1875.

MR. LANE.—Dear Sir:—DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS are not only the best, but the very best I ever used. My wife has been troubled with Kidney Complaint many years; one-half of a package has cured her, so that she feels as well as ever. I have been troubled with Liver Complaint for many years; one-half of a package has done me more good than all the Pills I ever took. One of my neighbors took them, who has been troubled with Liver Complaint for many years: three Pills have helped him. Your Pills, where used, commend their virtues. Please send to my address one package.

REV. JOHN DAVIS.

Liver Compaint and Rheumatism so that he Could not Sleep Nights.

I was born and always lived in Pittsfield, N. H.; am now 50 years old; been troubled with Liver Complaint for 30 years, and Rheumatism for 20 years, sometimes so I could not sleep nights. I have taken one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, and they have done me more good and relieved more suffering than all the medicine I have taken during my life. S. S. RING.

Fever and Ague.

NEW BOSTON, N. H., Feb. 1, 1875.

T. W. LANE.—Sir:—Last month I sent to you for a package of DR. QUAIN'S PILLS. I had tried five so-called ague cures, and I received more benefit from five of your pills than from all the "Cures" "Cholagogues," "Quinine," &c., that I have taken in two years. I cannot recommend it too highly for diseases resulting from long standing Fever and Ague.

Yours, most respectfully,
MRS. C. GARLAND.

Scaly Humor Cured by One Package---Liver Complaint Helped.

WEST RINDGE, Cheshire Co., N. H., November 17, 1874.

THOS. W. LANE:—After taking three packages of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, I am prepared to say they are the very best, for I have tried a great many kinds, and faithfully too, believing they would help me, to no effect.—These I do believe are the very best ever made; just the kind a man needs. May they be spread all over the wide world, and Dr. Quain's name a household word.

Yours truly,
ASA STICKNEY.

HILLSBOROBRIDGE, Feb. 25, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—Dr. Quain's Condition Pills are the best I ever used for lameness and pain. The first dose I took removed the pain and lameness that I have been troubled with for several years. Others have used quite a number of the pills besides myself. Please send another package by return of mail. MRS. DANIEL KIMBALL.

GILMANTON I. W., N. H., Feb. 25, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have been taking Dr. Quain's Condition Pills, and can recommend them as far ahead of common pills for constipation of the bowels; they do not have the debilitating effect of common purgatives I have taken.

MRS. J. B. GOODWIN.

NORTHWOOD CENTRE, March 1, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I saw Dr. Quain's Condition Pills highly recommended, and sent for a package, and I feel that they have done more for me than all the medicine I have taken for years, and can freely recommend them to others, as a good and sure medicine. Please send me another package as soon as possible. MARTHA NORCROSS.

BRISTOL, N. H., Feb. 27, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have made a fair trial of those Condition Pills, and liked them very much. I think they are all they are recommended. They are a good Liver invigorator.

N. F. DANFORTH.

SALEM DEPOT, N. H., March 8, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE:—I think those pills (Dr. Quain's Condition Pills) are all they claim to be; my wife and I are both victims of Liver and Kidney Complaint, and general debility. We have taken about half that package you sent me, and find a marked improvement in our health. I want four packages to give away in the north part of Vermont, to friends up there. I enclose $2.00, and if you can, send me four Packages. ROYAL SCOTT.

SOUTH PLATTSBURGH, N. Y., March 11, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE:—I have given Dr. Quain's Condition Pills a trial, and find I can honestly recommend them, they having made me entirely free from the soreness and lameness with which I have been afflicted since getting upon my feet after the Paralysis of left side that I suffered from. Should I desire more to send me another package as soon as convenient, as I am anxious to continue their use. Though not now a resident of New England, I have lived in Central Vermont more than fifty years, and trust Dr. Quain's Pills will not long be new in that section. MOSES SHELDON.

THOS. W. LANE:—I have been troubled with Biliousness, Headache, and Dizziness, for a long time, and had the Dyspepsia so bad there were but few kinds of food my stomach would bear at all. I commenced taking your pills, have taken most of one package, and now enjoy eating as well as I ever did, am not troubled with dizziness unless by taking cold, and have been greatly benefited by the use of them. A. L. PAGE.

FRANCESTOWN, March 13, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE:—I have found Dr. Quain's Condition Pills to be all you claim for them in Kidney Complaint, poor blood, and weak nerves. May they be circulated over the land and found in every household where medicine is needed. I enclose 50 cts. for another package as soon as convenient.

JOHN T. FELCH.

LOCAL AGENTS WANTED.

An Agent Wanted for Each Town and County in the United States.

Parties desiring to act as agents must accompany their application by a letter of recommendation as to character and responsibility from and signed by the Editor of a newspaper published in the town or county for which the agent proposes to act. The agency is to sell the bonds of the Industrial Exhibition Company.

BONDS, $20 EACH.
HALF BONDS, $10 EACH.
QUARTER BONDS, $5 EACH.

The Industrial Exhibition Company will furnish agents with circulars, etc., etc.

Each newspaper published in the town where an agent is located will, as soon as the agency is established, be given an advertisement, advertising such agency and the Company, and fully explaining the plans, purposes and objects of the Company. Such advertisement will continue in such papers as long as an agency is successfully conducted.

The Industrial Exhibition Company is the first to adopt the plan so long in use by the European governments of issuing bonds when the proceeds is made secure and not risked, but where there is a chance for a large premium, an investment of $20 is sure to return to the investor $21—one dollar more than cost—and the holder of a $20 Bond may obtain a premium either of $50, $100, $200, $500, $1,000, $2,000, $5,000, $10,000, $25,000 or $100,000. The interest, which is ordinarily distributed to all the bond-holders pro rata, is in this loan distributed by chance. The purchaser of a bond knows he will receive back his investment, with a small rate of interest, he has a chance in the above named premiums, which are simply the distribution of interest on the whole loan.

Each bond participates in four drawings each year, until it has drawn a premium, when it is surrendered, the premium paid, and the bond cancelled.

The Industrial Exhibition Company, under a special charter granted by the State of New York, is given authority to issue these bonds. The Legislature of the State, recognizing the great benefits which will arise from the success of this enterprise, have exempted all the real estate and property of the Company from taxation and assessments for five years, and has also conferred other great privileges.

Every American who understands the purposes of this Company will, of a necessity, feel a pride in aiding it to a successful termination.

Each individual who buys a bond becomes an owner and an interested party, and when he views the structure erected with his money can say, "I aided to erect in our country the most magnificent build ing the world has ever seen, a palace which, in truth, represents the industry, energy and mechanical genius of the American people."

The manufacturers and the inventors of America are peculiarly interested in the success of this enterprise, for the reason that it is to be their home, where all their inventions and manufactures can be exhibited and sold.

The building will contain 5,320,000 square feet of space.

Purchasers desiring Bonds before an agency is established where they reside, will communicate direct with this office, from where they can be supplied.

Parties desiring to act as agents or to purchase bonds will address

For Diphtheria
Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial
Is a Speedy Remedy.
IT SOOTHS IMMEDIATELY,
— AND —
CURES THE WORST CASES.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is now discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the long trying climate of New England;

PORTSMOUTH, N. H.,

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Promptly Attended To.

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or Inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,
Croup,
Diphtheria,
Asthma, etc.,

USE

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

M. T. BETTON & CO., No. 16 Congress street,
Main & Winchester's Block

is published semi-monthly, and each issue contains a COMPLETE NOVEL, by one of the great authors of the world, as Charles Reade, Dickens, Scott, Anthony Trollope, Jules Verne, etc., etc. The completion of long and important novels in a single issue, is the most unique and valuable feature yet introduced into the periodical literature of the day, and is peculiar to The Lakeside Library.

Each issue of The Library contains a Complete Novel, that would cost in the book stores, on the average, $1.50 each; yet the price of the same in The Library is only 10 cents if you buy a single copy from your newsdealer, or only 9 cents if you subscribe for a year. The whole series of 24 numbers will contain Twenty-two Complete Novels, worth about $40.00, but costs only $2.15 in The Library!

Occasionally we shall issue double numbers, to contain unusually long and important works, as "The Man from the Law" by Wilkie Collins, and Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Seas," by Jules Verne. When this is necessary, both numbers of the story will be issued together, so that the complete work will be in the reader's hands at once. In such cases three numbers will be issued in one month. ☞ Hence all subscriptions are received for 24 numbers.

Our next issue, Nos. 14 and 15, will be a splendid Double number complete and unabridged with Eight characteristic illustrations, containing the famous

"Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Seas,"
By JULES VERNE.

This wonderful book is descriptive of a voyage of 20,000 leagues under the surface of the sea! No one acquainted with Verne's peculiar and dramatic style need be told that this, his greatest book, is most intensely interesting. It lays bare the mysteries of the mighty deep—its sunken wrecks; submarine forests; the grotesque, hideous and awful creatures who dwell therein; the beautiful coral caves; its treasures of gold, silver and jewels lost in Spanish ships of olden days. Yet so quaintly, and with with such an air of candor is the story told, that you can hardly believe you are not reading a transcript from a ship's log book. Sent by mail by the publishers, post-paid, for 25 cents.

☞ There is only one other edition published, which costs $4.00.

Subscribe now, and get all the back numbers, that your set may be complete. The entire set of 24 numbers of The Library, containing a choice library of Standard and Famous Novels, worth in book form about $40.00, and at a cost of only $2.15, including prepayment of postage—or about the price of one single book in ordinary book form. "The Portent," for instance, costs as a Bound Book, 1.75, and is published in No 12 of The Library for only 10 cents! And "Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Seas" costs as a Bound Book $4.00, and is published in Nos. 14 and 15 of The Library for only 20 cents!

☞ Each of these books is complete and unabridged, and costs in the bookstores from $1.0 to $4.00. Order a few samples.

Price, $2.15 for 24 numbers. Sold by all news dealers. Address,

Portsmouth Chronicle.

TILTON'S "PROBLEM OF LIFE" DISSECTED.

"Nym Crinkle," the admirable dramatic and literary critic of the New York World, has made the following capital analysis of the new work of Theodore Tilton:

Mr. Theodore Tilton has been slandering the present and extolling the past. It is a cheap and easy thing to do. I listened to his lecture on "The Problem of Life," and I admired the actor while I was pleased at the orator. Few professional talkers have so fascinating a swagger as Mr. Tilton. None that I know of can so completely fill the bill with a graceful animation. But he knows less of the problem of life than anybody who has asked our attention to it. It is a sufficient answer to Mr. Tilton and the other speculative men who undertake to amuse the populace with their ethical skirmishing to say that life has no problem for the man who does his whole duty in it, for that man has solved it. After Mr. Tilton has devoured all the remaining philosophies and religious in his search for something that will abide with him, he will find that this is the converging point. Religious and philosophic truth at last focus themselves in the individual, and the divine wisdom becomes a vulgar apothegm—do your duty and die. The problem is so simple that its solution startles us. Nothing can be more unprofitable than to beat the air for years talking about it, while the whole universe mutely but unmistakably expects to quietly work it out in our lives. Knowledge, I grant you, is a pang. That old mythus of the tree whose fruit made men as gods, and the eating of which brought endless misery, lives freshly in all intellectual experience. To know is to be lost in the mystery we have summoned. To do is to redeem ourselves. There is no other escape.

The problem of life is something that every human being has a lecture on, ready to be delivered whenever an audience can be found. Man measures the circumference of the universe in himself. His little conflict of ages, and the color of his experience is the tint that encircles the infinite. But we do not desire to listen to him. Heaven wisely ordains that the practice of virtue and not the preachment of it shall bear fruit, and our own good sense tells us that the sky is not leaden to all eyes alike. Every village store has its tribune, to which mounts the unsuccessful philosopher of the neighborhood with this lecture upon his lips. He has failed in business and been silently regarded for years as too smart to be successful in anything. Listen to him and you will hear of the iniquity of the times; how the virtues of our fathers have perished with them; how the corruption of the age makes honesty impossible. Has he lost office? Behold, the wickedness of politics is past belief, the country is rushing on to perdition. Has he been dropped from the church? Ah, what hypocrisies and lust lurk under the convenient guise of religion.

You can always measure these lecturers by their own facilities. So I measured Mr. Tilton. He assured me that "The problem of life is the development of character. A man's character," said he, "is something not only in his own keeping, but in his own making. Ah, I say character, and I do not mean reputation. A man's character is what he is, man's reputation is what people imagine him to be." He said this perfunctorily. It was the proper thing to say, and had been said often enough before. But after awhile he warmed up, "Is this a Christian country? Yes, to a degree; but it is a country in which a man forgives an injury at the cost of a reputation!" As this was said with all the feeling of which the speaker was capable, it produced a prodigious effect. If I had had a lad with me twelve years and entirely ignorant of the problem of life, I am satisfied he would have instantly replied to Mr. Tilton's proposition, mentally at least, in this wise: "Yes; but my dear sir, reputation, as you say, being a matter of other people's imagination, is of very little account, and you needn't get mad at it."

"The question is whether the forgiving of an injury will cost you anything in character. It seems to me that you are more anxious in regard to what people will say about virtues than about the virtues themselves." Nothing is easier than to scold the nineteenth century. It lacks Spartan virtues, Roman virtues, old-fashioned virtues. I never could understand this kind of scolding. I base the exercise of virtue on a knowledge of the truth. There isn't any more truth now than there was at the time of the Olympian games, and I suppose everybody has a better knowledge of it than had these noble herds that assembled on the banks of the Alpheus. And yet Mr. Tilton, in proof of the superior public virtue of the past, reminds us that Herodotus read the many volumes of his history to the populace between the chariot races. "Fancy," he cries with sad contempt, "Mr. Bancroft invited to read his histories between the spectacles at Barnum's hippodrome. The modern brain would not endure it."

Standing there in the hall of the Cooper Union, and looking over the several thousand people who swallowed this fallacious pill with delight, surely Mr. Tilton was a competent judge of what the modern brain would endure. Rise up, my twelve-year-old lad, and tell Mr. Tilton that his statement of fact is erroneous and his inference preposterous, shallow and dishonest; that Herodotus never read at the Olympian games, in fact was only twenty-eight years old and had not yet written his histories when he was to have recited at Olympia—that the story grew out of Lucian's "Herodotus" in part, and in part out of Plutarch's statement that the "Father of Histories" read portions of his work long afterward at the Panathenæan festival at Athens and received a subscription of ten talents for his excellent puff of the Athenians; that were it all true as stated, it does not in any degree exhibit the superior intellectual taste of the ancients, inasmuch as they could get history in no other way, and we have it in such quantities and so accessible that not even a popular lecturer can be excused for his ignorance.

It is such slip-shod eloquence as this that is constantly arraigning the present. Those only who are ignorant of the glories of their own age that lie all about them bestow such praises upon the past. He whom the rush of events has bruised is sorest at heart over the degeneracy of the times. Nothing, to my mind, is so indicative of well-balanced faculties and a healthful purpose in life as a belief in the present. Something surely is wrong with the man who boasted that the world stood still when he came into it. If our own age is not better than all the ages that preceded it, then were all the ages failures, for they toiled and spent themselves for this. Every wholesome man, being part of the present, is boastful of it. The vain regrets for the past are not only vain but vicious. They are the sentimentalism of natures not strong enough for the latest atmosphere. Existence is nobler with every generation, not from what has gone before, but by reason of the heritage that is left us. "Once," says Emerson, "we were stepping a little this way, a little that way; now we are as men in a balloon, and do not think so much of the point we have left or the point we would make, as the liberty and glory of the way."

Do you tell me that our progress is wholly material? Do you not know, then, that the social condition of a century, its faith as well as its prosperity, is the result of its requisitions? There exists in every man alongside of his own personality the ideal man who represents the race—toward that he has been slowly struggling since he emerged from the darkness of nature. If, as has been said, the outbreak of a revolution is the pulsation of the age, so, too, the birth of a hero is its finest utterance. Men who borrow the fabled lantern of the ancients to look for him, find it of no use in the blazing sunlight of our day. He no longer stands upon a pedestal or sits upon a throne; we reserve no place for him. It is the surpassing glory of our time that he lives in all ranks alone with his duty. It is the proudest achievement of man that it is made possible for him so to do. Mr. Tilton, who is crying for Thermopylæ and the three hundred, overlooks the battle field at his elbow, with its three hundred millions of silent heroes. If he had only given the student's attention to the fierce, sad and hopeless conflict that has been raging ever since man came to his estate of toil and suffering; could he but regard the endless struggle of the myriads of broken hearts, the awful spectacle of reproduced hopes and despairs, the coming of creatures into the bondage of agony and fear to look into the graves of their hopes, to shed a few tears and pass on into the promised agonies of another world—could he, I say, have used the historian's and not the poet's eye, and seen the past as it was, brutal, hopeless past to countless millions whose lives were an interrupted desolation—a past flowing with blood, abominable with injustice and memorable mainly for its animal prowess—he could the better have contrasted it with the present. But, with a fine dramatic sense, he caught only the flashing of swords, remembered only the obduracy of primitive natures, admired only the apocryphal words that tradition preserved. Must heroism, then, be dramatic in our day to appease this moral philosopher? Must the honest soul who tries to love his neighbor as himself have the duty arranged in three situations and a denouement? Shall charity carry a banner in private as she carries it at a benevolent funeral? Is the forgiveness of injuries to be weighed by the reports of it?

I believe that there are more men and women dying with hopeful smiles upon their lips in our age than ever before. There are more homes and family circles than ever. If Herodotus were to come back to me to observe our progress I would not take him to the popular lecturer. I'd take him to the factory, the criminal court and the insane asylum. One would prove to him that at last heroism was springing out of industry, another would reveal to him amid all its sodden and sorrowful faces something of the subtle influence of a Christian mercy keeping watch at the reporter's desk and in the back seats, and finally he would discover that science had conquered fate itself in regulating crime and intellectual depravity back to the hereditary cause. That student who, as he dwells in admiration upon the page of history softened as it is with the intervening years, does not shudder at the undertone of human woe, must be hardhearted indeed. I believe that those who continually laud the past are essentially croakers. Certainly Mr. Tilton so impressed me. He selected a topic before which religion stands humbly, at which philosophy is mute, at which science covers its head, and he tossed it gracefully about like a gilded ball. For his dexterity there were many open mouths. At his conclusions there was deep and general disappointment.

Daily Chronicle.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 13, 1875.

News and Notes

The youngest Jesse Pomeroy on record is reported from Digby, N. S., where the son of a Mr. Rice, aged eighteen months, nearly beat his baby sister to death with a curling-iron.

The mystery of the appearance of a beautiful young woman in the woods near Schenectady, N. Y., has ripened into a real romance. In 1873 the only daughter of Louis Bourbaki, who lived near Albany, fell from virtue, was driven from home, and hasn't been heard of since, until last Sunday. The recent stories of a wild woman of the woods started a strange suspicion in Bourbaki's mind that this was his child, and, with two young men as guides, he went to find her. Directed by a cry of distress, they followed down a deep ravine to a cavern, which they entered on hand and knee. The woman, as they entered, gave a shriek of despair and knocked her head against the ragged rocks like a maniac. Mr. Bourbaki cried, in a loud voice, "Emma!" She started, stood motionless for an instant, then, with a wild cry, sprang into her father's arms. She was nearly naked, and had on the remnants of the very clothes she wore when driven from her home. She was perfectly sane and went peaceably with them to a hotel, where she told to her father in private the story of her wanderings.

Mr. C. H. Kelley, an experienced quarryman, and Mr. L. F. Jones, of Farmington, discovered, last May, what they thought was a rich vein of ore in Alton, and have since quietly worked the same and find that the ore yields from $50 to $80 of gold and silver per ton of 2,000 pounds, and the prospects for successful mining operations are very flattering. A party from Providence, R. I., are sinking a shaft, and others are preparing to search for the precious metals, with good evidence of complete success.

Gen. Cary has had a good deal of up-hill work in his soft-money crusade in Ohio. The people kept asking him disagreeable questions. Recently he addressed an audience made up largely of Western Reserve dairymen, and at the close of his speech he stepped down among the audience to receive congratulations. A committee of the dairymen thanked him for his speech, and just as the General was thinking he had made a hit, one of them remarked: "General, we Yankees up here are in the habit of taking a practical view of things, and this one thing we confess our inability to comprehend. We can't see how, by adding two gallons of water to a gallon of milk, there will be any more cheese in it." Pressing duties called the great man away so suddenly he was unable to solve the conundrum.

John W. F. Hobbs Esq., of North Hampton, has given $10,000 for a school-house in that town.

The accounts of Naval Paymaster J. H. Stevenson, who has been attached at the Naval Depot at Nagasaki, Japan, have been adjusted at the Department, and his money account is short $54,714. He has been superseded, and is supposed to be on his way home.

A large sea-eagle—a species of fish-hawk—measuring five feet and three inches from tip to tip of wings, is what Henry E. Tilton of Hampton Falls, brought down with his little club, a few days ago, the bird having entangled itself by its claws to the limb of a tree in such a manner that it was held a prisoner.

Mr. A. P. Loring, captain and stroke of the Harvard Freshman crew last year, has been chosen captain of this year's University crew.

Since the struggle against the extension of slavery there has not been in any State in the Union such a square, uncompromising fight for a principle as that the supporters of Gov. Hayes have carried on in Ohio.

In the Circuit Court for Merrimac county, now in session, Phil Baxter was sentenced to three years in the State Prison for burglary in Sutton. George Ames, for burglary in Canterbury, was sentenced to three years.

Detectives engaged in working up the Noe murder case have arrested Maggie Casey, with whom Dolan, the suspected murderer, lived, and also George Van Horn and Mary Reed, as witnesses. When arraigned before Superintendent Walling, the woman Casey stated that Dolan left her at four o'clock on the morning of the murder, and returned five hours after, stating that he had "made a raise." While in the house he kept his coat buttoned up to his chin, though the day was very warm; he left the house, and when he returned he wore another suit of clothes; his face was also scratched. Evidence against Dolan is accumulating.

Sidney Roach of Ledyard, Conn., was attacked by a bull, while at work in his field Friday. The bull having come up and commenced running around him, Mr. Roach picked up a club with which to defend himself, and retreated backward. In so doing he fell, and the bull rushed up and threw him over a tree, which is twelve feet high. Mr. Roach landed just two rods away, striking on his head. He broke his back, and was killed instantly.

While Samuel Tilden is telling the people of New York of the wonderful work he has accomplished in his attack on the canal ring, Secretary Bristow is quietly struggling with the strongest band of whisky thieves the world ever saw, and the difference is, not one of the canal robbers has been punished, while several of the illicit distillers have been sentenced to penal servitude, and the revenue increased two millions a month.

The importation of dry goods into the country is still lessening in amount; this year, so far; that is to say, for nine months, the value is thirty-three millions less than in 1872. They fell off nearly twenty millions in 1873, eleven millions in 1874, and four millions this year; while there has been no remarkable diminution in the imports of miscellaneous dry goods, or in manufactures of flax; woolen goods have fallen off about 25 per cent. since 1873, and considerably since last year. Of silks, New York imported in 1873 seven million dollars worth in the first nine months; in 1874, four millions; this year nearly five millions.

S. W. Tilton & Co., Boston, are publishing a series of Children's Classics which we think will prove of more than ordinary interest, not only to the youngest in the family but to the older members as well. The first of the series contains the story of "Old Mother Hubbard" and some of "Mother Goose's Rhymes." The illustrations both in design and execution are much superior to what are usually found in children's books. It also contains simple and practical directions in "Sorrento Wood Carving," from which some member of the family can cut out the designs for window pictures, a style of amusement attracting much attention at the present time. Price 20 cts.

About ten days since the engineer of a freight train near Byron, Wyoming Territory, heard a terrible cracking noise, and thought something must be wrong with the engine. The train was stopped, when it was discovered that something was leaking from a car near the engine, and that the loud reports were caused by the wheels passing over drops of the fluid which had fallen upon the track. The car was opened, and a number of large tanks found upon the inside labelled "Glycerine." The horrible truth then burst upon the train men that they were hauling a whole car-load of that terrible explosive compound nitro-glycerine. The car was side-tracked and left at Granger, where a spur-track was built and the car run out upon it, away from the main track. It still remains there, and the citizens and railroad officials are alike at a loss to know what to do with it. The car is consigned to some firm in San Francisco, but the shippers cannot be found, although the company have made most stringent efforts to discover them. The owners have been respectfully requested to come forward, prove property, and take it away.

John Ryan and Patrick Carney, young men of Boston, aged about twenty-three years, settled a difficulty between them by a fight at Buzzey's wood last Saturday, lasting two hours and fifty-five minutes, seventy-three rounds being fought. Ryan died Monday from the effects of punishment received, and Carney, who was but slightly injured, has fled.

Speaking of Governor Allen's profanity, the Cincinnati Commercial says that "he has been about the world so long that he has a habit of speaking almost, perhaps altogether, unconsciously of himself and the Almighty, as if the two had been associated in great public works from immemorable times, and had become accustomed to the ways of each other."

Piper is to be tried in December for the murder of little Mabel Young in a belfry at Boston.

Over two hundred and fifty Christians have been slain on the plains and in the mountains of Servia and Bosnia within the past three months. These people have virtually been slaves of the Ottoman Empire in the past, and now that they rise to throw off this thraldom, they are mercilessly put to death.

—Having seen the question asked how to cure hens from eating eggs, and having been put to my wits' end to devise some means to stop them, I finally, by accident, hit upon a plan that I have never known to fail. One great trouble with many breeders is, they make their hens' nests too large, and with Brahmas and Cochins the nests are near the ground, and in many cases the eggs are in view of the hen. This was the case with my nests. Having tried every available stuff, such as pepper, mustard, turpentine, and everything I could hear of, but no cure, I then took a common nail keg, cut it in two, or a piece about eight inches high, and placed it in the box where the hens laid. I then put in an egg; the old hen then mounted the nest or keg and tried to reach the egg, standing on the edge of the keg, but it was no go; she then got down in the keg, but that was a failure, for she did not have room to get at the egg; after trying for some time she gave it up as a bad job. I have never had an egg eaten by the hens since then; all of the nests in my coops have a piece of a keg in the box, and have parts of kegs for nests. Do not make them too deep, but deep enough, so that the hen cannot reach the bottom when standing on the edge of the keg. You who are troubled with hens eating their eggs, try the plan; it costs but little, and I think you will never regret the trouble it will be to out-wit the old hen.—Poultry Bulletin.

—A crabbed old bachelor of our acquaintance was amusing himself with a youngster, and apparently enjoying the pastime, much to our surprise, for we had a previous impression that he abominated little folks. "We supposed that you disliked children," we said in astonishment. "No," he replied, "you are quite mistaken; but I detest mothers."

—Dr. Hugh J. Glenn, of California, works forty thousand acres of land, and is the biggest farmer in the world. He can mend a trace and make a key to an ox-bow with his jack-knife, just as easily as drawing his check for $1,000,000, which he can do every day in the week.

—The Arcadian thus expresses it: "A newspaper man is a partridge, never shot at till he rises."

The Elections.

A dispatch from Boston received at midnight says:

Ohio republicans claim 50,000 majority for Hayes. German vote solid republican. Cincinnati and Hamilton county gone republican, also Toledo. General Small republican, gains throughout the State. Cuyahoga county 30,000 republican majority. Scattering news from Iowa indicate a largely increased republican majority.

Stanly in Africa.

Mr. Stanley's remarkable experiences in the sombre depths of the African jungles are vividly described in his first letter, which fills a broadside in the New York Herald to-day. The long and arduous march of his expedition from Mpwapwa Usagara to the Victoria Niyanza, from whence the letter was sent, was attended with perilous adventures and hairbreadth escapes, which have their parallel only in the most extravagant works of fiction. Setting out upon his expedition from Zanzibar with over 300 followers, 154 died from fever, dysentery, hunger and battle before the real purpose of his explorations had begun. They crossed broad and bleak plains, where food was scarce and cloth vanished fast, to enter hilly districts where food was abundant, the people civil and the chiefs kind. They traversed troublesome districts, where wars and rumors of wars were rife, the people treacherous and hostile, to enter countries lying at the mercy of the ferocious Wahumba and the bloodthirsty Wahebe. Furious rainy tempests accompanied them each day, and some days both nature and man warred against them. Men died from fatigue, thirst and famine; many were left behind sick, while many again, deserted. In one of the wild regions, near the Leewumbu river, they were attacked by a tribe of savages, called the Wstura, in full war costume. Feathers of the buzzard, the eagle and the kite waved above their heads, or the mane of the zebra and the giraffe encircled their brows; their left hands held their bows and arrows, while their right bore their spears. A messenger who was sent to treat with the savages was killed, a dozen spears having been plunged into his back. The battle then began, and for three days the fate of the travelers trembled in the balance. On the third day they began the battle with sixty good men, who received instructions to proceed to the extreme length of the valley and burn what had been left the previous day. These came to a strong and large village to the northeast, which, after a slight resistance, they entered, loaded themselves with grain and set on fire. Long before noon it was clearly seen that the savages had had enough of war and were demoralized, and the travellers returned through the now silent and blackened valley without molestation. The Herald characterizes this three days' fighting with the treacherous and avaricious Watura as a splendid achievement—twenty-one of Stanley's followers dying in battle with the treacherous foe. A strong purpose as well as a stout heart and vigorous frame was necessary to endure all the struggles and sufferings and disappointments this letter reveals; and the fact that Mr. Stanley has withstood every foe so long, has dared and overcome every danger, and has crowned even the beginning of his work with the most important geographical discovery of the age, gives the Herald hope not alone that his greatest trials and difficulties are past, but that he will be able to meet and overcome every new danger, and complete his mission by the achievement of still more brilliant triumphs.

North Hampton.

The members of the Congregational Sabbath School to the number of about 150 met at the vestry one evening not long since and presented to Mr. Frank R. Drake, a splendid bronze mantel clock as a slight token of regard for his long and faithful services as Superintendent of the school. The presentation was made through the pastor, Rev. Mr. Haines, and was happily replied to by Mr. Drake. The gift was wholly a surprise to him. A collation was then served and the company retired, having had a pleasant gathering.

Messrs. A. and J. W. Warner, who have for years carried on the wheelwright and carriage business in this town, have the past season put into their place of business a ten-horse power engine in the place of a smaller one. They are now busily engaged in supplying the wants of their customers, doing a large amount of planing and matching for people who come from quite a distance. As there has been an unusual amount of building in this town this season, a place like the above has been found a great convenience.

Last Friday afternoon the North and Centre district voted to unite for school purposes. J. W. F. Hobbs, Esq., a well known citizen, and a liberal donor, heretofore, has generously offered to build for the united district, a house large enough for primary and grammar schools with a hall above. The house will be built and furnished in modern style. It will be a great benefit as well as an ornament to the town.

Maggie Mitchell.

The piquant little actress is to be welcomed this evening by the most brilliant audience that ever assembled at any entertainment in this city, and Maggie may well feel that it is a worthy tribute personally, as well as an exhibition of the great interest in the drama of which she is the heroine. Every available reserved seat on the parquette has been taken, and yesterday the three front rows of seats in the gallery were reserved at the same price as those below, most of them being taken speedily. At four o'clock in the afternoon, 414 tickets had been sold. It is highly probable that the unreserved seats will be taken with a rush to-day, and that many must be content with standing room. There is an intense desire to see the "Pearl of Savoy."

The New Haven (Conn.) Register says: That charming actress, Maggie Mitchell, appeared at Music Hall, before one of the largest and most fashionable audiences ever assembled in this city. The play was the "Pearl of Savoy," and to say that the audience was charmed from the time the curtain rose to its final fall for the evening, does not half express it. Maggie Mitchell, in the personation of youth, has no equal on the American stage. Her manner, speech, and actions, are so childlike and natural, that scarcely any one realizes that the lady is long past her majority. She possesses a wonderful power over her audiences,—at one moment filling all eyes with tears, while in the next instant she carries all off into the wildest exhibition of mirth. The lady will always be a welcome visitor to our city in whatever role she chooses to appear.

The Boston Herald says: The third and last week of Miss Mitchell's engagement opened auspiciously with the production of "The Pearl of Savoy," which though less famous than "Fanchon," is appropriately termed its "companion drama," and affords Miss Mitchell as fine opportunities to display her wonderful abilities in her chosen line of acting as any part in which she is accustomed to appear. The piece as at present produced introduces in support of Miss Mitchell, Mr. Shewell and the entire company, and so interested were the audience in the varying fortunes of Marie that it would have been difficult to discriminate between those to whom the play was new and those whose interest sprang from old associations. With her misfortunes all sympathized; but at her childish delights and successes they exhibited a degree of satisfaction that was abundant testimony to the naturalness of the acting, and we think no lady could have required a more amused and interested audience than Marie had while spelling out her letter from Andre. And her song and dance with Pierot furnished immense satisfaction.

Jottings.

The meeting of the Board of Trade called for Wednesday evening, is postponed to Friday evening at the same place and hour.

Mr. S. O. Lunt, who has been station agent at the Boston depot of the Eastern Railroad, is now day conductor on the Bangor night express, the transfer being made at his option. Mr. Ira J. Hutchinson, whom Mr. Lunt succeeds, will run between Boston and Portsmouth.

At the earnest solicitation of many interested individuals, the ladies' committee of the library fund have decided to give a fancy dress party instead of the Quaker assembly as at first decided upon. By this arrangement it is now left optional with the ladies how elaborate their toilets shall be on the occasion. Since this agreeable change there has been an increased demand for tickets.

The S. P. C. A. Lyceum course will open Nov. 6th with a lecture by Carl Schurz. Other first class lecturers are engaged. An opera and a concert, instrumental and vocal, well give variety to the course. The plan adopted by the managers last year, by which a seat was secured to each ticket holder, will be adhered to. All the seats will be numbered and the prices will correspond to the locality, ranging from $2.00 to $1.50. In order to give each patron of the Lyceum a chance to select seats, the sale of tickets will begin at the Temple, Monday, Nov. 1st, at half-past ten o'clock. The Temple will be opened at 10 o'clock. No sale in advance.

The immense sales of HALE'S HONEY OF HOREHOUND AND TAR proves that the people consider it the only sure remedy for coughs and colds and all pulmonary diseases. Sold by all druggists.

Pike's Toothache Drops cure in one minute.

COMMON SENSE vs. PREJUDICE.

By R. V. PIERCE, M. D., of the World's Dispensary, Buffalo, N. Y., Author of "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser," etc., etc.

I am aware that there is a popular, and not altogether unfounded, prejudice against "patent medicines," owing to the small amount of merit which many of them possess. The appellation "Patent Medicine," does not apply to my remedies, as no patent has ever been asked for or obtained upon them, nor have they been urged upon the public as "curealls." They are simply some favorite prescriptions, which, in a very extensive practice, have proved their superior remedial virtues in the cure of the diseases for which they are recommended. Every practicing physician has his favorite remedies, which he oftenest recommends or uses, because he has the greatest confidence in their virtues. The patient does not know their composition. Even prescriptions are usually written in a language unintelligible to any but the druggist. As much secrecy is employed as in the preparation of proprietary medicines. Does the fact that an article is prepared by a process known only to the manufacturer render that article less valuable? How many physicians know the elementary composition of the remedies which they employ, some of which have never been analyzed? Few practitioners know how Morpine, Quinine, Podophyllin, Leptandrin, Pepsin, or Chloroform, are made, or how nauseous drugs are transformed into palatable elixirs; yet they do not hesitate to employ them. Is it not inconsistent to use a prescription, the composition of which is unknown to us and discard another preparation simply because it is accompanied by a printed statement of its properties with directions for its use?

Some persons while admitting that my medicines are good pharmaceutical compounds, object to them on the ground that they are too often used with insufficient judgment. I propose to obviate this difficulty by enlightening the people as to the structure and functions of their bodies, the causes, character, and symptoms, of disease, and by indicating the proper and judicious employment of my medicines, together with such auxiliary treatment as may be necessary. Such is one of the designs of the People's Medical Adviser, forty thousand copies of which have already been published, and are sold at the exceedingly low price of $1.50, and sent (post-paid) to any address in the United States and Canada.

If you would patronize medicines, scientifically prepared, use my Family Medicines. Golden Medical Discovery is tonic, alterative, or blood cleansing and an unequaled cough remedy. Pleasant Purgative Pellets, scarcely larger than mustard seed, constitute an agreeable and reliable physic; Favorite Prescription, a remedy for debilitated females; my Compound Extract of Smart-Weed, a magical remedy for pain, bowel complaints, and an unequaled Liniment for both human and horse-flesh; while Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy is known the world over as the greatest specific for Catarrh and "Cold in the Head," ever given to the public.

These standard remedies have been before the public for many years—a period long enough to fully test their merits, and the best argument that can be advanced in their favor is the fact that their sale was never so great as during the past six months.

Mr. Warner Tries It.

[Detroit Free Press.]

Mr. Warner, a respectable and law-abiding citizen of Baker street, rode home in an express wagon the other day, having a hand fire extinguisher and the driver for company.

"What's that thing?" asked his wife in contemptuous tones as she opened the hall door.

"What's that! Why that's a fire extinguisher—best thing you ever saw—meant to have got one a year ago."

"Jacob, you are always making a fool of yourself," she continued as she shut the door. "Every patent right man gets around you as a cat lays for a mouse."

"Does, eh? If you know anything at all you'd know that every store and office in Detroit has one o' these. They're saved lots of buildings, and may save ours."

"You throw it at the fire, don't you?" she asked in sarcastic tones.

He carried it up stairs into a closet without replying, and she followed on and asked:

"Don't it shoot a fire out?"

"If you don't know anything, I'll learn you something! It is full of chemicals; you strike on this knob on top and she's all ready to open this faucet and play on the fire."

She grinned as she walked around it, and finally asked:

"Do you get a horse to draw it around?"

"No, I don't get a horse to draw it around. You see these straps? Well, I back up, put my arms through them, and here it is on my back."

"I see it is," she sneered.

"And can't I run to any part of the house with it?" he demanded. "See—see—?"

And he cantered along the hall, into the bed-rooms and out, and was turning the head of the stairs when his foot caught in the carpet. He threw up his arms and she grabbed at him, and both rolled down stairs. He yelled and she yelled. Sometimes he was ahead, and then she took up the lead, and neither of them had passed under the "string" when the extinguisher, bumping and jamming, began to shoot off its charge of chemicals.

"You old ——!" she started to say, when a stream from the hose struck her between the eyes, and she didn't finish.

"What in—o-u-s-h!" roared Mr. Warner, as he got a dose in the ear.

They brought up in a heap at the bottom of the stairs, the stream playing into the parlor, against the hall door, and up stairs by turns, and she gasped:

"I'll have you sent to a fool asylum."

"Who's a fool?" he roared, dancing around with his eyes full of chemicals.

"I'm fainting!" she squeaked.

"And I've broken my back!" he shouted.

It was a sad house when those two highly respectable old people got so that they could use their eyes and discuss matters calmly. And she doubled up her fist and hoarsely said:

"Take that investigator, or distinguisher, or whatever you call it, back down town, and tell everybody that you are a lunatic."

And he said:

"Dummit, I know more than you and all your family put together."

—The Journal of Chemistry warns the drinkers of water of wells near dwellings to beware of the typhoid poison, sure to be found sooner or later in those reservoirs, if any of the house drainage can percolate them. The gelatinous matter often found upon the stones of a well is a poison to the human system, probably causing by its spores a fermentation of the blood, with abnormal heat and fever. Wholesome, untainted water is always free from all color and odor. To test it thoroughly, place half a pint in a clear bottle, with a few grains of lump sugar, and expose it, stoppered, to sunlight, in a window. If, even after an exposure of eight or ten days, the water becomes turbid, be sure that the water has been contaminated by sewage of some kind. If it remains perfectly clear, it is pure and safe.

—She is sweet sixteen, and her name is Nannie, and in the dreary, dampened dungeons of San Francisco she pines her life away. She is tender-hearted, and the blushes of retiring modesty mantle her fair face whenever she catches the glance of an inquisitive eye; and when, in the course of justice, a drunken man, bleeding with the bruises of a riotous street-brawl, is thrown into the prison, she swoons with the grace and ease of an Eastern belle. Her last name is Gillard, and the little duck is awaiting trial for cutting a man open four times with a ponderous bowie-knife, and then pulverizing his head with a brick, all because he ran off with a red-headed seamstress who had more charms than Nannie Gillard.

—"Ma," observed Blobbs' little child reflectively, as the first stars came out, "Don't you think that when those stars winkle that way they must tickle the angels' feet?"

500,000 ACRES
OF MICHIGAN LANDS,
FOR SALE!

The Lands of the Jackson, Lansing & Saginaw Railroad Company are now offered For Sale.

They are situated along its railroad and contain large tracts of excellent FARMING and PINE Lands. The farming lands include some of the most fertile and well-watered hardwood lands in the State. They are pulverized mainly with hard-maple and beech; soil black, sandy loam, and abound in springs of purest water. Michigan is one of the least indebted and most prosperous States in the Union, and its farmers have a greater variety of crops and resources than any Western state. While some of the Prairie States may produce corn in great abundance, they have no other resources, and when this crop fails destitution follows, as has been the case the past year in Kansas and Nebraska. T. W. LANE:—I have used one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, am glad to state in my case they have proved all that you claim for them. I have been troubled with Bad Blood and all its consequent diseases, and have tried several kinds of Bitters and Pills without receiving much benefit, until I tried the CONDITION PILLS, and they have nearly cured where all else failed. Testimony of a Clergyman---Liver and Kidney Troubles.

EAST TILTON, N. H., April 14, 1875.

MR. LANE.—Dear Sir:—DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS are not only the best, but the very best I ever used. My wife has been troubled with Kidney Complaint many years; one-half of a package has cured her, so that she feels as well as ever. I have been troubled with Liver Compaint for many years; one-half of a package has done me more good than all the Pills I ever took. One of my neighbors took them, who has been troubled with Liver Complaint for many years; three Pills have helped him. Your Pills, where used, commend their virtues. Please send to my address one package.

REV. JOHN DAVIS.

Liver Compaint and Rheumatism so that he Could not Sleep Nights.

I was born and always lived in Pittsfield, N. H.; am now 50 years old; been troubled with Liver Complaint for 30 years, and Rheumatism for 20 years, sometimes so I could not sleep nights. I have taken one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, and they have done me more good and relieved more suffering than all the medicine I have taken during my life. S. S. RING.

Pittsfield, N. H., Dec. 17, 1874.

Fever and Ague.

NEW BOSTON, N. H., Feb. 1, 1875.

T. W. LANE,—Sir:—Last month I sent to you for a package of DR. QUAIN'S PILLS. I had tried five so-called ague cures, and I received more benefit from five of your pills than from all the "Cures" "Cholagogues," "Quinine," &c., that I have taken in two years. I cannot recommend it too highly for diseases resulting from long standing Fever and Ague.

Yours, most respectfully,
MRS. C. GARLAND.

Scaly Humor Cured by One Package---Liver Complaint Helped.

NORTH SALEM, N. H., Jan. 5, 1875.

MR. LANE.—Dear Sir:—Your Pills are all they are recommended. I was troubled with a Scaly Humor on my legs; I took one package and my legs are quite smooth. My wife was troubled with Liver Complaint; she took one package and they helped her greatly.

Yours, with respect,
JOHN H. BLAKE.

WEST RINDGE, Cheshire Co., N. H.,
November 17, 1874.

THOS. W. LANE:—After taking three packages of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, I am prepared to say they are the very best, for I have tried a great many kinds, and faithfully too, believing they would help me, to no effect.—These I do believe are the very best ever made; just the kind a man needs. May they be spread all over the wide world, and Dr. Quain's name a household word.

Yours truly,
ASA STICKNEY.

AFTER TAKING DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS.

ROLLINSFORD, N. H.

THOS. W. LANE:—I commenced to take DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, and in one week I was heavier, felt better, and was stronger than before, and any one troubled with BAD BLOOD can find sure remedy in their Pills.

CHESTER, N. H., Feb. 24, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have been out of health for some time, and I took a very bad cold and it left my lungs in a very weak state. I received Dr. Quain's Condition Pills and took them according to the directions, and my lungs are some better. I can recommend them to any one who is troubled with weak lungs, for they have done me good, and I think another package will cure me. Dr. Quain's Pills ought to be known throughout the world. Please send me another package as soon as convenient.

Yours, &c., CYRUS LANE.

HILLSBOROBRIDGE, Feb. 25, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—Dr. Quain's Condition Pills are the best I ever used for lameness and pain. The first dose I took removed the pain and lameness that I have been troubled with for several years. Others have used quite a number of the pills besides myself. Please send another package by return of mail. MRS. DANIEL KIMBALL.

GILMANTON I. W., N. H., Feb. 25, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have been taking Dr. Quain's Condition Pills, and can recommend them as far ahead of common pills for constipation of the bowels; they do not have the debilitating effect of common purgatives I have taken.

MRS. J. B. GOODWIN.

NORTHWOOD CENTRE, March 1, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I saw Dr. Quain's Condition Pills highly recommended, and sent for a package, and I feel that they have done more for me than all the medicine I have taken for years, and can freely recommend them to others, as a good and sure medicine. Please send me another package as soon as possible. MARTHA NORCROSS.

BRISTOL, N. H., Feb. 27, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have made a fair trial of those Condition Pills, and liked them very much. I think they are all they are recommended. They are a good Liver invigorator.

N. F. DANFORTH.

SALEM DEPOT, N. H., March 8, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE:—I think those pills (Dr. Quain's Condition Pills) are all they claim to be; my wife and I are both victims of Liver and Kidney Complaint, and general debility. We have taken about half that package you sent me, and find a marked improvement in our health. I want four packages to give away in the north part of Vermont, to friends up there. I enclose $2.00, and if you can, send me four Packages. ROYAL SCOTT.

SOUTH PLATTSBURGH, N. Y., March 11, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE:—I have given Dr. Quain's Condition Pills a trial, and find I can honestly recommend them, they having materially improved the soreness and lameness with which I have been afflicted since getting upon my feet after the Paralysis of last side that I suffered last October. I desire you to send me another package as soon as convenient, as I am anxious to continue their use. Though not now a resident of New England, I have lived in Central Vermont more than forty years, and trust Dr. Quain's Pills will not long be one in that section. MOSES SHELDON.

THOS. W. LANE:—I have been troubled with Biliousness, Headache, and Dizziness, for a long time, and had the Dyspepsia so bad there were but few kinds of food my stomach would digest. I commenced taking your pills, have taken most of one package, and now enjoy eating as well as I ever did, am not troubled with dizziness unless by taking cold, and have been greatly benefited by the use of them. A. L. PAGE.

FRANCESTOWN, March 13, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE:—I have found Dr. Quain's Condition Pills to be all you claim for them in Kidney Complaint, poor blood, and weak nerves. May they be circulated over the land and found in every household where medicine is needed. I enclose 50 cts. for another package as soon as convenient.

JOHN T. FELCH.

LOCAL AGENTS
WANTED.

An Agent Wanted for Each Town and County in the United States.

Parties desiring to act as agents must accompany their application by a letter of recommendation as to character and responsibility from and signed by the Editor of a newspaper published in the town or county for which the agent proposes to act. The agency is to sell the bonds of the Industrial Exhibition Company.

BONDS, $20 EACH.
HALF BONDS, $10 EACH.
QUARTER BONDS, $5 EACH.

The Industrial Exhibition Company will furnish agents with circulars, etc., etc.

Each newspaper published in the town where an agent is located will, as soon as the agency is established, be given an advertisement, advertising such agency and the Company, and fully explaining the plans, purposes and objects of the Company. Such advertisement will continue in such papers as long as an agency is successfully conducted.

The Industrial Exhibition Company is the first to adopt the plan so long in use by the European governments of issuing bonds when the principal is made secure and not risked, but where there is a chance for a large premium, an investment of $20 is sure to return to the investor $21—one dollar more than cost—and the holder of a $20 Bond may obtain a premium either of $50, $100, $200, $500, $1,000, $2,000, $5,000, $10,000, $25,000 or $100,000. The interest, which is ordinarily distributed to all the bondholders pro rata, is in this loan distributed by chance. The purchaser of a bond knows he will receive back his investment, with a small rate of interest, he has a chance in the above named premiums, which are simply the distribution of interest on the whole loan.

Each bond participates in four drawings each year, until it has drawn a premium, when it is surrendered, the premium paid, and the bond cancelled.

The Industrial Exhibition Company, under a special charter granted by the State of New York, is given authority to issue these bonds. The Legislature of the State, recognizing the great benefits which will arise from the success of this enterprise, have exempted all the real estate and property of the Company from taxation and assessments for five years, and has also conferred other great privileges.

Every American who understands the purposes of this Company will, of a necessity, feel a pride in aiding it to a successful termination.

Each individual who buys a bond becomes an owner and an interested party, and when he views the structure erected with his money can say, "I aided to erect in our country the most magnificent building the world has ever seen, a palace which, in truth, represents the industry, energy and mechanical genius of the American people."

The manufacturers and the inventors of America are peculiarly interested in the success of this enterprise, for the reason that it is to be their home, where all their inventions and manufactures can be exhibited and sold.

The building will contain 5,320,000 square feet of space.

Purchasers desiring Bonds before an agency is established where they reside, will communicate direct with this office, from where they can be supplied.

Parties desiring to act as [agents or to purchase bonds will address

For Diphtheria
Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial
Is a Speedy Remedy.
IT SOOTHS IMMEDIATELY,
—AND—
CURES THE WORST CASES.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

s no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung trying climate of New England,

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,
Croup,
Diphtheria,
Asthma, etc.,

USE

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Seas,"
By JULES VERNE.

This wonderful book is descriptive of a voyage of 20,000 leagues under the surface of the sea! No one acquainted with Jules Verne's poetic and dramatic style need be told that this, his greatest book, is most intensely interesting. It lays bare the mysteries of the mighty deep—its sunken wrecks; submarine forests; the grotesque, hideous and awful creatures who dwell therein; the beautiful coral caves; its treasures of gold, silver and jewels lost in Spanish ships of olden days. Let us quaintly, and with with such an air of candor as the story told, that you can hardly believe you are not reading a transcript from a ship's log-book. Sent by mail by the publishers, post-paid, for 25 cents.

☞ There is only one other edition published, which costs $4.00.

Subscribe now, and get all the back numbers, that your set may be complete. And "Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Seas" costs as a bound book $4.00, and is published in Nos. 14 and 15 of The Library for only 20 cents!

Portsmouth Chronicle.

A Down East Keely

There is a man in Lewiston, Me., who as firmly believes that he has discovered the principle of perpetual motion and self-creating power as he believes that the name he has inherited from his father is Hoyt. His friends entertain a singular confidence in the discovery. None of them have ever seen the machine running, and their confidence is based partly upon the fact that Mr. Hoyt has devoted fifteen years to the elaboration of his plan, and partly on their inability to discover a flaw in the theory. The beauty of this self-creating power is that it requires no fuel, neither blows up nor bursts through dams, may be operated by a three-year-old child of limited intelligence, and never takes occasion to run away like the enslaved horse, or to kick out behind like the impatient mule. The machine is a constant and untiring generator of power. It may be added that upon all other topics Mr. Hoyt is perfectly sane.

The motive power lies in cannon balls. Mr. Hoyt describes his motor as follows: There is a hollow iron wheel, like a railway wheel, but much larger and without flange. Inside the wheel are four large iron tubes, beginning at the axle and running to the perimeter. The tubes are not straight; they curve so that each forms an arc of seventy or eighty degrees. The inside of the curve faces the direction in which the wheel is to revolve. In each tube are two heavy cannon balls, which can roll from axle to circumference or from circumference to axle. The curvature of the tubes is such that on one side of the wheel the cannon balls are always at the circumference, and on the other side always at the axle. The side where they are at the circumference, and where their weight exerts the greater leverage, will of course be weighted down, and the wheel will turn until the heavy point reaches the bottom; but this partial revolution brings the cannon balls in the next tube to the circumference, and that, becoming in its turn the heaviest point, causes another quarter revolution of the wheel. This operation being constantly repeated by the succession of cannon balls in the succession of curved tubes, the wheel constantly revolves.

This is the broad principle of the machine, which, as will be observed, draws upon the law of gravitation for its motive power. One side of a wheel is constantly heavier than the other side, therefore the heavier side keeps continually going down and the lighter side going up; hence the wheel continually turns itself, its shaft, and whatever belting may be attached to the shaft.

There is also an ingenious arrangement of levers, so complicated that it would be difficult to explain it without a diagram, but which utilizes the momentum of the cannon balls as they fall to the circumference, and transfers the force thus acquired to the tube coming next behind, using it to start the next pair of cannon balls away from the axle.

Mr. Hoyt thinks that it would only be necessary to have a very heavy wheel and very heavy cannon balls to drive machinery of the largest construction; he is ready to contract with the Cunard or any other line of steamships to supply them with his wheels, and argues that the advantage of his motor to ocean steamers would be not only the saving of fuel but the gain for cargo of the large space now occupied by the coal bins. He also says that he has now a small wheel in operation, and that his wife's sewing machine has been run by it for the last eight months. He is constructing a larger machine for the Philadelphia Exposition, and has applied for a patent.

Mr. Hoyt declines to exhibit his wheel, or to give any more lucid explanation of its principle than that already suggested; "for," he very reasonably argues, "if I should tell all I know, some dishonest mechanic might steal the idea and anticipate me at the Centennial."

A Gallant Fight with a Wild Cat.

[Virginia Enterprise.]

William Lyell, a rancher living near Huffaker's, in Washoe county, had considerable of a tussle with a wild cat last Saturday morning. He was out hunting with a couple of dogs. When near the lower end of his ranch the dogs scared up the cat, which, being pressed hard, turned and stood suddenly at bay. One of the dogs, a shepherd, bounced into it at once, which action the "varmint" was waiting for, as she soon had him down and was biting him savagely. The other dog, attacking it from the rear, managed to put the cat on the defensive. At this juncture the animal managed to disengage herself, and made a rush for Mr. Lyell, who had been unable to get a shot in for fear of killing his dogs. He received her with the butt end of his gun, breaking it over her; but she, nothing daunted, evinced such a strong determination to force the battle, that he was glad to leave the gun barrels in her possession. Rallying his dogs for another onset, and grasping the stock of his gun, his sole weapon, he boldly advanced to where stood the cat, with gleaming eyes, seemingly emitting flashes of fire, her tail waving impatiently in the air as if in defiance to him. Quick as a flash the feline sprang at our hero, who, with intrepid courage, calmly awaited the coming event, and met her with a well-directed blow from his gun barrel, which he had managed to regain, laying her dead at his feet. The cat, on being taken to the ranch, was found to weigh thirty-three pounds, and measured three feet four inches from tip to tip.

—People who have a constitutional disability which prevents them ascending long flights of ordinary stairs will be interested in an invention which enables any one of dexterity to essay the highest flights. This is accomplished by placing a spring under each step, and hanging the step so that it gives under weight of man, and lifts him as he rises to the next one, thus aiding his upward progress. This seems quite feasible and popular with the masses who are constantly trying it. It is capable of being connected with a burglar alarm, so that midnight prowlers ascending have, practically, bells on their toes announcing their coming.

News and Notes

The encampment of veterans at Manchester is a grand success, some 2500 being in camp. They were reviewed Wednesday afternoon by Gov. Cheney and staff, and afterward listened to an oration by Gen. Samuel A. Duncan, of New York, and a poem by Lieut. George A. Marden, of Lowell.

The Boston Globe figures up forty-eigh murders in Boston and its immediate vicinity in the last five years

"Who are the bondholders?" asks the New York Commercial Advertiser, adding: "We know who some of them are. The depositors of savings banks in New England and New York alone number over one million. Over seventy-five millions of their earnings are invested in government bonds.'

A little three years old child of Frank Mudgett, of Lake Village, died recently from the effects of sucking the brimstone from friction matches.

A terrible storm passed over a large portion of the United Kingdom, Monday, doing great damage to crops, shipping and other property. It is expected that numerous disasters at sea will be reported.

Jerry Driscoll, of Lebanon, who has been missing for two years, and was supposed to have been drowned, has returned, and explained that he had been in the navy.

The engine trial between Eureka No. 1. of Hudson, Mass., and E. T. Walker, No. 1, of Vinalhaven, came off at Portland, and resulted in favor of the former, which played 229 feet 1 1-2 inches to 228 feet 3 inches by the latter.

The Great Evangelists.

Moody and Sankey, after a prolonged consultation with a number of Brooklyn clergymen, have decided to begin their evangelical work in Brooklyn on Sunday, Oct. 31. At a meeting for the discussion of the needs of Brooklyn, the business men who attended pledged $1,500 to pay the first expenses, and one of them said that he had obtained the Rink for a reasonable price, and that the expenses of a religious campaign would be very small. Other subscriptions were promised and he thought there would be no lack of funds. Mr. Moody said to a reporter:

We have carefully considered all of the calls that have reached us, and we think that the feeling is stronger in Brooklyn than elsewhere, and that it will be best to begin here. They have not a suitable building in Philadelphia ready, and as they tell me the Rink will hold a very large throng, we have accommodations ready.

Mr. Sankey shall be with me and we shall conduct all of the main meetings. If there are overflows the other clergymen will be called on to help. The arrangement is such that the local ministers will not be hindered in their work, for our Sunday morning services will be at 8 o'clock, before the regular service; and in the afternoon at 4 o'clock, before the evening services. Every morning from 7 until 8 there will be a prayer meeting in Dr. Talmadge's Tabernacle."

"How long will you remain in Brooklyn?"

"I never can tell how long I shall remain in a place when I go there. I shall pursue the same line of work that I did in England, and Mr. Sankey will sing the same songs. I will return to Northfield, my home, in a day or two, until I am needed here. We shall be on hand on Oct. 31."

A strong effort is being made to induce these celebrated evangelists to visit Boston.

Proposing in the Cars.

Last Sunday, says a San Francisco paper, a young man who was in love with a San Jose girl and hadn't the cheek to propose, went to the depot to see her off, mentally resolving all the while that he would come down to the main business just as the train was about to start, with the idea that if his sweetheart accepted him she would be whirled away from sight before she had time to take a second thought. When the conductor yelled "All aboard," and waved his hand over the platform, the young man had still left his work undone, and concluded to get aboard and settle the business there. After the two had got settled down comfortably in their seats and the train had worked itself out beyond the windmills and vegetable gardens, he sort of edged up closer and began: "Alice, I've known you a long time now, and there has been"—— (Peanuts ten cents a cup.) It was the train boy who spoke, and the amorous youth told him to pass on. Then there was a pause of some minutes; the train whizzed past the green fields, while the lover remained silent; then they struck a level grade, where everything went smooth and nice. "I suppose we've known each other long enough, Alice, to be about"——(Have the Sunday Ledger? Splendid cut of the Lotta Fountain and Col. Watson on horseback! Sixty-four columns solid readin' matter, all for ten cents.) "Go on, I don't want the Ledger; bought one before I left 'Frisco. As I was going on to say, Alice, I've loved you as much (Figs, prize packages, gum drops) any man can love a woman who"—— ("Please let me look at your Ledger for a few minutes.") This was an old man in the seat behind. "As I was saying, Alice, during the past five years we have (Life of Vasquez, Josie Mansfield in two volumes) been together so much and ("Young man can you tell me how far it is to San Mateo?" [Old gent. again.] It's about seventy-five miles more or less; never been there—I suppose, of course, you have been. I have. (Tickets.) Yes, sir; how much to the next station—I mean how much to the end of the road—at least to San Jose? (Twofifty; want a return ticket?) Yes, sir. (It'll be four dollars.) Here's the change. Now as I was saying when we were interrupted—(Oranges, apples, mixed candies and grapes.) The devil take the boy. (Gilroy, twenty minutes for refreshments.) What I mean is, will you (Check your baggage) be (Free bus for the hotel) my wife? (Do you want to get out here?) Yes, Charley, I'll (Here's your morning papers,) be your wife, and we'll (Hot meals, four bits)—get married as soon (ding! ding dong!) as you say so." Here the loving couple locked arms, and, rushing into the eating room, tackled a warm meal with the avidity of two young hearts that beat as one.

—An old man of much experience says: I have seen a young man sell a good farm, turn merchant, and die in an insane asylum.

I have seen a farmer travel about so much that there was nothing at home worth looking after.

I have seen a man spend more money in folly than would support his family in comfort and independence.

I have seen a young girl marry a young man of dissolute habits and repent of it as long as she lived.

I have seen a man depart from truth where candor and veracity would have served him to a much better purpose.

I have seen the extravagance and folly of children bring their parents to poverty and want, and themselves to disgrace.

I have seen a prudent and industrious wife retrieve the fortunes of a family when her husband pulled at the other end of the rope.

—A writer in the old Philadelphia Packet in 1780, shows how inflation works, in a style which is interesting even now to "plain people," to use President Lincoln's phrase: "I had money enough to buy a hogshead of sugar. I sold it again and got a good deal more money than it cost me; yet what I sold it for, when I went to market again would buy but a tierce. I sold that, too, for a great deal of profit, yet the whole of what I sold it for would afterward buy but a barrel. I have now more money than I ever had, and yet I am not so rich as when I had less. I am sure we shall grow poorer and poorer unless we fall on some method to lower prices, and then the money we have to spare will be worth something."

—Mrs. Milliss was asked, the other day, how she managed to get along so nicely with Mr. Milliss, and frankly replied: "Oh, I feed him well. When a woman marries, her happiness for a little while depends upon the state of her husband's heart; after that, its pretty much according to the state of the stomach."

—That Mexican baby eater seems to have fully demonstrated the truth of the saying that the child is fodder to the man.

—The Chicago Times says St. Louis can't have a National Convention until she provides a better article in whiskey.

—A hard winter is predicted because of the great number of burdocks on the cows' tails.

Maggie Mitchell.

As was generally expected, Maggie Mitchell was greeted by a great audience, Wednesday evening, the 13th, and delighted every one present. The pathetic drama, "The Pearl of Savoy," thrills the hearts of all spectators who follow the course of the heroine during her exile from home and residence in a gay city. The charm which enslaves all who witness Maggie Mitchell's acting is heightened by the plaintive air she sings so effectively and which after once heard, haunts the memory. The bewitching grace and naivette of "Fanchon" are equally attractive in the "Pearl," and as there is no rival to Maggie Mitchell there is no occasion for comparison with other renderings of the character. Maggie plays with an audience at will, enthralls their senses and leads them willing and sympathizing captives until she leaves the stage. Her mirth is soon participated in by the multitude and her tears fall on fertile ground. The closing act affords ample opportunity for the display of her wonderful powers, and the character she sustains has been so long a second self that the naturalness of its acting seems not to be an acquired faculty in any degree. To see "The Pearl of Savoy" or "Fanchon" played by the incomparable Maggie Mitchell otherwise than is customary, would be an awakening that would be positively painful to those who have once witnessed her delightful renderings of these favorite characters. She holds audiences spell-bound, and to say that her two appearances here have been delightful and satisfactory seems superfluous. The frequent applause and rapt attention to her every word and motion speak for themselves. Every one longs eagerly for her return.

Jottings.

It will be seen by the advertisement which appears in another column that the Nowell Brothers are to give a grand vocal and instrumental concert at the Temple, Tuesday evening, Oct. 26th. They are to be assisted by Miss Julia A. Wells, the fine contralto of the Arlington street church, Boston, and the Boston Swedish Quartette. We trust that our citizens will show that they appreciate native talent by giving these young artists a full house and thus encourage them to persevere in the profession for which they develop such marked ability.

The telegraph isn't very reliable when figures are in question. A telegram from Boston, Tuesday night announcing a republican majority of 5000 in Ohio, was multiplied ten-fold before it reached this office, and our readers were astounded on reading, Wednesday morning, that the majority was 50,000. The stupid operator in Boston also added a cipher to a telegram and reported 30,000 republican majority in Cuyahoga county, when there are not so many voters in the county.

Those who propose to attend the Teachers' Association at Wolfeboro' on Thursday and Friday should know that cars leave Portsmouth for Dover at 9 A. M. to connect with the train that leaves Dover at 11: 15 instead of 11: 55, as previously announced. Steamer leaves Alton Bay but once daily—12: 25 P. M. Those who prefer can take the Conway train at 11 A. M. arriving in Wolfeboro' at 1: 30 P. M. or thereabouts. Returning by the same route, leave Wolfeboro' at 8: 40 A. M., and 2: 40 P.M.

A meeting of the directors of the Portland Saco & Portsmouth Railroad was held here on the 12th, when the directors voted to call a meeting of the stockholders of the road at an early day, for the purpose of considering the relations of their road to the Eastern. The directors also voted to recommend that the stockholders reduce the rental paid by the Eastern from 10 per cent. to 6 per cent. per annum. The train service on the Eastern Railroad has been reduced over a thousand miles a day. The directors are determined to reduce the expenses of the road to the lowest possible figure, and while every effort will be made to accommodate the travelling public, it is hoped that, if the patrons of the road find a less number of trains than they desire, they will be patient until the improved financial condition of the road will be such as to fully meet all the reasonable demands of the public.

Forcible Entry.

[Burlington Hawkeye.]

It happened out on South hill, nine thousand miles from Maple street. The man said if we located it anywhere near Maple street he'd cut our lungs out, and although we dearly love the truth, we love our life more, and have therefore violated the truth at least seventy-five times in locating this item, in order to save our life, which is dear to a community that we love to serve. Well, the man's wife had taken up the carpet in the bath-room the day before, and put all the crooked tacks in a saucer, and put it on a chair. It is a marvelous thing why women will always save tacks that come out of the carpet, although it is a matter of record that out of the countless millions of tacks thus laid by, not one was ever used again save in the soles of the bare masculine feet. They, the tacks, not the feet, are stowed away in saucers, up on high shelves, in dark closets, and in all sorts of out of the way places. And on these dusty perches they remain until the corroding hand of time, and dust and spider webs, and dead flies, and flakes of whitewash, and old bits of rosin, and chunks of sealing-wax, and old steel pens, and similar accumulations, have filled the saucer to overflowing, when it is taken down and thrown away by the woman, who petulantly wonders who under the sun put all that trash in the saucer and stuck it up there. And nine times out of ten she charges the crime on her husband. The tenth time she declares it was the hired girl. And always, before the saucer of crooked tacks is stowed on the shelf, it is stuck around for three or four days on chairs and in corners of the room, spilling out occasional tacks on the carpet of every bed-room in the house, which fill the masculine soles with agony and darken the air of the bed-room with inartistic but forcible profanity. Nothing is so painful as a crooked tack in the middle of one's foot. A broken heart doesn't hold half so much anguish, and a boil is a blessing in comparison.

This man who lives so far from Maple street had a splendid bath, and when he had rubbed his skin into a glow with a crash towel, as rough as a pig's back, he gathered his socks, and backing up to the only chair in the room, sat down to put them on.

Every tack in tant saucer saw him coming down.

Every last tack smiled in anticipatson of the denouement, and stood on its head and reached for him.

Every last solitary individual and collective tack fetched him, got him and held to him.

He dropped his socks and rose from that chair with an abruptness that knocked his head against the ceiling. He came down and waltzed wildly round and round the room, shrieking and yelling, gyrating madly with his arms, while his eyes stuck out so far they hung down. He howled until the neighbors besieged the house, yet he wouldn't let any of them in. At last his yells died away, but they could hear his breath hiss between his set teeth, while at short intervals would come a yell, supplemented by the remark, "There's another out." In about three-quarters of an hour the yells ceased entirely, the window was opened and a shower of tacks fell over the assembled and wondering multitude, while a large saucer skimmed across the street and smashed against the side of a house opposite.

Nobody knows what ails the man, for he will not tell any one a thing about it. But he takes his meals off the mantel-piece, all the same, and when he sits he sits down on his hip, for all the world as though he wore a "tied-back." But he doesn't. Its a tacked back that ails him.

The Maintenance of Health.

The maintenance of health is often more difficult than its recovery. Vitiated conditions of the atmosphere, unhealthy occupations, extremes of heat or cold, and constant exposure to rough weather, are also many provocations of disease. There is but one sure way of effectually guarding the system when thus subjected to influences prejudicial to health, and that is to establish, by judicious tonic and all erative medication, vigor of the body and regularity of its functions. The properties of an invigorant and corrective are happily combined in Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which, at the same time that it infuses unwonted vitality into the system, overcomes all tendency of the stomach, liver, bowels and urinary organs to deviate from regularity in the discharge of functions upon which the welfare of the entire physical organization is dependent. Health cannot be more effectually maintained than by using the Bitters.

—Organ blowing is now accomplished by a column of water connected with a cylinder and piston in such a manner that the hydrostatic pressure of a fluid column is regulated by a valve which gives a reciprocating motion to the piston. This machine is placed directly under the bellows, and operates it very successfully. It neither smokes during the service nor intermits the pumping at critical moments. In the machine department the investigator will find some band-saw machines and specimens of their work which are really wonderful, exhibiting the capacity of this machine for the finest as well as the heaviest work required of it. The band-saw, it may be well to remark, is simply an endless steel saw running vertically over pulleys the same as a leather belt runs. This gives a continuous cut in one direction, and not only greatly facilitates the work, but increases the capacity of the machine. Specimens of fancy sawing shown are scarcely thicker in some parts of their graceful curves and sinuosities than the leaf of a book. There are also iron planting machines shown at work, on which the work can be adjusted at almost any angle or position desired.

—Professor Palmieri has invented an instrument for testing oils and textures by electricity, which, it is claimed, will indicate the presence of cotton fibre in silk fabrics.

—The great objection to being murdered now-a-days is the danger which the victim incurs of having his picture printed in the daily newspapers.—Post.

OF MICHIGAN LANDS,
FOR SALE!

The Lands of the Jackson, Lansing & Saginaw Railroad Company are now Offered For Sale.

They are situated along its railroad and contain large tracts of excellent FARMING and PINE Lands. The farming lands include some of the most fertile and well-watered hardwood lands in the State. They are timbered mainly with hard maple and beech; soil black, sandy loam, and abound in springs of purest water. Michigan is one of the best-indebted and most prosperous States in the Union, and its farmers have a great variety of crops and resources than any Western state. While some of the Prairie States may produce corn in great abundance, they have no other resource, and when this crop fails destitution follows, as has been the case the past year in Kansas and Nebraska. CONDITION PILLS.

NEW TESTIMONIALS.

— FOR —

Weak Lungs, Constipation, Lameness, Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Paralysis, Poor Blood and Kidney Troubles.

One Box Dr. Quain's Condition Pills "Nearly Cured Where All Else Failed."

LOWELL, MASS, July 20th, 1874.

T. W. LANE:—I have used one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, am glad to state in my case they have proved all that you claim for them. I have been troubled with Bad Blood and all its consequent diseases, and have tried several kinds of Bitters and Pills without receiving much benefit, until I tried the CONDITION PILLS, and they have nearly cured where all else failed. Please send me another package as soon as convenient.
Yours, very truly,
J. D. WHITAKER.

Testimony of a Clergyman---Liver and Kidney Troubles.

EAST TILTON, N. H., April 14, 1875.

MR. LANE.—Dear Sir:—DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS are not only the best, but the very best I ever used. My wife has been troubled with Kidney Complaint many years; one half of a package has cured her, so that she feels as well as ever. I have been troubled with Liver Compaint for many years; one-half of a package has done me more good than all the Pills I ever took. One of my neighbors took them, who has been troubled with Liver Complaint for many years: three Pills have helped him. Your Pills, where used, command their virtues. Please send to my address one package.
REV. JOHN DAVIS.

Liver Compaint and Rheumatism so that he Could not Sleep Nights.

I was born and always lived in Pittsfield, N. H.; am now 50 years old; been troubled with Liver Complaint for 30 years, and Rheumatism for 20 years, sometimes so I could not sleep nights. I have taken one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, and they have done me more good and relieved more suffering than all the medicine I have taken during my life. S. S. RING.
Pittsfield, N. H., Dec. 17, 1874.

Fever and Ague.

NEW BOSTON, N. H., Feb. 1, 1875.

T. W. LANE,—Sir:—Last month I sent to you for a package of DR. QUAIN'S PILLS. I had tried five so-called agne cures, and I received more benefit from five of your pills than from all the "Cures" "Cholagogues," "Quinine," &c., that I have taken in two years. I cannot recommend it too highly for cases resulting from long standing Fever and Ague.
Yours, most respectfully,
MRS. C. GARLAND.

Scaly Humor Cured by One Package---Liver Complaint Helped.

NORTH SALEM, N. H., Jan. 5, 1875.

MR. LANE.—Dear Sir:—Your Pills are all they are recommended. I was troubled with a Scaly Humor on my legs; I used one package and my legs are quite smooth. My wife was troubled with Liver Complaint; she took one package and they helped her greatly.
Yours, with respect,
JOHN H. BLAKE.

From a Leading Citizen of Kingston.

WEST KINGS, Cheshire Co., N. H., November 17, 1874.

THOS. W. LANE:—After taking three packages of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, I am prepared to say they are the very best, for I have tried a great many kinds, and faithfully too, believing they would help me, to no effect.—These I do believe are the very best ever made; just the kind a man needs. May they be spread all over the wide world, and Dr. Quain's name a household word.
Yours truly,
ASA STICKNEY.

Felt Better, Stronger and Gained Flesh in One Week,

AFTER TAKING DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS.

ROLLINSFORD, N. H.

THOS. W. LANE:—I commenced to take DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, and in one week I was heavier, felt better, and was stronger than before, and any one troubled with BAD BLOOD can find sure remedy in these Pills.
Nov. 5, 1874. L. M. YEATON.

CHESTER, N. H., Feb. 24, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have been out of health for some time, and I took a very bad cold and it left my lungs in a very weak state. I received Dr. Quain's Condition Pills and took them according to the directions, and my lungs are some better. I can recommend them to any one who is troubled with weak lungs, for they have done me good, and I think another package will cure me. Dr. Quain's Pills ought to be known throughout the world. Please send me another package as soon as convenient.
Yours, &c., CYRUS LANE.

HILLSBOROUGH BRIDGE, Feb. 25, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—Dr. Quain's Condition Pills are the best I ever used for lameness and pain. The first dose I took removed the pain and soreness that I have been troubled with for several years. Others have used quite a number of the pills besides myself. Please send another package by return of mail. MRS. DANIEL KIMBALL.

GILMANTON I. W., N. H., Feb. 25, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have been taking Dr. Quain's Condition Pills, and can highly recommend them as far ahead of common pills for constipation of the bowels; they do not have the debilitating effect of common purgatives I have taken.
MRS. J. B. GOODWIN.

NORTHWOOD CENTRE, March 1, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I saw Dr. Quain's Condition Pills highly recommended, and sent for a package, and I feel that they have done more for me than all the medicine I have taken for years, and can freely recommend them to others, as a good and sure medicine. Please send me another package as soon as possible. MARTHA NORCROSS.

BRISTOL, N. H., Feb. 27, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have made a fair trial of these Condition Pills, and liked them very much. I think they are all they are recommended. They are a good Liver invigorator.
N. F. DANFORTH.

SALEM DEPOT, N. H., March 8, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE:—I think those pills (Dr. Quain's Condition Pills) are all they claim to be; my wife and I are both victims of Liver and Kidney Complaint, and general debility. We have taken about half that package you sent me, and find a marked improvement in our health. I want four packages, to give away in the north part of Vermont, to friends up there. I enclose $2.00, and if you can, send me four Packages. ROYAL SCOTT.

SOUTH PLATTSBURGH, N. Y., March 11, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE:—I have given Dr. Quain's Condition Pills a trial, and find it necessary to recommend them, they having materially improved the soreness and lameness with which I have been afflicted since getting upon my feet after the Paralysis of left side that I suffered last October. I desire you to send me another package as soon as convenient, as I am anxious to continue their use. Though not now a resident of New England, I have been in Central Vermont more than fifty years, and trust Dr. Quain's Pills will not long be new in that section. MOSES SHELDON.

THOS. W. LANE:—I have been troubled with Biliousness, Headache, and Dizziness, for a long time, and had the Dyspepsia so bad that there were few kinds of food my stomach would bear at all. I commenced taking your pills, have taken most of one package, and now enjoy eating as well as I ever did, am not troubled with dizziness unless by taking cold, and have been greatly benefited by the use of them. A. L. PAGE.

FRANCESTOWN, March 13, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE:—I have found Dr. Quain's Condition Pills to be all you claim for them in Kidney Complaint, poor blood, and weak nerves. May they be circulated over the land and found in every household where medicine is needed. I enclose 50 cts. for another package as soon as convenient.
JOHN T. FELCH.

Better Health than for 10 Years.

BROCKWAY, long known in Boston and elsewhere, as an accomplished and successful landlord. None but good servants will be employed, and no pains spared for the comfort of guests.

House-cars pass the house every few minutes to various parts of the city, and near all places of amusement.

Coaches will be at the depots and boats to convey passengers to the house.

Terms $1.50 to $2 per day, including rooms.
FRANK S. BROCKWAY, Manager.

LOCAL AGENTS WANTED.

An Agent Wanted for Each Town and County in the United States.

Parties desiring to act as agents must accompany their application by a letter of recommendation as to character and responsibility from and signed by the Editor of a newspaper published in the town or county for which the agent proposes to act. The agency is to sell the bonds of the Industrial Exhibition Company.

BONDS, $20 EACH.
HALF BONDS, $10 EACH.
QUARTER BONDS, $5 EACH.

The Industrial Exhibition Company will furnish agents with circulars, etc., etc.

Each newspaper published in the town where an agent is located will, as soon as the agency is established, be given an advertisement, advertising such agency and the Company, and fully explaining the plans, purposes and objects of the Company. Such advertisement will continue in such papers as long as an agency is successfully conducted.

The Industrial Exhibition Company is the first to adopt the plan so long in use by the European governments of issuing bonds when the principal is made secure and not risked, but where there is a chance for a large premium, an investment of $20 is sure to return to the investor $21—one dollar more than cost—and the holder of a $20 Bond may obtain a premium either of $30, $100, $200, $500, $1,000, $5,000, $5,000, $10,000, $25,000 or $100,000. The interest, which is ordinarily distributed to all the bondholders pro rata, is in this loan distributed by chance. The purchaser of a bond knows he will receive back his investment, with a small rate of interest, be has a chance in the drawing for above premiums, which are simply the distribution of interest on the whole loan.

Each bond participates in four drawings each year, until it has drawn a premium, when it is surrendered, the premium paid, and the bond cancelled.

The Industrial Exhibition Company, under a special charter granted by the State of New York, is given authority to issue these bonds. The Legislature of the State, recognizing the great benefits which will arise from the success of the enterprise, have exempted all the real estate and property of the Company from taxation and assessments for five years, and has also conferred other great privileges.

Every American who understands the purposes of this Company will, of a necessity, feel a pride in aiding it to a successful termination.

Each individual who buys a bond becomes an owner and an interested party, and when he views the structure erected with his money can say, "I aided to erect in our country the most magnificent building the world has ever seen, a palace which, in truth, represents the industry, energy and mechanical genius of the American people."

The manufacturers and the inventors of America are peculiarly interested in the success of this enterprise, for the reason that it is to be their home, where all their inventions and manufactures can be exhibited and sold.

The building will contain 5,330,000 square feet of space.

Purchasers desiring Bonds before an agency is established where they reside, will communicate direct with this office, from where they can be supplied.

Parties desiring to act as agents or to purchase bonds will address

For Diphtheria

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial

Is a Speedy Remedy.

IT SOOTHS IMMEDIATELY,

—AND—

CURES THE WORST CASES.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung trying climate of New England,

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,
Croup,
Diphtheria,
Asthma, etc.,

USE

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

The Lakeside Library

is published semi-monthly, and each issue contains a COMPLETE NOVEL, by one of the great authors of the world, as Charles Reade, Dickens, Scott, Anthony Trollope, Jules Verne, etc., etc. The completion of long and important novels in a single issue, is the most unique and valuable feature yet introduced into the periodical literature of the day, and is peculiar to The Lakeside Library.

Each issue of The Library contains a Complete Novel, that would make a book from three to five on the average, $1.50 each; yet the price of the same in The Library is only 10 cents if you buy a single copy from your newsdealer, or only 9 cents if you subscribe for a year. The whole series of 24 numbers will contain Twenty-two Complete Novels, worth about $40.00, but costs only $2.15 in The Library!

Occasionally we shall issue double numbers, to contain unusually long and important works, as "The Law and The Lady," by Wilkie Collins, and "Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Seas," by Jules Verne. When this is necessary, both numbers of the story will be issued together, so that the complete work will be in the reader's hands at once. In such cases three numbers will be issued in one month. ☞ Hence all subscriptions are received for 24 numbers.

Our next issue, Nos. 14 and 15, will be a splendid Double number complete and unabridged with Eight characteristic illustrations, containing the famous

Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Seas,"
By JULES VERNE.

This wonderful book is descriptive of a voyage of 20,000 leagues under the surface of the sea! No one acquainted with Verne's peculiar and dramatic style need be told that this, his greatest book, is most intensely interesting. It lays bare the mysteries of the mighty deep—its sunken wrecks; submarine forests; the grotesque, hideous and awful creatures who dwell therein; the beautiful coral caves; its treasures of gold, silver and jewels lost in Spanish ships of olden days. Yet so quaintly, and with such an air of candor is the story told, that you can hardly believe you are not reading a transcript from a ship's log-book. Sent by mail by the publishers, post-paid, for 20 cents.

☞ There is only one other edition published, which costs $4.00.

Subscribe now, and get all the back numbers, that your set may be complete. The entire set of 24 numbers gives you a really choice library of Standard and Famous Novels, worth in book form about $40.00, and at a cost of only $2.15, including prepayment of postage—or about the price of one single book in ordinary book form. "The Portent," for instance, costs as a Bound Book, 1.75, and is published in No 12 of The Library for only 10 cents! And "Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Seas" costs as a Bound Book $4.00, and is published in Nos. 14 and 15 of The Library for only 20 cents!

☞ Each of these books is complete and unabridged, and costs in the bookstores from $1.0 to $4.00. Order a few samples.

Price, $2.15 for 24 numbers. Sold by all news dealers. Address,

Portsmouth Chronicle.

A Parable for Wendell Phillips.

Mr. Phillips says that during the war gold fluctuated in value more than any other article except cotton. He is not alone in holding this opinion, and for the benefit of those of his followers who still retain the capacity to reason, the Boston Advertiser publishes the following account of a balloon ascension, by an adventurer who was there, and of course knows all about it:

When we were comfortably seated, he says, and all was in readiness, the cord which held us was cut, but contrary to expectation, the balloon did not ascend, but remained perfectly quiet. The earth, which had been fastened to us by the cord, dropped and fell with great rapidity. We could look over the side and see it falling, while we remained perfectly at rest and watched its progress at our ease. I confess I was greatly surprised at this. I had fallen into the common error, and supposed that the earth remained in position, while the balloon ascended. But, now for the first time I was in a position to know the truth. I was there and could see. I know, for I saw it myself.

The earth sunk down gradually, until we could no longer distinguish men nor houses; the clouds followed suit and soon were far below us, while we remained, as we had been from the first, wholly immovable in the very spot where the cord was first cut. I knew that after our return to the earth those who had watched what they erroneously called the ascension obstinately persisted in their former views, and contended that the balloon had gone up. But I could easily pardon their error, as it arose from their ignorance. From their point of view it undoubtedly seemed so. But we who were in the basket certainly had infinitely better means than they of determining this question. They supposed the balloon went up. We knew this was a fallacy. We could see and feel that the balloon neither rose nor fluctuated, but retained the most perfect and absolute rest, so that with proper instruments we could from it have determined the position of the heavenly bodies with great accuracy. After we had remained suspended in the air a long time, the earth again rose to meet us, and we perceived that at the rate at which it was moving, it would soon touch us. As its unexpected sinking had occasioned much comment among us, we determined to watch its return with great care, and observe all the phenomena, so as to settle the question. We did so, and soon satisfied our minds beyond doubt that we had remained stationary, and that the earth, in some mysterious way, had sunk and risen again, till at last it struck the bottom of the car with such force as nearly to throw us all out over the sides. In fact, during the two hours that we were in the car, the earth fluctuated more than any other article,—except cotton.

Arab Horse Maxims.

Whoso raiseth and traineth a horse for the Lord is counted in the number of those who give alms day and night, in private as well as public. He will find his reward. All his sins will be forgiven him, and never will any fear come over him and dishonor his heart.

Let your colt be domesticated and live with you from his tenderest age, and when a horse he will be simple, docile, faithful and inured to hardship and fatigue.

If you have your horse to serve you on the day of trial, if you desire him to be a horse of truth, make him sober, accustomed to hard work and inaccessible to fear.

Do not beat your horses, nor speak to them in a loud tone of voice; do not be angry with them, but kindly reprove their faults; they will do better thereafter, for they understand the language of man and its meaning.

If you have a long day's journey before you, spare your horse at the start; let him frequently walk to recover his wind. Continue this until he has sweated and dried three times, and you may ask him whatever you please, he will not leave you in difficulty.

Use your horse as you do your leathern bottle; if you open it gently and gradually you can easily control the water within, but if you open it suddenly the water escapes at once, and nothing remains to quench your thirst.

Observe your horse when he is drinking at a brook. If in bringing down his head he remains square, without bending his limbs, he possesses sterling qualities and all parts of his body are built symmetrically.

Four things he must have broad—front, chest, loins and limbs; four things long—neck, breast, fore-arm and croup; four things short—pasterns, back, ears and tail.

—Under this head the Boston Shoe and Leather Reporter publishes the following article:

A comparison of the shipments of boots and shoes from the port of Boston and from the remainder of the country shows so small a percentage sent from Boston that it excites wonder that the metropolis of New England and the centre of the boot and shoe trade should ship less than five per cent. of all the boots and shoes now exported from this country. An exhibit en extenso of the amounts exported and the destination may form the material for a more comprehensive article hereafter, but it may be well to note here that, while the exports of boots and shoes of the whole country amount to about a million dollars' worth, Boston sent less than $50,000. The question is often asked of us why more boots and shoes are not exported from Boston. The reason is that manufacturers are so cautious that few goods are made except to order. So closely is this rule followed that for some time past it has been next to impossible, if desired, to complete a stock of assorted goods from the stores in Boston or from the factories. The manufacturers of boots and shoes have preferred to see the leather sent to Europe to be there made into shoes, and then returned to this country to compete with their own goods, to risking anything themselves. For this action there is some good reason, but too much caution is timidity, and it should be remembered that there can be no great gain without some small risk. The excuse of doubtful credits is poor indeed; as, if no safe market can be found in this country, another elsewhere should be sought for. Mexico, Cuba, and other West India Islands and South America, without reference to Europe and the East, offer opportunities that are not taken advantage of. The island of Minorca makes shoes for Cuba, which ought to be made in this country. The Centennial gives a chance to exhibit our manufactures to foreigners that should not be lost sight of, and our manufacturers will be negligent of their own interests if they lose the opportunity then offered. The matter is one that is worthy of the most careful consideration, and we commend it to the attention of New England men who wish to retain their prestige in the boot and shoe trade.

—In answer to your question respecting concrete or asphalt, I have done a great deal successfully for walks and some kind of floors, such as the floor of a pig-house, but have never attempted it for heavy traffic. It is neither difficult nor expensive. Of course a great deal depends upon the cost of material; the labor is trifling. I have used screenings of gravel (I don't like it clean, but mixed with sand); I have used sand alone when I could not get anything better, blacksmiths' ashes, and ashes from my engine. The last I did was for our churchyard walks; for those I got the screenings of Leicestershire granite, which made a splendid path, but, of course, more expensive the granite cost 10s. per ton. Its quite an unnecessary expense and trouble boiling tar. Get your material dry, mix it with tar, turn it over twice, and let it lie a couple of days, then turn it again, and mix a little lime with it, about a tenth; let it lie another day, and then on a fine sunny day lay it on, bake it even, and roll well as soon as it will roll, in an hour or two's time: if the roller does not work well (it ought to do if the stuff is not mixed with too much tar), scatter a little dry sand over it. Every Summer I brush my walks over with cold tar, and give a good sprinkling of sand, and they are as good now as when first put down, fifteen years since. Any laborer can do it, only take care, before laying it down, that it is of proper consistency. When ready, it ought not to show the least of tar, but should be a dull, dead black, and, when moved with a shovel, ought to be "lively," exactly like a mass of mites in a cheese. The stuff will keep a long time in a heap if covered up or kept dry.—John Turner, in London Agricultural Gazette.

—There are people—yes, many people—always looking out for slights. They cannot carry on the daily intercourse of the family without finding that some offence is designed. They are as touchy as hair-triggers. If they meet an acquaintace who happens to be preoccupied with business, they attribute his abstraction in some mode personal to themselves, and take umbrage accordingly. They lay on others the fruit of their irritability. Indigestion makes them see impertinence in every one they come in contact with. Innocent persons, who never dreamed of giving offence, are astonished to find some unfortunate word, or momentary taciturnity, mistaken for an insult. To say the least, the habit is unfortunate. It is far wiser to take the more charitable view of our fellow-beings, and not suppose that a slight is intended unless the neglect is open and direct. After all, too, life takes its hues in a great degree from the color of our own mind. If we are frank and generous, the world treats us kindly; if, on the contrary, we are suspicious, men learn to be cold and cautious to us. Let a person get the reputation of being "touchy," and everybody is under restraint, and in this way the chances of an imaginary offence are vastly increased.

—"Come, my little fellow," said a Washington gentleman to a youngster of five years, while sitting in a parlor where a large company were assembled: "Do you know me?" "Yeth, thir!" "Who am I? Let me hear?" "You ith the man who kithed mamma when papa wasth in New York." Correct.

—Conclusion of the last Philadelphia obituary poem; "Gone to meet her favorite uncle, who died about twelve months since on her step-brother's side."—Courier-Journal.

Daily Chronicle.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 15, 1875.

Comments of the Press.

The Herald says the defeat of the inflationists in Ohio is one from which they will never recover, and it is a fortunate deliverance from a great political danger.

The World says the rag baby is dead, and nothing remains for the democrats to do but to put it promptly under ground.

The Tribune says the democrats of Ohio dug their own pit, and urges a new departure.

The Times regards the victory in Ohio as a triumph of simple honesty over a base attempt to break the public faith and sully the national honor, and says the republican party alone can now be depended on to steer the nation clear of financial ruin.

The Boston Herald says: We have great reason to rejoice that the Jack Cade financial policy did not prevail in Ohio, where popular ignorance on this question seems to be most dense.

The Worcester Gazette says: The democratic defeat in Ohio and the victory of hard money means the nomination of Samuel J. Tilden for the Presidency, next year, on a reasonably sound financial platform. The democrats, as a party, are stronger for the defeat; the republicans, although victorious, see the probability that their opponents will be driven to abandon their vicious and suicidal policy of expanding the currency. At the same time, the country at large is the gainer, beyond question. The issue in Ohio was squarely between specie payments and unlimited greenbacks, and the right has triumphed. We have never for one moment doubted that the good sense of the multitude would arrive at this point sooner or later. We should hardly have dared to hope a year ago, however, that this question, presented so soon in a great Western State, would be decided wisely, although even then it was clear that the cause of sound currency was gaining ground from the sheer force of its being right and honest. Altogether the republicans have reason for jubilation. It is of a good deal more importance, in our way of thinking, that in the first pitched battle between gold and greenbacks, paper money has been signally routed.

The Nashua Telegraph says it was a great and good day's work.

Foster's Democrat says: While we regret the defeat of the Ohio democracy, we are glad that the rag inflation heresy has received its death blow.

News and Notes.

William Allen has been "raised," but what has become of Cary?

General Bartlett's letter declining the democratic nomination for Lieutenant Governor of Massachusetts is published. John Quincy Adams is put in his place.

School keeps in Ohio.—Nashua Telegraph.

We were opposed last June, when the subject was under discussion, to the building of a new State prison, on economic grounds, but the way the rogues are catching it from the courts just now, plainly indicates that something will have to be done soon. It is now understood that the old prison is filled to its utmost capacity, and there are lots of villains still at large.—Concord People.

Iowa now permits the election of women as superintendents of schools, and in nearly half the counties the candidates for office, this Fall, are women.

Prodigal Fenton turns up, not very emaciated and only half-way repentant, on the republican doorstep. He isn't prepared to say he is sorry, and could get along very comfortably on husk diet a while longer; but he is willing to be forgiven. Fatted calf for one! —Springfield Republican.

We are told that "some Gothic effects are to be introduced into the new Boston post office." Some good management would be better.—Boston News.

On Tuesday the 12th, a watchman of No. 2 mill at Great Falls discovered the body of a man floating in the canal. The face was covered with mud and slime and could not be recognized. The clothes were, however, identified as belonging to Fred. Gallagher of Milton, who was last seen, at Great Falls, on the 1st inst. A pipe, a knife, two tintypes and a letter directed to the deceased were found in the pockets. It is presumed he fell into the river while intoxicated. The water had been drawn off from the canal on Monday that repairs might be made, and when the gates were hoisted on Tuesday the swift under current must have drawn the body into the canal.

And now the Pope is meddling with the school question in Vienna. He condemns the free school laws as hostile to the church, and wants the schools made sectarian as soon as established.

Some years ago, Rev. Isaac Collins was preaching at Spedden's Church, Neck District, Dorchester, Md., and was very much annoyed at his congregation turning in their seats to look at every new arrival. At last he could stand it no longer, and exclaimed: "There is one special request I desire of this congregation, and that is that they will turn all the seat around so as to face the door before I preach here again." His request was attended to, and, next Sunday, when Rev. Mr. Collins walked up to the pulpit, he looked around at the backs of his audience, and was so overcome with emotion that he just took his seat and spoke not one word that beautiful Sabbath evening.

Mr. Charles E. Rounals, of New Durham, was thrown from a wagon, recently, and instantly killed.

A shocking accident recently occurred in the weaving room of the Exeter Manufacturing Co.'s mill. A woman employed there was visited by her little boy, a child of four or five years of age, and while attending to her duties the little fellow wandered off and tried to amuse himself, when he caught his hand in the machinery of a loom, mangling it terribly. It was considered necessary to amputate three fingers.

A marrying family is that which, consisting of mother, daughter, and grand-daughter, and living near the depot in Seabrook, have all within six months been married and moved away, leaving the house alone.

Messrs. G. & H. Whittaker of Mason have a vineyard of about ten acres, from which they expect to realize about $2500 this year. The yield of grapes was about ten tons. These gentlemen have also about 600 peach trees mostly in bearing condition. The land upon which the grapes are raised was apparently a dry, stony and worthless pasture a few years ago.

Here is the way half of the jurymen on a recent panel in the Merrimack County Court wrote guilty upon their ballots; one spelled it "Guilley," two "Giltey," and three "Gilty."

The Newburyport Herald says a one-half interest in the Boynton mine, which involves one-sixth of Mr. Boynton's whole interest in what is known as the Chipman lode, is sold to a party of Boston gentlemen and the money paid—consideration $50,000. The property will at once be put in first-class order and worked with as much vigor and system as that which now characterizes the Chipman mine.

Concord has theatricals on the brain. The Y. P. U. have had them bad for a year, and now the U. B. B. A., which stands for "United Brethren of the Black Art," have an attack.

William Blaikie writes to a New York paper advising the college crews of 1876 to begin work without delay and keep to it all winter, taking constant coaching. It now seems likely that the famous university crews of England will come over to the Exposition at Philadelphia, and will row on the Schuylkill. Mr. Blaikie thinks Harvard ought not to withdraw from the intercollegiate regatta, until she has won a prize and whipped the Englishmen. He does not foresee that having once won the colors, she would not be permitted to withdraw.

The Nashua Bedding and Batting Company, employing about forty hands on mattresses and comforters, are largely behind orders and during the present month are running their factory until midnight each working day.

An Ohio paper says that a singular accident occurred a few days ago on the farm of Sheriff C. Vaughan. He had a fine young horse running in a clover pasture of fifty acres. The horse did not come up for several days, and fears began to be entertained that he was stolen, fruitless search having been made for him. But on making a close search the horse was found in a thicket of briers and grape vines with his mane near the ears closely twisted around a grape vine and the animal on his knees, dead, evidently having choked to death by accidentally getting his mane caught in the vine and then turning round continually in the same direction until the twisting drew so tight around his throat as to choke him to death.

Many of the people in Great Falls think that it is nearly a settled fact that there will be an iron bridge across Salmon Falls river by the 1st of December. It is estimated that the structure will cost $5000.

Dartmouth College has about one hundred and forty thousand dollars, the income of which is annually given to students needing pecuniary assistance. The scholarships are mostly of seventy and one hundred dollars each.

Andrew J. Bean of Manchester has just recovered, in a suit at Rutland, Vt., $15,000 damages for false imprisonment from Daniel N. Beckwith and Gilman Henry, who arrested him in 1864, on a charge of taking part of the money paid to substitutes in the Union army, and then being privy to their desertion.

Pillsbury, whom the Pennsylvania democrats have nominated for State Treasurer, was a lieutenant in the "Fishing Creek Confederacy," which was organized during the war to resist the draft, and which the government was at some expense, in both life and money, to suppress.

The recent Pembroke tragedy brings to mind another murder which was committed in that town about forty years ago. A man by the name of Abraham Prescott who was strawberrying in the field with Mrs. Sally Cochran, in whose family he lived, beat her brains out with a fence stake, for which he was subsequently hung in Hopkinton.

The Murder of Josie Langmaid

A letter was received by the authorities asking if a man named Lapage, who was arrested in St. Albans for the murder of Miss Ball at the latter place, which occurred on the 24th of July, 1874, had been seen in the vicinity, and suggesting that if he was that it would be well to look after him. Suspicion had fallen upon this man, who, as it proved, was, or had been, working in Suncook. A search of the premises where he lived was made and he was watched. On being examined by the detective, he acknowledged that he was under arrest at St. Albans for the murder mentioned, but was discharged. Except by his own statement he could not account for himself on the morning of the murder. He said that he travelled in the woods after a job of work from 7 o'clock to 12. At 2 in the afternoon he was seen in Dodge's woods, some six miles from the scene of the murder. During the morning it is reported that he was seen at a grist mill about a mile and a half where the crime was committed. He speaks no English, is about five feet nine inches high, has dark hair and beard and a piercing black eye. He is of rather slight build, though muscular. The officers are confident that he is the man wanted. When arrested he appeared considerably disturbed. A reward of $2000 has been offered by the town of Pembroke for information that will lead to the conviction of the murderer. If this arrest proves to be of the importance indicated, Drew will undoubtedly be at liberty, and an excited public who were so ready to lynch him will have to lay aside the rope and await the law's vengeance.

—One of the novelties in economy that France will show us at our approaching Exhibition, is a process of manufacturing from refuse particles of bread a variety of useful products. A gentleman, engaged for some years in this business, is said to have realized a fortune of 3,000,000 francs. He has had an army of men, women and children employed in collecting this waste bread from hotels, restaurants and private houses. For this, five centimes, or a penny a pound, is paid. From the best and fresher scraps is made what is called croute au pot, i. e. square or diamond-shaped pieces, for soups, which sell for fifteen centimes, or three cents per pound. The crumbs are made into chapelure, which is used in sauces, and in dressing cutlets and filets. These are sold at thirty centimes, or six cents per pound. Last of all, the black and hard crusts are powdered into the "noir de pain," which is an excellent and popular dentifrice. This brings at wholesale fifty centimes, or ten cents a pound. The material is all so cleansed and purified that the product is extensively used in the best cuisines.

—Sunday night, when a young man drove out of Vicksburg several miles to pass the evening with the girl of his choice, he was met at the gate by her father, who at once proceeded to business by saying:

"Cum to spark Louisa, eh?"

The young man let silence answer the question.

"Expect it'll make a match?" continued the father.

Silence again, while the young man tied the horse. As he was ready to go in, the father blocked the way, braced up, and continued:

"See here, young man; let's have an understanding. If ye mean hitch 'tween now and January all right, but if ye don't, I want ye to understand that candles is mighty high this Fall and crops don't turn out wuth a cuss!"

As the young man got through the gate it is probable that he gave the father a direct and an agreeable answer.

—An incident occurred in the police court in Calcutta, recently, which ought to convince legislators of the necessity of interference in regard to the marriage law of the Mohammedans. A Mohammedan being summoned to appear before the magistrate by his wife, on the ground that he had refused to maintain her, on being arraigned, with great presence of mind immediately proceeded to divorce his wife, by repeating thrice the word Tullak. The result was that the wife was henceforth divorced, and that all she was entitled to claim from her husband, if childless, was maintenance for three months, at the end of which time she would cease to be his wife.

—Mr. Talley, an English solicitor, was tried in London, on Sept. 25, on an indictment for endeavoring to dissuade a person who had been bound over to prosecute from fulfilling his engagement. He defended himself in an irrelevant manner, and was convicted and sentenced to a year's imprisonment. Some doubt is expressed as to the conviction being good in point of law, for although compounding a felony is, of course, an offence, it is not so clear that attempting to compound a felony is criminal as the law now stands.

—The soundings for the submarine tunnel between England and France are being carried on actively. They are at this moment directed to the part of the straits near the English coast, at a few miles from the shore. Each evening the vessel which carries the commission returns to Dover, Calais, or Boulogne, and work is recommenced the next day. The engineers, M. M. Larousse and Lavallee, are perfectly satisfied with the results obtained, and so far nothing has occurred to destroy their provisions relative to the depths.

—One of the hermetrically sealed bottles in wooden cases, thrown overboard during Prince Napoleon's polar voyage in 1860, has recently been found at the mouth of the Seine, near Havre. One such bottle was thrown out daily during the month of June, while the expedition was within the Arctic circle, and none of them have been seen since until the one mentioned above was washed ashore, after a voyage of fifteen years and many thousands of miles.

—A gentleman residing in Cincinnati has recently proved his devotion to science by allowing himself to be stung by twenty-one consecutive bees. He took his stings at the rate of one dose per day, and consequently was in a permanently stung condition for less than three weeks. He wished to learn if the human system could be rendered proof against bee-stings by repeated inoculation, and he claims to have proved that it can.

—The Japanese government has promulgated a copywright law by which the name and address of the author must be attached to every newspaper article and book. The author of a book is obliged to go through a most tedious process to obtain permission to publish it, and must send three printed copies and the retail price of six to the home office. That puts an end to anonymous writings in Japan.

—A little boy of four years, standing in the moonlight by his sister aged six, said to her, "Isn't God a good man, Nelly, to give us such a beautiful moon?" "Oh, Freddy, said the sister, in earnest remonstrance, "don't call God a man, for if ever there was a gentleman, I'm sure God is one!"—Christian Union.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS TO-DAY.

Auction of United States Property at the Navy Yard—J. P. Morse, Auctioneer.

Jottings.

George G. Kimball, Esq., of this city, is the efficient Night Manager of the Associated Press at Boston.

The most convenient hotel near the Eastern depot in Boston is the Arlington, kept by S. H. Dumas, Esq., of the famous Boar's Head region. The Arlington is but a stone's throw from the depot, has good rooms well furnished, sets a good table and is so well managed that it has grown speedily into popularity. The rates of board are very low in comparison with the other and larger hotels.*

A son of Mr. Frank E. Dearborn was accidently shot near the hip on Wednesday afternoon, through the careless handling of a pistol in the hands of his brother. The wound was a slight one.

Mr. James Sanborn has removed to No. 10 Daniel Street, near the corner of Market, and is prepared to make and repair boots and shoes, and sell at low rates a new stock. His custom work is not excelled in the city, and with more extensive facilities than heretofore he is enabled to attend to the wants of his patrons promptly.

U. S. S. Tallapoosa arrived at the navy yard on Wednesday, with stores for the different departments.

Our citizens do not relish the delay occasioned by the change made in the Eastern Railroad time table, whereby it is impossible to receive their mails and answer them so that they can be delivered in Boston the same day. Formerly they arrived at ten o'clock, and by the excellent arrangements at the Post Office were assorted and delivered a half hour or more before the mail for Boston closed. Now the mail for Boston and the West closes five minutes before the first mail from Boston arrives. The mail leaving here in the afternoon is not delivered in Boston until the next day.

Orders were received on Thursday to have the Marion ready for sea in thirty days.

Steb. H. Dumas, Esq., says the proposed road from Little Boar's Head to Boar's Head is to be built in the Spring. He is to improve the delightful locality at the Head and will spend $50,000 to make it more attractive than ever. Mr. Dumas' management of the Phenix Hotel at Concord, the Boar's Head at Hampton Beach, and the Arlington at Boston has been signally successful, and the enlargement of the popular hostelrie at the Beach is evidence of a continued disposition to anticipate the wants of the travelling public.

The original flag staff that waved over Fort McHenry, during its bombardment by the British fleet, on the night of Sept. 13, 1814, and which suggested to Francis Scott Key the composition of our national song, "The Star Spangled Banner," is on board the U. S. S. Tallapoosa, now lying at the navy yard. It is badly torn in many places by shot and shell, has but thirteen stars and is probably the most renowned flag in this country. It is the property of Mrs. Georgianna Armistead Appleton of Boston, daughter of Col. Armistead, U. S. A., who commanded the fort at the time of the fight, and is being taken by Capt. McRitchie to Philadelphia to be displayed at the Centennial.

Bret Harte's new novel, "GABRIEL CONROY," which is at last completed, and carefully guarded in the publishers' safe, calls for the the highest anticipations in literary circles. It will be begun as a serial in the November number of Scribner's Magazine, without illustration, for it is said to be graphic beyond need of them, and full of incident. The story takes its title "Gabriel Conroy," from its hero, a simple, good-hearted, honest old miner, of a type somewhat different from that of his illustrious predecessors in Mr. Harte's writings. Several familiar friends, nevertheless, renew old acquaintance, among them Colonel Starbottle. The story is wholly in Mr. Harte's original field and is said to fulfil, as a novel, the promise of his very best tales. The opening is pronounced, by critics who have had access to the manuscript, to be very powerful; it is a terrible picture of a starving camp, and from this start the story is said to hold the reader with an almost uncomfortable grip, seeing that he has to wait month by month.—New York Tribune.

—A correspondent of the Cecil, Md., Whig, writing from Fredericktown, in that county, says: "I know one farmer who sent 1300 baskets of peaches to New York, (all one week's shipment,) and the whole brought him eight dollars in debt, besides the expenses of picking, etc."

—"Who done it!" said Uncle Bill Allen, in a recent Ohio speech, "who done it? Us democrats done it."—Hartford Courant. The Courant had better study its "butternut" grammar. "We uns gone done it," is what Allen says when he feels well and hearty.—Detroit Post.

—The grand essentials to happiness are something to do, something to love, and something to hope for.

—It is wise not to lose a friend to whom you can do a kindness, or from whom you can take one.

—The rag baby doubleth itself across its little stomach and ceaseth to breathe. Of weak constitution, born in mid-summer of unhealthy parents, and brought up on the bottle, there was nothing for it to do but die. Gone to meet its parents.—Linn, Times.

—Child—Does the Lord take papers?

Mother—No, my child; why do you ask?

Child—Oh, I thought he didn't, it takes our minister so long to tell him all about things.

—Moody and Sankey have taken hold of the hydra-headed monster of iniquity in Brooklyn, and now some anxious creature inquires, "Will they convert Beecher?"

—A few more of these snappy mornings and no house-fly will care a copper whether the family he lives with means to run in debt for their coal or pay cash.

—Let the ideals of us, in the hearts that loves us, be prophetic of what we shall become.

—He that speaks the truth will find himself in sufficiently dramatic situations.

—There is not a string attuned to mirth but has its chords of melancholy.

—Quarrels would never last long if the fault were on one side only.

—Now the female with thin shoes maketh music on the sweet catarrh.

—God gives every bird its food, but does not throw it into the nest.

COMMON SENSE vs. PREJUDICE.

By R. V. PIERCE, M. D., of the World's Dispensary, Buffalo, N. Y., Author of "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser," etc., etc.

I am aware that there is a popular, and not altogether unfounded, prejudice against "patent medicines," owing to the small amount of merit which many of them possess. The appellation "Patent Medicine," can not apply to my remedies, as no patent has ever been asked for or obtained upon them, nor have they been urged upon the public as "cure-alls." They are simply sound vegetable preparations, which, in a very extensive practice, have proved their superior remedial virtues in the cure of the diseases for which they are recommended. Every practicing physician has his favorite remedies, which he oftenest recommends or uses, because he has the greatest confidence in their virtues. The patient does not know their composition. Even prescriptions are usually written in a language unintelligible to any but the druggist. As much secrecy is kept yet as in the preparation of proprietary medicines. Does the fact that an article is prepared by a process known only to the manufacturer render that article less valuable? How many physicians know the elementary composition of the remedies which they employ, some of which have never been analyzed? Few practitioners know how Morphine, Quinine, Podophyllin, Leptandrin, Iopain, or Chlorodyne, are made, or how nauseous drugs are transformed into palatable elixirs; yet they do not hesitate to employ them. Is it not inconsistent to use a prescription, the composition of which is unknown to us and discard another preparation simply because it is accompanied by a printed statement of its properties with directions for its use?

Some years ago, while admitting that my medicines are good pharmaceutical compounds, object to them on the ground that they are too often used without sufficient judgment. I propose to obviate this difficulty by enlightening the people as to the structure and function of their bodies, the causes, character, and symptoms, of disease, and by indicating the proper and judicious employment of my medicines, together with such auxiliary treatment as may be necessary. Such is one of the designs of the People's Medical Adviser, forty thousand copies of which have already been published, and are sold at the exceedingly low price of $1.50, and sent (post-paid) to any address within the United States and Canada.

If you would patronize medicines, scientifically prepared, use my Family Medicines. Golden Medical Discovery is tonic, alterative, or blood cleansing and an unequaled cough remedy; Pleasant Purgative Pellets, scarcely larger than mustard seed, constitute an agreeable and reliable physic; Favorite Prescription, a remedy (or debilitated females; my Compound Extract of Smart-Weed, a magical remedy for pain, bowel complaints, and an unequaled Liniment for both human and horse flesh; while Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy is known the world over as the greatest specific for Catarrh and "Cold in the Head," ever given to the public.

These standard remedies have been before the public for many years—a period long enough to fully test their merits, and the best argument that can be advanced in their favor is the fact that their sale was never so great as during the past six months.

How to Get Rid of Household Pests.

[Scientific American.]

I have not seen a bedbug or a flea in my house for many years. If an army of them were to be brought in, mercury would speedily exterminate them; but I think cleanliness the best and perhaps the only preventive. The common house fly I do not molest, believing that it more than compensates for its trouble by clearing the atmosphere of effluvia and the animalcules which always rise from the putrefaction or decaying substances during warm weather. So also with the birds, which are quite numerous here during the Summer. Instead of shooting them, or setting up scarecrows to frighten them away, I throw every possible inducement for them to build their nests in my fruit trees. The birds capture a large share of the insects in the larva state, and thus the millers are prevented from depositing eggs for a future crop of worms. As to the loss of fruit by the birds, the latter are always sure to be on hand in force in the season of ripe fruit, whether they come early enough to take the worms or not.

For the residue of insects which infest my vegetable garden, I find that the laboratory of the chemist furnishes materials fatal to them all, among which white hellebore and cayenne pepper are of the most utility. The bug or worm which cannot find vegetation unflavored with these articles, will seek its breakfast elsewhere, and leave my garden undisturbed. A few drops of carbolic acid in a pint of water will clean house plants from lice in a very short time. If mosquitoes or other blood-suckers infest our sleeping rooms at night, we uncork a bottle of the oil of pennyroyal, and these insects leave in great haste, nor will they return so long as the air in the room is loaded with the fumes of that aromatic herb. If rats enter the cellar, a little powdered potash thrown into their holes, or mixed with meal and scattered in their runways, never fails to drive them away. Cayenne pepper will keep the buttery and store-room free from ants and cockroaches. If a mouse makes an entrance into any part of your dwellings, saturate a rag with cayenne in solution and stuff it into a hole, which can be repaired with either wood or mortar. No rat or mouse will eat that rag for the purpose of opening communication with a depot of supplies.

—Nasby, as President of the Unlimited Trust and Confidence Company, has gone into the legal tender business on his own account; and the Corners are happy in the possession of as much money as can be printed by the company's presses. The plan has its drawbacks, however. An honest farmer, Perkins, who had been persuaded to take $8,000 of this money for a pair of horses, "played it" upon Bascom by giving a note of his own for $1,680 in payment for a barrel of whiskey. Bascom remonstrated:

"But this ain't pay—it's your promise to pay, and yoo ain't got no time nor place fixed for payment—yoo ain't got no interest, nor nothin. Wen do you purpose to pay it?"

"Never, G. W., never. Under the new dispensashen, promises to pay money. All yoo want is faith. So long ez yoo believe that that paper is money, wat do yoo want ov money? I hev ben figerin this matter out in my intellick ever since I hev ben taken your bank money. It's all the same, ef I hev faith in mine. When this note wears out come to me and I will write you a new one. And don't keep it too long—I shel take pleasure in writin yoo notes often, so that they will alluz be new and pleasant to look at. How pleasant it is, Bascom, to pay ez yoo go! How much better I feel to pay on the nale, and how much better you must feel to hev yoor cash when yoo deliver your goods."

OF MICHIGAN LANDS,

FOR SALE!

The Lands of the Jackson, Lansing & Saginaw Railroad Company are now Offered For Sale.

They are situated along its railroad and contain large tracts of excellent FARMING and PINE Lands. The farming lands include some of the most fertile and well-watered hardwood lands in the State. They are timbered mainly with hard-maple and beech; soil black, sandy loam, and abound in springs of pure, cool water. Michigan is one of the best watered and most prosperous States in the Union, and its farmers have a great variety of crops and resources than any Western state. While some of the Prairie States may produce corn in great abundance, they have no other resource, and when this crop fails destitution follows, as has been the case the past year in Kansas and Nebraska. For Maps, Circulars and further information, apply to or address O. M. BARNES, Land Commissioner, Lansing, Michigan.

T. W. LANE,—Sir:—Last month I sent to you for a package of DR. QUAIN'S PILLS. I cannot recommend it too highly for diseases resulting from long standing Fever and Ague.

LOCAL AGENTS WANTED.

An Agent Wanted for Each Town and County in the United States.

Parties desiring to act as agents must accompany their application by a letter of recommendation as to character and responsibility from and signed by the Editor of a newspaper published in the town or county for which the agent proposes to act. The agency is to sell the bonds of the Industrial Exhibition Company.

BONDS, $20 EACH.
HALF BONDS, $10 EACH.
QUARTER BONDS, $5 EACH.

The Industrial Exhibition Company will furnish agents with circulars, etc., etc.

Each newspaper published in the town where an agent is to work will, as soon as the agency is established, be given an advertisement, advertising such agency and the Company, and fully explaining the plans, purposes and objects of the Company. Such advertisement will continue in such papers as long as an agency is successfully conducted.

The Industrial Exhibition Company is the first to adopt the plan so long in use by the European governments of issuing bonds when the principal is made secure and not risked, but where there is a chance for a large premium, an investment of $20 is sure to return to the investor $21—one dollar more than cost—and the holder of a $20 Bond may obtain a premium either of $50, $100, $200, $500, $1,000, $5,000, $5,000, $10,000, $25,000 or $100,000. The interest, which is ordinarily distributed to all the bond holders pro rata, is in this loan distributed by chance. The purchaser of a bond knows he will receive back his investment, with a small rate of interest, he has a chance in the above named premiums, which are simply the distribution of interest on the whole loan.

Each bond participates in four drawings each year, until it has drawn a premium, when it is surrendered, the premium paid, and the bond cancelled.

The Industrial Exhibition Company, under a special charter granted by the State of New York, is given authority to issue these bonds. The Legislature of the State, recognizing the great benefits which will arise from the success of this enterprise, have exempted all the real estate and property of the Company from taxation and assessments for five years, and has also conferred other great privileges.

Every American who understands the purposes of this Company will, of a necessity, feel a pride in aiding it to a successful termination.

Each individual who buys a bond becomes an owner and an interested party, and when he views the structure erected with his money can say, "I aided to erect in our country the most magnificent building the world has ever seen, a palace which, in truth, represents the industry, energy and mechanical genius of the American people."

The manufacturers and the inventors of America are peculiarly interested in the success of this enterprise, for the reason that it is to be their home, where all their inventions and manufactures can be exhibited and sold.

The building will contain 5,320,000 square feet of space.

Purchasers desiring Bonds before an agency is established where they reside, will communicate direct with this office, from where they can be supplied.

Parties desiring to act as agents or to purchase bonds will address

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

USE

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

For Coughs, Croup, Diphtheria, Asthma, etc.,

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung trying climate of New England,

PORTSMOUTH, N. H.,

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

The Lakeside Library

is published semi-monthly, and each issue contains a COMPLETE NOVEL, by one of the most eminent of the world, as Charles Reade, Dickens, Scott, Anthony Trollope, Jules Verne, etc., etc. The completion of long and important novels in a single issue, is the most unique and valuable feature yet introduced into the periodical literature of the day, and is peculiar to The Lakeside Library.

Each issue of The Library contains a Complete Novel, that would cost in the book stores, on the average, $1.50 each; yet the price of the same in The Library is only 20 cents if you buy a single copy from your newsdealer, or only 9 cents if you subscribe for a year. The whole series of 24 numbers will contain Twenty-two Complete Novels, worth about $40.00, but costs only $2.15 in The Library.

Occasionally we shall issue double numbers, to contain unusually long and important works, as "The Land and The Sea," by Wilkie Collins, and "Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Seas," by Jules Verne. When this is necessary, both numbers of the story will be issued together, so that the complete work will be in the reader's hands at once. In such cases three numbers will be issued in one month. ☞ Hence all subscriptions are received for 24 numbers.

Our next issue, Nos. 14 and 15, will be a splendid Double number complete and unabridged with Eight characteristic illustrations, containing the famous

"Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Seas,"

By JULES VERNE.

This wonderful book is descriptive of a voyage of 20,000 leagues under the surface of the sea! No one acquainted with Verne's peculiar and dramatic style need be told that this, his greatest book, is most intensely interesting. It lays bare the mysteries of the mighty deep—its sunken wrecks; submarine forests; the grotesque, hideous and awful creatures who dwell therein; the beautiful coral caves; its treasures of gold, silver and jewels lost in Spanish ships of olden days. Yet so quaintly, and with with such an air of candor is the story told, that you can hardly believe you are not reading a transcript from a ship's log-book. Sent by mail by the publishers, post-paid, for 25 cents.

☞ There is but one other edition published, which costs $4.00.

Subscribe now, and get all the back numbers, that your set may be complete. The entire set of 24 numbers gives you a really choice library of Standard and Famous Novels, worth in book form about $40.00, and at a cost of only $2.15, including prepayment of postage—for about the price of one single book in ordinary book form. "The Portent," for instance, costs as a Bound Book, 1.75, and is published in No 12 of The Library for only 20 cents! And "Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Seas" costs as a Bound Book $4.00, and is published in Nos. 14 and 15 of The Library for only 20 cents!

☞ Each of these books is complete and unabridged, and costs in the bookstores from $1.0 to $4.00. Order a few samples.

About Astronomy.

BY M. QUAD.

I saw and heard him as I was going home the other evening. A big telescope was pointing heavenward from the public square, and he stood beside it and thoughtfully inquired:

"Is it possible, gentlemen, that you do not care to view the beautiful works of nature above the earth? Can it be true that men of your intellectual appearance will sordidly cling to ten cents rather than to take a look through this telescope and bring the beauties of heaven to within one and a half miles of your eyes?"

The appeal was too much for one young man to resist. He was a tall young man with a long face, high cheek bones and an anxious look. He looked at the ten cents and then at the telescope, hesitated a single instant, and then took his seat on the stool.

"Here is a young man who prefers to feast his soul with scientific knowledge rather than become a sordid, grasping, avaricious capitalist," remarked the astronomer as he arranged the instrument. "Fall back, you people who prefer the paltry sum of ten cents to a view of the gates of paradise, and give this young man plenty of room!"

The noble young man removed his hat, placed his eye to the instrument, a cloth was thrown over his head, and the astronomer continued:

"Behold the bright star of Venus! A sight of this star is worth a thousand dollars to any man who prefers education to money."

There was an instant of deep silence, and then the young man exclaimed:

"By gosh."

I stood behind him and knew that the telescope pointed at the fifth story of a building across the square, where a dance was in progress.

"All of them indulge in exclamations of admiration as they view the beauties and mysteries of nature," remarked the astronomer. "Young man tell the crowd what you see."

"I see a feller hugging a girl!" was the prompt reply—"durned if there isn't a dozen of them!"

"And yet," continued the astronomer, "there are sordid wretches in this crowd who hang to ten cents in preference to observing such sights as these in ethereal space. Venus is millions of miles away, and by paying ten cents, this intellectual young man is enabled to observe the inhabitants of that far off world hugging each other just as naturally as they do in this!"

The instrument was wheeled around to bear on the tower of engine house No. 7, five blocks away, and the astronomer continued:

"Behold the beauties and the wonders of Saturn! This star, to the naked eye, appears no larger than a silver half dollar, and yet for the paltry sum of ten cents this noble young man is placed within a mile of it!"

"By Jerusalem and coons!" murmured the young man as he slapped his leg.

"Tell them what you see, my friend."

"I see two fellows in a small room, smoking cigars and playing euchre?" was the prompt reply.

"Saturn is 86,000,000 of miles away from this town," continued the astronomer, "and yet the insignificant sum of ten cents has enabled this progressive young man to learn for himself that the celestial beings enjoy themselves pretty much as we do in this world. I venture to say that there is not a man in this crowd who ever knew before that the inhabitants of Saturn knew anything about euchre or bad cigar factories."

The instrument was changed again, and as the interest of the crowd increased, and the people began to press nearer, the professor said:

"Now behold the planet Mars, the second largest planet in the heavens. It is 75,461,354 miles from here, and appears to the naked eye to be nothing more than a bright star, and yet, let this young man tell you what he sees."

Half a mile up the street in the top story of a big building was an evening school. The telescope got the range of one of the windows, and the young man almost leaped from the stool as he shouted, "Hokey to alligators!"

"It has been asserted by college astronomers that the planet of Mars is not inhabited," remarked the professor in quiet, cutting tones. "Some of them puffed up with their arrogance, have called me a swindler, and have abused this instrument, which was constructed for me by order of the late Emperor Napoleon at a cost of $75,000, but let this observing young man tell you what he sees."

"Whetstones and whiffletrees!" exclaimed the young man.

"Tell them—tell them, my young friend, what you see," urged the astronomer.

"There's a feller sitting on a bench beside a girl. I saw him pinch her ear, and she hit him with a book. Durn my buttons, but she's all-fired purty."

"Gentlemen, I am no blowhard," said the professor, in husky tones. "I do not want to say what the telescope can do. You have the word of one of your fellow townsmen, and I do not believe that any of you will dispute him. I have been called a swindler, gentlemen, because I go around the country tearing away from astronomy the veil of mystery with which so-called professors, drawing heavy salaries, seek to cover it. For the ridiculous sum of ten cents I am giving the public more astronomical knowledge in half an hour than any college can give you in six months. I demonstrate to you that the planet Mars is not only inhabited by human beings, but by beautiful girls with red hair, and by stylish young men wearing the best kind of store-clothes."

Once more he wheeled the instrument around. This time it got the range of the upper story of a tenement house on the hill. The young man had scarcely taken a glance through the tube when he yelled out:

"Great guns! But what planet is this?"

"You are now looking at Uranus," replied the professor. "Uranus is 97,502,304 miles distant from the earth, and yet I warrant that it doesn't appear over eighty rods away to you. Will you be kind enough, my friend, to tell this crowd what you see?"

"Give it to him! Whack him back! Go in, old woman!" shouted the young man, slapping one leg and then the other.

"Speak up, my friend; what do you see?"

"That's it! Got him by the hair now! I'll bet fifty to one that she'll lick!"

"Won't you be kind enough, my friend, to allay the curiosity of your friends?"

"Whoop! that's it; now she's got him; purtiest family fight I ever saw!" cried the young man as he moved back and clapped his hands.

The professor covered up the instrument, slowly and carefully, picked up and unlocked a satchel which had been lying near his feet, and then softly said:

"Gentlemen, we will pause here for a moment. When a man tells you after this that the planet of Uranus is not inhabited, tell him that you know better—that it is not only inhabited, but that the married couples up there have family fights the same as on this mundane sphere. In about ten minutes I will be ready again to explain the wonders and beauties of the sparkling heavens to such of you as prefer a million dollars' worth of scientific knowledge to ten cents in vile dross. Meanwhile permit me to call your attention to my celebrated toothache drops, the only perfect remedy yet invented for aching teeth."

And yet I had every reason to believe that the professor was earnest, honest and sincere—as the world goes.

Egyptian Inflation.

[New York Graphic.]

And it came to pass in these days that Pharaoh dreamed a dream, and behold a famine was in the land of Egypt and throughout all its borders.

Now the time of plenty was at hand, and Joseph, a young man of the Hebrews, and skilled in dreams and the interpretation thereof, said unto Pharaoh:

"Go to, now; let Pharaoh appoint officers over the land, and gather all the food of these good years, and bid the people lay up corn that shall be for store to the land against the seven years of famine that shall surely come upon the land of Egypt; that the land perish not through famine. And in the famine, lo! it shall be returned unto them."

And the thing seemed good in the sight of Pharaoh, and he made Joseph a ruler of Egypt.

And in the seven plenteous years the earth brought forth by handfuls, and he gathered up all the food of the seven years which was in the land of Egypt, and laid up the food in the cities.

And Joseph gathered corn as the sands of the sea, very much, until he left numbering; for it was without number.

And the seven years of plenteousness, that was in the land of Egypt, were ended, and the seven years of dearth began to come, according as Joseph had said, and the dearth was in all lands; but in the land of Egypt there was bread in Pharaoh's granaries.

And Joseph thought to open the granaries for the people.

Then there arose a man of the Sap-Heds, whose name was Bill Allen, who said unto Pharaoh:

"Go to, now. Shall Pharaoh's granaries be opened unto the people and the wealth of Pharaoh be made a common thing? And who knoweth this Hebrew Joseph, and how long the years of dearth shall rage in Egypt until Pharaoh starve?"

And Pharaoh's heart was hardened, and he cast Joseph into prison, and made Bill Allen ruler in his stead. And the people murmured.

But Bill Allen was a Dem-Magog, and he said unto the people, "Buy ye corn of each other."

But the people said: "Wherewith shall we buy corn? for men buy corn with cattle, and sheep, and oxen, and asses, but we have none of these, and lo! thou hast all the corn. Give us a sign."

So Bill Allen gave them a sign, who's corn was writ:

"The government of Egypt will pay the bearer five or ten or fifty ephods of corn, according to the denomination thereof."

And some of the great men of Egypt, who in the years of dearth had garnered corn of their own, said:

"Lo! the people starve; let us sell them of our corn for money, which is Pharaoh's promise to pay corn even unto the holder thereof, and hath a corn basis. This shall be our money also, wherewith we shall buy horses and raiment, purple and fine linen."

So the great men of Egypt sold their corn.

And it came to pass that when their corn was well nigh gone they came unto Bill Allen, the Chief Treasurer, and said unto him: "Lo! here now is Pharaoh's promise to pay us corn; give, therefore, unto thy servants food in five or twenty ephods, according to the denomination which is hereon writ."

And Bill Allen said: "Have ye not a little corn? Go to, now; take ye Pharaoh's promise for naught?" And he gave them more promises to pay, ten for one.

But corn was scarce, and that which had bought ten ephods would now buy but a hundredth part of an ephod. And the people murmured for money wherewith to buy it.

So Bill Allen issued more promises to pay, a thousand for one; and corn went up one hundred thousand for one. And even the granaries of the great men were empty, and the people murmured.

And the great men filled their empty barns with promises to pay corn, even the promises that Pharaoh had made unto them.

And a sandal cost a million, and a grain of corn ten million, until the people did burn the promises to pay for fuel.

So they went unto Bill Allen and said: "Lo! thy servants starve; give unto us the corn that thou didst promise."

And he lifted up his voice until it filled all the land of Egypt, and the land of Assyria, and the land of Gath and Peleg-Ether, and said:

"Ye will not take the promises of Pharaoh among yourselves nor sell therefor. Do ye bring worthless money unto Pharaoh; the King of Assyria and of Moab, will they give corn for what ye offer unto Pharaoh? Lo! blind are ye fools."

Then the people of the North and the South and the West humped themselves, and they broke open the granaries of Pharaoh and slew him and his household, his man servants and maid servants.

And they prepared a gallows ninety cubits high whereon to hang Bill Allen, but the noise of his roaring so terrified the people that they fell on their faces, and Bill Allen sloped away in the land of the Sap-Heds and Dem-Magogs, where he lives even unto this day.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 16, 1875.

News and Notes.

Jealousy among the detectives seems to hinder the discovery of the murderer of Josie Langmaid. Drew has been discharged from custody. It is said that LaPage, who was arrested at Suncook, had on a vest with blood stains on it. Detectives Dearborn and Hildreth place some faith in the insane tramp theory, and state that in a search on the 13th they were within two hours of him, and are reported to be working upon that clue.

A suit will be tried in the United States Supreme Court for the retrocession of Alexandria from the District of Columbia to Virginia.

Secretary Bristow has examined the report of special agent Church upon the alleged corruption of Flood and others in the construction of the Boston Post Office building. The disclosures in this report are of so startling and damaging a character that Secretary Bristow has referred the report to the Solicitor of the Treasury, with instructions to take the necessary legal steps to protect the Government.

A clever man once said of Mr. Alexander H. Rice, the republican nominee for Governor of Massachusetts: "He has the finest principles and the most determination, for a man who wouldn't hurt a fly, of any person I ever met."—New York Tribune.

One of the provisions of the new Constitution proposed for North Carolina is the following: "No person who shall deny the being of God, or the truth of the Christian religion, or the divine authorities of the Old or New Testament, or shall hold religious principles incompatible with the freedom or safety of the State, shall be capable of holding any office or place of trust or profit in the civil department within this State."

Ex-Governor Perham of Maine in a few days will take the stump for the republicans in the northern counties of New York.

On the evening of the 11th, Dr. J. W. Saunders of Clinton, Louisiana, was poisoned with a solution of arsenic in a dipper and bucket of water administered by Catharine Matthews, a sister-in-law of John Gair. When arrested she confessed her guilt and said that John Gair and Robert Ray instigated her to the act. The Deputy Sheriff posse arrested John Gair at Baton Rouge under a warrant from the authorites of the parish and started for Clinton. About midnight they were met by a body of 50 or more armed men, who took their arms from the deputy and posse, and took possession of Gair and sent the posse on to Clinton. Gair was killed by the men who took him from the Deputy Sheriff, and the same body of men and others hanged the woman.

The hotel at Northumberland Falls, occupied by Isaac Hanson, was burned on the 13th.

John Osgood, 28 years of age, who works on a farm on the Rochester road, was examined at Great Falls on the 14th, on the charge of committing a heinous assault on Mrs. Anna Ford, of Rochester, a woman 60 years of age. Mrs. Lord claims that on the 4th of October she was walking home from Great Falls, when Osgood met her in the woods, made improper proposals, and then threw her to the ground and accomplished his purpose. She did not recognize him. She saw the man and made a complaint against him. He denies that he ever saw the woman before.

Our view is that the republican who doesn't point with pride to the record of the past is a pretty scurvy sort of a republican, who either came into the party very late, or has early begun to take leave of it.—Lowell Courier.

Telegrams from official sources in Mississippi give promise of a compromise of the difficulties in that State between the republicans and democrats, having regard it is supposed to the approaching election and to secure peace at the polls.

John McCarty of South Amherst, twenty years old, was fatally injured by a kick from a steer recently.

The New York Herald says of the republicans in connection with the Ohio election:

"They have reconquered a great State, which they lost two years ago, and, what is more important, they stand before the public as the successful champions of a sound currency, gaining a great moral as well as a great political advantage. They are fairly entitled to the credit of having rescued the country from a great danger, and their success will have a decided influence on the subsequent elections of the present year."

The official vote for Delegate to Congress in New Mexico was: Elkins, republican, 8681; Valdez, democrat, 7100; republican majority, 1581.

The Nashua & Lowell Railroad Company has been sued by the United States to recover $8398.69, for certain revenue taxes on the profits of the road from 1867 to 1871. The action has been brought in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of New Hampshire, and continued to await the decision of a similar case in the Massachusetts District, against the Boston & Lowell Railroad.

Of the newly elected democratic ward and city committee, in Boston, ninety out of a hundred and ten are of foreign origin.

Rufus Streeter, 70 years old, was found murdered in the road two miles from Barre, Vt., on Thursday night. Suspected parties are under arrest.

Ex-Mayor William Cushing of Newburyport is dead.

The Petersham Murder.

On the opening for the defence of Frost, charged with the murder of Towne, at Petersham, Mass., his council admitted the killing and Frost was called to the witness stand to testify in his own behalf. Here is his story in his own words, beginning with the time when Mr. Moore finished his milking and stood beside Mr. Frost, who was milking the red heifer.

"Then Mr. Towne came along and stops beside me and says, 'I don't likeyour style of milking;' 'Well, the heifer does,' I said; he put his left hand on the pail and his right hand on my left shoulder; I reached down and took hold of the box; he tried to pull the pail away; I held on to it and tried to keep it from him; he pushed me and I fell over and my head struck on the stanchion, and I told him to let me up and he said, 'Let go the pail then.'"

Q. Where were you? A. I was down.

Q. Where was he? A. He was down holding on to me.

Here the prisoner hesitated and said he would rather not tell the exact words that followed, but counsel insisted and Frost went on:

"I said, 'get off me d—— quick.' He said, 'not till you let go the pail;' I said, 'I shan't do that until I am forced to.' I reached for and got hold of a stick which was in the rack, but let go because I could not get it out; then I got hold of another, which was called the little boy's bat stick, from the boys using it for a bat stick; I raised my hand up so (illustrating), and hit Mr. Towne in the face; then I brought up my hand again and hit him again; then I brought it up again and hit him again; the first time I struck him I brought blood; he kept hold of the stick and undertook to pull it away from me; as he begun to pull I begun to pull; he was a heavier man than I, although he wasn't so quick and didn't understand handling himself quite so well; we had it there for some minutes; we were nearly side by side; we were near the side of the barn; he got his arm around my neck; I got his head down and tried to get hold of a stick there was there; I held his head down by his chin whiskers and he held my head down with his left arm; I tried to raise myself up and my right hand fell on this piece of iron, and I struck him with it right there (pointing with his finger to a spot over and just back of the right eye. The skull was then produced and Frost pointed out the exact spot where the blow fell.)

The prisoner then resumed: I should think right on this bone here (pointing); I struck him twice, the first time right on the back of his head there (pointing); he sings out, "By gorry;" I had his head down there, and had my hand right in his whiskers, like that; the first blow struck Towne in the face there (pointing) and the last in the back there (pointing again); I said, "You're satisfied now, are you?" this basket (pointing it out) lay right in his hand; all the hold he had of me was his left arm right over my neck; he was on his knee and I was on my knee; then I gets up after he says "By gorry;" I had that iron in my hand; I pulled that stick out of his hand; I pulled his hand out from under his head and he put it back and stiffened out there, his face flat on the floor; I walked right out to the door and threw the iron and bat-stick straight out across the road."

Q. "Into the wood-pile where it was found?" A. "Yes, sir; then I sat down in the door."

Q. "What did you do?" A. "I straightened out my clothes; then I went back and took this pail (pointing) and began milking; I didn't know that he was dead until after I got through milking the white-faced heifer; after I got through I said: 'Come, get up and finish milking;' the milk was spilled from his pail in the scuffle; after I got through milking I went over to him and said: 'For God's sake, are you dead?' there was no blood there except what came from his nose and mouth; I examined him but couldn't see any sign of life." (Here the guilty man's voice trembled and almost failed him and the court-room was still as death.)

On the cross-examination, which was brief, the prisoner seemed to take away much of the good impression which his story before his own counsel had left, for he answered his cross-examiner in a saucy way, and involved himself while trying to account for the reason which prompted him to mortgage Town's stock and pay the money thus obtained to liquidate a debt of his own.

The Scythe Tragedy.

We take the following from the Claremont Eagle, being the only full statement we have seen:

Mrs. Cynthia L. Gerould of Concord, widow of the late Rev. Moses Gerould, who attended the meeting of the General Association in Claremont, went from there to Marlboro' to visit a brother and sister residing there. While at the house of her sister, Mrs. David Wilkinson, she was dangerously, at first supposed fatally, injured, by an insane woman, under the following circumstances: In a tenement up stairs lived a family by the name of White, consisting of a mother and two sons and two daughters, all adults. Mrs. White had been an invalid for several years. For the last six months she has exhibited unmistakable signs of insanity. For six weeks she had been confined to the bed by illness. She had given her children to understand that it was her purpose to take her life, and a razor and a rope, which she had concealed, were at different times taken from her. On the 21st ult., about 6 P. M., on some pretext she sent her daughter, who was watching her, out of the room. Mrs. White immediately rose from her bed, went into the shed chamber, and taking a scythe began to cut her throat. She had cut quite a gash on both sides of her throat, when her daughter discovered her, and called for help. Mrs. Gerould immediately rushed up stairs and entered the room alone. The mother had attacked the daughter when she saw her and she fled. Mrs. White rushed upon Mrs. Gerould and threw her down. Mrs. Gerould in attempting to keep the scythe from her neck had her hands fearfully cut, the inside of the fingers of the right hand being cut to the bone. A longitudinal gash three inches long on the right forearm, reached the bone. Both hands were otherwise badly hacked. She now managed to get up, when the woman threw her down the second time, and getting upon her took the scythe in both hands, and drew it back and forth across her neck. Nothing but the curve of the scythe prevented immediate death; one more cut would probably have resulted fatally. Just at this moment a young man by the name of Walter Bruce reached the head of the stairs and pulled the woman off. Mr. Wilkinson came next, and the woman rushed upon him, and cut him slightly upon the face before he could get hold of her. Meantime Mr. Bruce had helped Mrs. Gerould down stairs, when it was found there was a gash nearly six inches in length on the left side of her neck, extending from the windpipe nearly to the middle of the back of the neck. The large muscle that controls the action of the head was entirely severed; also the facial artery and two other small arteries. The wound was an inch and a quarter deep and gaped open about an inch and a half. Mrs. Gerould maintained her presence of mind throughout the entire scene, dictating telegrams to her children, and giving further directions with the utmost coolness, even while the wounds were being dressed. She presented a most ghastly spectacle, being completely covered with blood.

TWO REMARKABLE SERIAL STORIES,
By American Authors.

The first of these, now complete in our hands,

"GABRIEL CONROY,"
By BRET HARTE,

Begins in the November number, and will run for twelve months. This is Mr. Harte's first extended work. The scenes and characters, which the author has chosen from his favorite field, California, are painted with characteristic vividness and power, and the work is without doubt the most graphic record of California life that has yet appeared.

We shall also begin in the January number,

"PHILIP NOLAN'S FRIENDS,
OR, SHOW YOUR PASSPORTS,"
By EDWARD EVERETT HALE.

The scene of this story is laid in the Southwestern territory, now forming the States of Louisiana and Texas, at the time of Aaron Burr's treason. The characters lived in a section when was now American, now French, and now Spanish, and this record of their adventurous lives makes a story of intense and unflagging interest throughout.

Thomas Conners and Leslie Norman of this city were found guilty on Friday, at Laconia, of setting fire to the Chesley house in Barnstead, and were sentenced to the State Prison for ten years.

Annual meeting of the Washington Total Abstinence Society this evening.

We would suggest that all who have horses that are not troubled with the epizootic, should avoid letting them drink at the public watering places. Massachusetts authorities have already forbidden it, in order to check its spread.

Hon. Frank Jones has been in Washington to engage rooms for the Winter.

Engineer William H. Warren, of the Revenue service, who has been stationed four years on the Southern coast, is ordered to duty at Newport, R. I.

Rev. E. L. Drown of Lynn will officiate at St. Johns Church on Sunday next.

A masquerade ball under the direction of W. I. Trafton of this city, is to be given at Great Falls, Thanksgiving eve.

Praise service at the Bow Mission, corner Bow and Market streets, Sunday evening at 7 o'clock. Address at 7:30. A cordial invitation is extended.

Miss Julia A. Wells, who is to sing at the Concert of the Nowell Brothers on the 26th inst., has a reputation for extraordinary musical ability.

The Blue Stockings of Saco came to Kittery recently and beat the Athletes by a score of 26 to 18.

Mr. E. L. Clark, recently of the Troy (N. Y.) Times, has been engaged as editor of the Exeter News-Letter. He is a sharp writer.

A historical sketch of Dover, prepared with much care by Robert W. Welch of that city, is soon to be issued in newspaper form.

LIPPINCOTT'S MAGAZINE for November is full of pleasing and entertaining reading. "Up the Thames," by Edward C. Bruce, is profusely illustrated. "St. Augustine in April," also illustrated, is from the pen of Sidney Lanier, the poet, who gives a charming picture of the quaint old town, with many details of especial interest to those persons intending a visit to Florida. Mrs. E. Lynn Linton furnishes the third part of her interesting serial story, "The Atonement of Leam Dundas." "Qualla" is an interesting account of a portion of the mountain region of North Carolina, little known and almost inaccessible, belonging to an Indian tribe.

State Teachers' Association.

WOLFEBORO', Oct. 14.

The Teachers' Association commenced its session here to-day, the exercises this afternoon and evening being of a very interesting character. Hon. J. D. Philbrick of Boston has just concluded an hour's address upon the subject: "How to Make our Common Schools Practical." The topic, as you may surmise, was presented in an earnest and impressive manner, and at this hour is being discussed informally in the parlors of the Glendon House, which is the general headquarters of the association.

Shall I tell your readers how Portsmouth stands as far as a representation here is concerned? I must, though I am ashamed of the record. Mr. Clark is here, Mr. Sherburne, Mr. Charles W. Gardner, and your correspondent—two teachers out of our thirty. Manchester has five representatives, and Dover twenty-five. When I have fully learned the reason of our city's short coming in this important matter I shall claim more of your space. A. P. S.

U. S. Circuit Court.

On the 13th, John Tremblay was found guilty of illegal voting at Manchester last March. Albert R. Hatch, the great advocate (?) for purity in elections, defended him in vain. Tremblay was one of the repeaters from out of the State who helped the democrats to carry Manchester, and voted in the name of John Twombly. Judge Daniel Clark over-ruled the demurrers filed at the last term by prisoner's counsel, and gave an able opinion sustaining District Attorney Hall's informations. There are several more indictments of Tremblay's associates to be tried.

Civil case, Stockman vs. Springfield Fire and Marine Insurance Co., on a policy of insurance on buildings in Pittsfield, was tried on Wednesday and given to the jury Thursday morning. Defendants claim over-insurance and that the fire was set at plaintiff's instigation, and was not accidental. Verdict for the plaintiff.

The Maintenance of Health.

The maintenance of health is often more difficult than its recovery. Vitiated conditions of the atmosphere, unhealthy occupations, extremes of heat or cold, and constant exposure to rough weather, are also many provocations of disease. There is but one sure way of effectually guarding the system when thus subjected to influences prejudicial to health, and that is to establish, by judicious tonic and alterative medication, vigor of the body and regularity of its functions. The properties of an invigorant and corrective are happily combined in Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which, at the same time that it infuses unwonted vitality into the system, overcomes all tendency of the stomach, liver, bowels and urinary organs to deviate from regularity in the discharge of functions upon which the welfare of the entire physical organization is dependent. Health cannot be more effectually maintained than by using the Bitters.

Daily Chronicle.

—The editor of the Journal of Chemistry in a recent article states that the cost of kerosene, compared with that of gas at ordinary city prices, is surprisingly low. In examining bills for light as presented in the seasons of 1874 and 1875 (in the former year gas being used, in the latter kerosene) he finds the difference immensely in favor of kerosene. The large stone mansion at his farm, with eighteen rooms, has been lighted the present Summer at an expense of less than one dollar a month. When burning gas in the city, during corresponding months in 1874, the cost averaged over ten dollars a month. On the score of cheapness, therefore, the account stands in favor of kerosene, as one to ten.

—A Westerly clergyman married a couple the other night, received his fee and sent him away, apparently satisfied, but a day or two after, the bridegroom returned and said he had come to pay more, as the woman had turned out much better than he had expected; after which he departed evidently much relieved in his mind.

—Most arts require long study and application; but the most useful art of all, that of pleasing, requires only the desire.

In future the city will charge twenty-five cents per load for removing dirt and ashes from yards.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY, SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs

No. 26 State St., Opposite Kilby St., Boston.

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay thereby saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.

EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."

"Mr. R. H. Eddy has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to secure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges.

JOHN TAGGART."

OF MICHIGAN LANDS,

FOR SALE!

The Lands of the Jackson, Lansing & Saginaw Railroad Company are now Offered For Sale.

They are situated along its railroad and contain large tracts of excellent FARMING and PINE Lands. The farming lands include some of the most fertile and well watered hardwood land in the State. They are timbered mainly with hard-maple and beech; soil black, sandy loam, and abound in springs of purest water. Michigan is one of the least indebted and most prosperous State in the Union, and its farmers have a greater variety of crops and resources than any Western state. While some of the Prairie States may produce corn in great abundance, they have no other resource, and when this crop fails destitution follows, as has been the case the past year in Kansas and Nebraska. For Maps, Circulars and further information, apply to or address O. M. BARNE's, Land Commissioner, Lansing, Michigan.

One Box Dr. Quain's Condition Pills "Nearly Cured Where All Else Failed."

Lowell, Mass, July 20th, 1874.

T. W. Lane:—I have used one package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills, am glad to state in my case they have proved all that you claim for them. I have been troubled with Bad Blood and all the consequent diseases, and have tried several kinds of Bitters and Pills without receiving much benefit, until I tried the Condition Pills, and they have nearly cured where all else failed. Please send me another package as soon as convenient.

Yours, very truly,
J. D. WHITAKER.

Testimony of a Clergyman---Liver and Kidney Troubles.

East Tilton, N. H., April 14, 1875.

Mr. Lane.—Dear Sir:—Dr. Quain's Condition Pills are not only the best, but the very best I ever used. My wife has been troubled with Kidney Complaint many years; one-half of a package has cured her, so that she feels as well as ever. I have been troubled with Liver Complaint for many years; one-half of a package has done me more good than all the Pills I ever took. One of my neighbors took them, who has been troubled with Liver Complaint for many years; three Pills have helped him. Your Pills, where used, commend their virtues. Please send to my address one package.

Rev. John Davis.

Liver Compaint and Rheumatism so that he Could not Sleep Nights.

I was born and always lived in Pittsfield, N. H.; am now 50 years old; been troubled with Liver Complaint for 30 years, and Rheumatism for 20 years, sometimes so I could not sleep nights. I have taken one package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills, and they have done me more good and relieved more suffering than all the medicine I have taken during my life. S. S. Ring.

Pittsfield, N. H., Dec. 17, 1874.

Fever and Ague.

New Boston, N. H., Feb. 1, 1875.

T. W. Lane.—Sir:—Last month I sent to you for a package of Dr. Quain's Pills, and tried five so-called ague cures, and I received more benefit from five of your pills than from all the "Cures" "Cholagogues," "Quinine," &c., that I have taken in two years. I cannot recommend it too highly for diseases resulting from long standing Fever and Ague. Yours, most respectfully,

Mrs. C. C. Garland.

Scaly Humor Cured by One Package---Liver Complaint Helped.

North Salem, N. H., Jan. 5, 1875.

Mr. Lane.—Dear Sir:—Your Pills are what they are recommended. I was troubled with a Scaly Humor on my legs; I took one package and my legs are quite smooth. My wife was troubled with Liver Complaint; she took one package and they helped her greatly.

Yours, with respect,
John H. Blake.

From a Leading Citizen of Rindge.

West Rindge, Cheshire Co., N. H., November 17, 1874.

Thos. W. Lane:—After taking three packages of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills, I can with pleasure to say they are the very best, for I have tried a great many kinds, and faithfully too, believing they would help me, to no effect.—These I do believe are the very best ever made; just the kind a man needs. May they be spread all over the wide world, and Dr. Quain's name a household word.

Yours truly,
Asa Stickney.

Felt Better, Stronger and Gained Flesh in One Week,

AFTER TAKING DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS.

Rollinsford, N. H.

Thos. W. Lane:—I commenced to take Dr. Quain's Condition Pills, and in one week I was heavier, felt better, and was stronger than before, and any one troubled with Bad Blood can find sure remedy in these Pills.

Nov. 3, 1874. L. M. Yeaton.

Chester, N. H., Feb. 24, 1875.

Mr. Thos. W. Lane:—I have been out of health for some time, and I took a very bad cold and it left my lungs in a very weak state. I received Dr. Quain's Condition Pills and took them according to the directions, and my lungs are some better. I can recommend them to any one who is troubled with weak lungs, for they have done me good, and I think another package will cure me. Dr. Quain's Pills ought to be known throughout the world. Please send me another package as soon as convenient.

Yours, &c., Cyrus Lane.

Hillsboro Bridge, Feb. 25, 1875.

Mr. Thos. W. Lane:—Dr. Quain's Condition Pills are the best I ever used for lameness and pain. The first dose I took removed the pain and lameness that I have been troubled with for several years. Others have used quite a number of the pills besides myself. Please send another package by return of mail. Mrs. Daniel Kimball.

Gilmanton I. W., N. H., Feb. 25, 1875.

Mr. Thos. W. Lane:—I have been taking Dr. Quain's Condition Pills, and can recommend them as far ahead of common pills for constipation of the bowels; they do not have the debilitating effect of common purgatives I have taken.

Mrs. J. B. Goodwin.

Northwood Centre, March 1, 1875.

Mr. Thos. W. Lane:—I saw Dr. Quain's Condition Pills highly recommended, and sent for a package, and I feel that they have done more for me than all the medicine I have taken for years, and can freely recommend them to others, as a good and sure medicine. Please send me another package as soon as possible. Martha Norcross.

Bristol, N. H., Feb. 27, 1875.

Mr. Thos. W. Lane:—I have made a fair trial of those Condition Pills, and liked them very much. I think they are all they are recommended. They are a good Liver invigorator.

N. F. Danforth.

Salem Depot, N. H., March 8, 1875.

Thos. W. Lane:—I think those pills (Dr. Quain's Condition Pills) are all they claim to be; my wife and I are both victims of Liver and Kidney Complaint, and general debility. We have taken about half that package you sent me, and find a marked improvement in our health. I want four packages to give away in the north part of Vermont, to friends up there. I enclose $2.00, and if you can, send me four Packages. Royal Scott.

South Plattsburgh, N. Y., March 11, 1875.

Thos. W. Lane:—I have given Dr. Quain's Condition Pills a trial, and find I can honestly recommend them, they having materially improved the soreness and lameness with which I have been afflicted since getting upon my feet after the Paralysis of left side that I suffered last October. Desire you to send me another package as soon as convenient, as I am anxious to continue their use. Though I am a resident of New England, I have lived in Central Vermont more than fifty years, and trust Dr. Quain's Pills will not long be new in that section. Moses Sheldon.

Thos. W. Lane:—I have been troubled with Biliousness, Headache, and Dizziness, for a long time, and had the Dyspepsia so bad there were but few kinds of food my stomach would bear at all. I commenced taking your pills, have taken most of one package, and now enjoy eating as well as I ever did, am not troubled with dizziness unless by taking cold, and have been greatly benefited by the use of them. A. L. Page.

Francestown, March 13, 1875.

Thos. W. Lane:—I have found Dr. Quain's Condition Pills to be all you claim for them in Kidney Complaint, poor blood, and weak nerves. May they be circulated over the land and found in every household where medicine is needed. I enclose 50 cts. for another package as soon as convenient.

John T. Felch.

Better Health than for 10 Years.

Chester, N. H., Oct. 17, 1874.

Mr. Lane:—I have taken one package of Condition Pills; find them in my case all they are recommended; have not enjoyed so good health for the last ten years as I have since I commenced taking the Condition Pills. Shall be happy to recommend them to others. William H. Fellows.

LOCAL AGENTS WANTED.

An Agent Wanted for Each Town and County in the United States.

Parties desiring to act as agents must accompany their application by a letter of recommendation as to character and responsibility from and signed by the Editor of a newspaper published in the town or county for which the agent proposes to act. The agency is to sell the bonds of the Industrial Exhibition Company.

BONDS, $20 EACH.
HALF BONDS, $10 EACH.
QUARTER BONDS, $5 EACH.

The Industrial Exhibition Company will furnish agents with circulars, etc., etc.

Each newspaper published in the town where an agent is located will, as soonas the agency is established, be given an advertisement, advertising such agency and the Company, and fully explaining the plans, purposes and objects of the Company. Such advertisement will continue in such papers as long as an agency is successfully conducted.

The Industrial Exhibition Company is the first to adopt the plan so long in use by the European governments of issuing bonds when the principal is made secure and not risked, but where there is a chance for a large premium, an investment of $20 is sure to return to the investor $21—one dollar more than cost—and the holder of a $20 Bond may obtain a premium either of $50, $100, $200, $500, $1,000, $3,000, $5,000, $10,000, $25,000 or $100,000. The interest, which is ordinarily distributed to all the bondholders pro rata, is in this loan distributed by chance. The purchaser of a bond knows he will receive back his investment, with a small rate of interest, he has a chance in the above named premiums, which are simply the distribution of interest on the whole loan.

Each bond participates in four drawings each year, until it has drawn a premium, when it is surrendered, the premium paid, and the bond cancelled.

The Industrial Exhibition Company, under a special charter granted by the State of New York, is given authority to issue these bonds. The Legislature of the State, recognizing the great benefits which will arise from the success of this enterprise, have exempted all the real estate and property of the Company from taxation and assessments for five years, and has also conferred other great privileges.

Every American who understands the purposes of this Company will, of a necessity, feel a pride in aiding it to a successful termination.

Each individual who buys a bond becomes an owner and an interested party, and when he views the structure erected with his money can say, "I aided to erect in our country the most magnificent building the world has ever seen, a palace which, in truth, represents the industry, energy and mechanical genius of the American people."

The manufacturers and the inventors of America are peculiarly interested in the success of this enterprise, for the reason that it is to be their home, where all their inventions and manufactures can be exhibited and sold.

The building will contain 5,330,000 square feet of space.

Purchasers desiring Bonds before an agency is established where they reside, will communicate direct with this office, from where they can be supplied.

Parties desiring to act as agents or to purchase bonds will address

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung trying climate of New England!

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of Pulmocine Cordial gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

USE

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

$100,000

GIVEN AWAY!

The Union Pocket Book Co.

having secured by cash purchase the entire bankrupt stock of Messrs H. Morioud & Co., consisting of 400,000 Portmonies,

(POCKET BOOKS,)

of the best manufacture and superb quality, each pocket book being made of Real Morocco Leather; to effect a speedy clearance sale and having in view the old motto of the house, Certain Profits with Quick Returns, the company have decided on giving each individual purchaser the full benefit of this remunerative bargain by giving away One Hundred Thousand Dollars, in

2818 MONEY PRIZES!

THE FIRST PRIZE BEING $20,000 CASH.
SECOND " " $10,000 "
" THIRD " " $5,000 "
and 2815 other money prizes as follows, viz.:

25 PRIZES OF $1000 CASH, EACH.
40 " " 500 " "
50 " " 100 " "
100 " " 50 " "
200 " " 20 " "
400 " " 10 " "
2000 " " 5 " "

The above prizes with the cost of advertising and other incidental expenses, giving the purchasers two-thirds of the profits that accrue on the entire sale, and to enable every one to have an equal share in the profits, with the certainty of receiving treble the value for their small investment and the further opportunity of surely gaining a share in the distribution of $100,000, and this too by the riskless outlay of $1 only.

The Union Pocket Book Co. will deliver free to any address on receipt of One Dollar, a GENUINE MOROCCO LEATHER POCKET BOOK, together with a COUPON TICKET, entitling and giving the holder a share in the drawing of 2818 CASH PRIZES, of the aggregate value of ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS CURRENCY. The Company guarantee to return to each purchaser at least treble the value for his money.

How can this be accomplished? is a question many will doubtless ask themselves, and foreseeing this we offer the following lucid explanation.

The Trade assignee, anxious to dispose of and realize on the entire stock of the bankrupts in one sale, accepted our offer of $40,000 cash for the lot; after advertising same for sale for one month, and not receiving a single offer, which in the present depression of business and almost total stagnation of trade is not to be wondered at; notwithstanding that our offer was one third less than the actual cost of the manufacture of the Pocket Books. The assignee having to at once realize the effects of the bankrupts, in the interests of the creditors he had no alternative but to accept this offer and sell us the lot at our own price, thereby enabling us to distribute in prizes $100,000 amongst the purchasers, and at the same time retain a fair marginal profit for ourselves; thus you obtain fully double the value of the amount you forward us and it depends on your luck what amount you gain of the One Hundred Thousand Dollar Money Prizes.

THE SALE WILL POSITIVELY CLOSE ON

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 22, 1875,

and orders for pocket books should therefore be forwarded to us at once—no application by letter after Saturday, November 20th, can be entertained.

1000 of the Pocket Books are of the patented manufacture, superior in value to the remainder, the retail price of the same being $8, and these will be forwarded to early purchasers until disposed of.

Therefore those who send immediate orders will reap the advantage of receiving a superior article.

Remittances can be sent as either for one or any number of pocket books by draft, post office orders, or greenbacks in registered letter by express, etc.

Post Office orders and drafts to be made payable in favor of Frank Stewart, the company's Manager; Post Office orders to be drawn on General Post Office, Philadelphia, and drafts on the First National Bank.

The Drawing of Prizes will take place at the Company's Principal Offices, 530 Locust Street, Philadelphia, in the State of Pennsylvania, on and the winning numbers will be advertised in the Journal and the principal Philadelphia and New York newspapers of Saturday, November 27th.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 24,1875

The Prizes will be forwarded in drafts, greenbacks or by post office order per registered letter by Monday's morning mails, November 29th, or if preferred prizes can be sent by express, or in any other manner purchasers may select, providing same be signified by them when forwarding orders for pocket books.

Remember this is no lottery, but a bona fide business system founded on a true financial basis which enables the Company to convert into money an otherwise surplus stock, and this too with a good profit to both the purchasers and themselves, effecting a speedy clearance stock which in the present dull times is the great desiderata that in no other way can be successfully attained.

We guarantee each pocket book to be of the best manufacture; of pure morocco leather and intrinsically worth in retail trade at the lowest rate of from $3 to $4.

This is an opportunity that should not be let pass by; one and all should embrace this chance. We afford every one an opportunity of realizing a share in $100,000 at the insignificant outlay of $1 (one dollar) for which they receive value three fold and those who let this fortunate chance escape them will have only themselves to blame.

All letters replied to same day as received. We advise intending purchasers to forward orders immediately which will prevent disappointment and receive prompt attention.

The Fate of a Maine Man.

Major Walker, says the Portland Press, was a native of Fryeburg, where he fitted for college, pursued the study of law and was married to his first wife. During the late war he was appointed Paymaster's clerk, subsequently Paymaster, and at the close of the war was transferred to the regular army. For a short time he was stationed at the South, but finally was ordered to Portland, Oregon, the place of his residence at the time of his decease. On his return from Alaska, where he had been sent to pay off the troops, he embarked in company with his wife (a Southern woman) on board the steamer George S. Wright, bound for Portland, January, 1873. Nothing has ever been heard of the steamer, and although many reports were for a time in circulation, the fate of the passengers and crew has remained a mystery.

Two years and a half after the supposed loss of the vessel and all on board, the remains of Major Walker were found on the shore of an island about an eighth of a mile in circumference and mostly covered with trees, about two miles from the entrance to Bazan Bay, and twelve west of Cape Cygane, the southwest point of Alaska. Two Hydah Indians, named Edenso and Klimnagarl, were hunting and trapping otter and mink in that region, when they saw a strange object on the shore, and on landing they found the larger portion of the remains with a life preserver around them, while other parts were somewhat scattered. A few yards from the body they discovered two bunches of keys, a sleeve button, and about $40 in gold coin. The property the Indians divided, and the remains they covered with some six inches of gravel and then with rocks, retaining also the cuffs of the coat sleeve. They saw no relics of the steamer Wright.

Subsequently visiting the trading-post at Shikan, they informed Messrs. Sherreck & Co. of their discovery, who at once apprised Captain C. M. Scammon of the Revenue steamer Oliver Walcott. Taking a Turk, a member of the above firm, with him, Captain Scammon steamed to Howkan, thence sent a canoe to the Indian village and brought back Edenso, who guided them to the place of interment. The remains were disinterred, taken on board, and afterward carried from Sitka to Portland; and on the 2d of August were committed to the earth in the cemetery at Fort Vancouver. By special order of General O. O. Howard, commanding the Department of the Columbia, the funeral ceremonies were attended by the officers of all the departments at his head-quarters and at Fort Vancouver—the escort and attendants comprising the entire body of troops at the Fort.

General H. in his official report to Washington asks for authority to direct the necessary transportation to be furnished in case the friends of the deceased desire the remains sent East. He adds: "From personal examination of some portions of the clothing, and from all the information furnished I am satisfied the remains are those of Major Walker."

Butler on Finance.

Gen. B. F. Butler has lectured under the auspices of the Board of Trade, in the large hall of the Cooper Institute, to a well filled house, on the subject of "Finance." His theme was that the Government should provide a uniform currency, which should be furnished at as little cost as possible. He agreed with the bullionists that the only value of the dollar should be fixed like that of weight; that its value should be stable for the protection and safety of the community. He insisted that every attempt to carry on the business of nations by the currency based on gold and silver would always be fruitful in financial disaster and ruinous to the laborers and business men, and would only be useful to investe abor. What he proposed was an American system adapted to the wants of the people and the present conditions of affairs. He desired, First, that a dollar should have at all times a certain fixed and stable value, below which it could not go; second, that it should be issued by the Government alone, and that that power should not be delegated to any corporation or individual; third, that the dollar should be stamped upon some convenient and cheap material, so that its wear or destruction should be no loss to the Government; fourth, it should not be exported or carried out of the country; fifth, that it shall never be redeemed; sixth, that for convenience it shall be equal to or better than the present value of the average gold dollar of the world. To give the greenback a fixed value, he would make it fundable at all times into a bond bearing an annual interest of 3.65 per cent., payable semi-annually, which should be reconvertible at the pleasure of the holder by the United States again into a greenback dollar. These bonds should be in sums of $100 and the multiple thereof up to $10,000. It mattered little whether the interest of the bond was paid in gold or currency. The speaker argued that one of the benefits of this system would be a strong tendency to check speculation and overtrade. The General throughout the lecture was frequently and warmly applauded.

No Time To Pause.

[Providence Journal.]

The fact still remains that nearly one-half of the voting population of Ohio is in favor of inflation. This gives us pause. Without receding from our first impression that this result in Ohio seals the fate of inflation, there is yet no exoneration from labor in behalf of sound doctrine. There is no doubt that had Allen succeeded in Ohio, Kentucky would have sent an inflationist delegation to the democratic National convention next year, as Pennsylvania was already prepared and may yetbe induced to do.

Nor is there any doubt that the democracy of the South would follow the lead of Ohio, Pennsylvania and Kentucky. Of course it is no more doubtful whether, in a democratic National convention, an inflationist candidate could be nominated; he could not assuredly, as matters now stand, be elected. The signs of the times are encouraging in this regard. The theory of resumption, and of honest money must more and more commend itself to the judgment and conscience of the people, as it is elucidated; the strictly commercial papers of the country are a unit in its behalf; the men of business understand the necessity of adhering to it; in some of the States the democratic organs are most intelligently and earnestly inculcating sound principles. On the one side and on the other the people are taking sides, being thoroughly aroused to the consideration of the subject.

So far, so good. Still it is to be admitted that the minority in favor of inflation is larger not only in Ohio, but in other sections of the country, than it is pleasant to contemplate. All of which brings us to say, that while in New England there is no need of energetic discussion of the principles of finance, and the duty of the Government as respects its irredeemable currency, the same does not hold of the country at large. For this reason, if for no other, it is absolutely essential to the revival of business that there shall be no reasonable fear of inflation. Now, although a republican President should be elected in 1876, if it should appear that the friends of sound currency were only in a moderate majority, capitalists would still be in doubt whether the policy of the republicans would not be hindered in Congress and eventually overthrown. This doubt would be a dead weight upon enterprise until removed.

The first thought of the business man, on the morrow of the Ohio election, was: this strengthens the republican party; that party is in favor of sound currency; it will now be safe to engage in far-reaching enterprise, in expenditures the income from which is only to be looked for in the future. But his second reflection was: true, this is a move in the right direction, but does it conclude the case? As we said yesterday morning, in our opinion it does; but the man who is contemplating the use of large means may not be so sanguine. What is needed, therefore, is that such majorities shall be given in the direction of honest money, that, humanly speaking, there shall remain no question of the sentiment of the people, so expressed as to be irreversible. The success of the republican party upon this question, assures the true and only mode of commercial recuperation. Its gains are the advantage of the whole people; the carrying out of its doctrine would place the nation at once and permanently upon the road to prosperity.

A Squawk from the Rag Baby.

[Cincinnati Enquirer.]

The news which we carry to our friends this morning is, we confess, decidedly dispiriting. The brave democratic party of Ohio, maligned, falsified and betrayed, has gone down in defeat before the organized Money Power of the land. When the democratic party of Ohio for a third time took its stand upon the side of the people and against the banks and the money rings, a howl went up from one end of the country to the other. The schemes of the contractionists, bullionists and resumptionists had been interfered with. They charged that an issue had been forced upon the country, unmindful of the fact that for nearly ten years they had been engaged in forcing their issues upon the people. For three months the organized press of the Money Power has trained its batteries upon the Ohio democratic columns. The Eastern banking and bondholding rings have poured out their money, and the republicans of the State, through this aid were enabled to perfect such an organization as they never possessed before. By persistent lying, misrepresentation and the introduction of false issues they have succeeded in poisoning the minds of the people and turning them away from their true interests. The victory which they have won they have purchased dearly. It is a victory which determines that the Money Power is still able in this country to throttle the people. Money is ever wary, cautious and watchful. The men with selfish interests were prompt to array themselves on the side of capital, but the poor, blind, deluded masses fell easy victims to prejudice. Thousands of poor men yesterday cast their votes for Hayes who will feel the cold hand of want before Spring. When the crushing hard times come they will remember the lost opportunity. The Eastern gentlemen who call themselves democrats, and who deserted the democracy of Ohio in their great struggle, will not be forgotten. They have built up an account which will be settled in good time.

—A good life is valuable, but a bad life often costs more.

Daily Chronicle.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 18, 1875.

The Ohio Election.

A Tribune telegram says: The two chief centers of trade and culture, and the farming regions of the Western Reserve, deserve the highest praise for bringing up their old-time rousing republican majorities. There is also a county here and there, in other sections of the State, which has done noble work. In the great democratic stronghold of Franklin County the republican gain is nearly 600. In Ross County, the home of Gov. Allen, they gain 483, and elect a member of the legislature. Coshocton sends a republican to the legislature for the first time in her history. Jefferson, Mahoning, and almost every other county where coal and iron are found, make a bad record. As a rule, the democrats gain slightly in all their former strongholds, and the republicans heavily in theirs.

The returns are, however, full of surprise to politicians of both parties. For instance, a few towns on the Western Reserve report gains for Allen, while all around them the current sets strongly in the other direction; and here and there, in counties where inflation appears to be most popular, an isolated township condemns it emphatically by returning a republican gain. Different wards in the same city frequently exhibit contradictory results. Thus the first ward returns from Akron showed a heavy democratic gain, while the next ward showed a still heavier republican gain. Even in Cleveland, where the revolution against the rag-money party is more decided than anywhere else in the State, two or three wards give considerable gains for Allen. In the Cincinnati ward returns there are also some queer contradictions. Springfield, where the republicans were confident of gaining largely, disappoints them, but Columbus delights and astonishes them with a gain of over 500. In Youngstown, Judge Kelley's inflation seed has produced a plentiful harvest of democratic votes. The manufacturing towns, like Steubenville, Canton, and Wooster, show unmistakably the inflation infection by gains for Allen.

Obviously personal influence has had a marked effection on the election. An embarrassed manufacturing firm, longing for cheap money to enable it to sell its wares, has been able to change the politics of a whole village, and often in the country a single farmer with strong convictions on one side or the other of the currency question has swung his township for inflation or held it firmly for hard money. If a political map of the State were constructed, with localities where Hayes gains, colored light, and those where Allen gains dark, the Western Reserve as far West as Sandusky would be almost uniformly bright, the black spots being few and far between. The North-western countries and the central belt would be quite dark, and on the Indiana border the dark line would stretch almost down to Hamilton County, where we would find a sharp contrast. In the remainder of the State the lights and shadows strangely alternate.

News and Notes.

Returns from every county in Ohio give Hayes 4753 majority for Governor. The entire republican State ticket is elected, and the republicans have seventeen majority in the House of Representatives, and four majority in the Senate.

E. Cummings' peg factory at South Acworth, was totally destroyed by fire Friday morning. Nothing was saved. The loss is about $6000.

Benjamin L. Temple, the chairman of the democratic city executive committee of Philadelphia, says that Hartranft will be elected in November by 35,000 majority.

Samuel J. Frost, the murderer of Towne at Petersham, Mass., was found guilty of murder in the first degree, and was sentenced to be hanged.

A three-year-old child of Samuel Hanson, of Biddeford, was shockingly bitten by a small house dog with which she was playing Friday. The animal set its teeth in the side of the child's mouth, nearly biting off half of its tongue and leaving it hanging by a shred.

The Soldiers' Reunion at Manchester was the occason of a revival of the reminiscences of the war. The Dispatch says: Mrs. Harriet P. Dame, who endeared herself during the war to the heart of every New Hampshire soldier, and especially to those of the "Old Second," was brought forward and introduced as the Florence Nightingale of New Hampshire. Such cheers as greeted her dear old face are only heard once in a life time, and as she turned away to hide the tears she could not repress if she would, strong men broke down under the excess of their emotion and joined their tears with hers; and it was nothing to be ashamed of. On the tented plan, on the ghastly battle field, by the sufferer in the hospital, she had proved through four long weary years an angel of mercy to New Hampshire men, and the hearts of her "boys" are knit to hers with bonds more enduring than links of steel. Miss Dame came on from Washington purposely to see her "boys," as she loves to call them, and if the sight of their faces was as pleasing to her as her dear face was to them, she was amply repaid for her long journey.

Charlie Ross' father says he has spent all his property and has incurred debts besides in endeavoring to find his lost boy. His brother-in-law has also aided him to the amount of several thousands. Mr. Ross says that $18,000 have been expended in the search through Pinkerton's detective agency.

How Bard Conducts His Paper.

[New York World.]

It is less than three weeks since the original and only Sam Bard, which was P. M. at Atlanta, but now utilizes his phosporous in the editorial columns of the Alabama State Journal, announced his intention in his salutatory of avoiding those personalities which he justly and fervently described as "the blighting, withering curses of American journalism." To this resolve he had been induced by an experience of thirty-five years. The World chronicled the fact as an encouraging one, as an evidence of the near approach of the journalistic millennium when the Argus should prase the Brooklyn government like the Eagle, and the Sun should play with the Tribune, and the Cincinnati Commercial and Enquirer should lie down together and the Courier-Journal should lead them. Alas! resolve has yielded to temptation, and the ripe fruit of thirty-five years has been blasted in a day. Against this dying Postmaster the Chicago Inter-Ocean's living paragraphist lifted up his pen, remarking: "Mr. Bard's decision on that point shows him possessed of all the caution and wisdom necessary to the peaceful existence of a man who dwells within a house of glass." Thereupon the Bard rose in his wrath like Samson, and seizing his trusty jaw-bone, smote the "great political jobber of the Inter-Ocean" hip and thigh, even from Dan unto Beersheba, pursued after him, overcame and divided the spoil, bandied policy with him, overran him with faction, chased him from the highway of argument into the lane of excuse, along the bridle-path of evasion into the squirrel-track of abject apology and up the tree of humiliation, where he left him to perish miserably of hunger and thirst.

—Judge Caton, in a pleasant book of Summer travel, gives some charming pictures of life in Norway. It is evidently a place for Summer excursionists, who long for something fresh and novel, quite out of the line of common tourists. The Judge must have had a rare good fortune in his experiences, or the Norwegians have far more of true refinement and politeness than is commonly ascribed to them. He thinks they are far more polite than the French, for with the latter the habit is formal and assumed, while with the former it is the natural expression of kind and thoughtful regard. Wherever he went he found the people obliging, and eager even to do favors which cost both time and trouble. It is a curious fashion in so cold a country to take off the hat in the streets, when meeting strangers, but this he found to be almost universal. It is, also, a custom to remove the hat on entering a store, no less than a dwelling. He had the good fortune to meet people in city streets, who inquired if he were not a stranger, and volunteered to guide him to the public buildings, and to other objects of interest. The Judge advises travellers to put down Norway on the list of countries to be visited at an early day.

The Maintenance of Health.

The maintenance of health is often more difficult than its recovery. Vitiated conditions of the atmosphere, unhealthy occupations, extremes of heat or cold, and constant exposure to rough weather, are also many provocations of disease. There is but one sure way of effectually guarding the system when thus subjected to influences prejudicial to health, and that is to establish, by judicious tonic and all erative medication, vigor of the body and regularity of its functions. The properties of an invigorant and corrective are happily combined in Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which, at the same time that it infuses unwonted vitality into the system, overcomes all tendency of the stomach, liver, bowels and urinary organs to deviate from regularity in the discharge of functions upon which the welfare of the entire physical organization is dependent. Health cannot be more effectually maintained than by using the Bitters.

A FAMOUS MEDICAL INSTITUTION.
From the Chicago Times.

"The name of Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., has become as familiar to the people all over the country as 'household words.' His wonderful remedies, his pamphlets and books, and his large medical experience, have brought him into prominence, and given him a solid reputation. The Times, in the present issue, presents a whole page communication from Dr. Pierce, and our readers may gain from it some idea of the vast proportions of his business and the merits of his medicines. He has at Buffalo a mammoth establishment, appropriately named 'The World's Dispensary,' where patients are treated, and the remedies compounded. Here nearly a hundred persons are employed in the several departments, and a corps of able and skilled physicians stand ready to alleviate the suffering of humanity by the most approved methods. These physicians are in frequent consultation with Dr. Pierce, and their combined experience is brought to bear on the successful treatment of obstinate cases. The Doctor is a man of large medical experience, and his extensive knowledge of materia medica has been acknowledged by presentations of degrees from two of the first Medical Colleges in the land."

If you would patronize Medicines, scientifically prepared by a skilled Physician and Chemist, use Dr. Pierce's Family Medicines. Golden Medical Discovery is nutritious, tonic, alterative and blood cleansing, and an unequalled Cough Remedy; Pleasant Purgative Pellets, scarcely larger than mustard seeds, constitute an agreeable and reliable physic; Favorite Prescription, a remedy for debilitated females; Extract of Smart-Weed, a magical remedy for Pain, Bowel Complaints, and an unequalled Liniment for both human and horse flesh; while his Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy is known the world over as the greatest specific for Catarrh and "Cold in the Head" ever given to the public. They are sold by Druggists.

The Eastern Railroad directors at a meeting, Thursday, considered a proposition of Superintendent Bachelder, whereby he believes $25,000 a month can be saved. The proposition contemplates among other things, the consolidation of various offices, the discharge of some lines of employes, and the reduction of forces in others, and reforms in the running of trains. The subject of a new loan was also broached, but no definite conclusion reached. It is understood that the matter will reach positive form at the next meeting in a proposition for the issue of notes to the amount of $1,000,000, secured by the individual endorsement of each of the directors.

Speaking of Hatch's tremulous ple, for Tremblay, the democratic repeater, the News-Letter says: The prisoner was convicted, and this result, coupled with the failure of the learned counsel as a political refomer, forces the conclusion that there is nothing left for him more promising than the vocation of a novelist.

Mr. Wm. H. Newell, of Gilmanton, is a farmer and a gentleman of the old school. And his wife is a fit companion and helpmeet for one such. The venerable couple, he being nearly eighty-nine, and she eighty-three, have recently been visiting relatives and friends in this city and are more active than many people of half their years. The old gentleman has worked on his farm all the season, mowing some, and one day hoeing 1000 hills of corn. The couple have twelve children, all married and all living; and the only time they were ever all together, was at their parents' golden wedding about seven years ago. Our well know citizen, Mr. L. V. Newell, is one of the twelve, and he resembles his twin brother so closely that many cannot tell t'other from which!

SCRIBNERS' MONTHLY for 1876.

The publishers invite attention to the following list of some of the attractive articles secured for Scribner's Monthly, for the coming year. In the field of fiction, besides numerous novelettes and shorter stories, there will be

TWO REMARKABLE SERIAL STORIES,

By American Authors.

The first of these, now complete in our hands,

"GABRIEL CONROY,"

By BRET HARTE,

Begins in the November number,

and will run for twelve months. This is Mr. Harte's first extended work. The scenes and characters, which the author has chosen from his favorite field, California, are painted with characteristic vividness and power, and the work is without doubt the most graphic record of California life that has yet appeared.

We shall also begin in the January number,

"PHILIP NOLAN'S FRIENDS,

OR, SHOW YOUR PASSPORTS,"

By EDWARD EVERETT HALE.

The scene of this story is laid in the Southwestern territory, now forming the States of Louisiana and Texas, at the time of Aaron Burr's treason. The characters lived in a section which was now American, now French, and now Spanish, and this record of their adventurous lives makes a story of intense and unflagging interest throughout.

A SECOND "FARMER'S VACATION,"

By Col. GEO. E. WARING, Jr.

Col. Waring is now in Europe, visiting, in a row-boat ride of two hundred and fifty miles, one of the most fertile and interesting of the vine growing valleys of Europe. This second series of papers promises to be even more interesting than that with which our readers are already familiar.

CENTENNIAL LETTERS,

Edited by John Vance Cheney.

A rare collection of Revolutionary Letters, mainly from stores in the hands of the descendants of Gov. Joseph Ward. They are full of interest, and will be read with a rare relish in connection with the Centennial celebration of the year.

BRILLIANTLY ILLUSTRATED ARTICLES ON

AMERICAN COLLEGES,

Written respectively by their friends, will appear during the year. The revived interest in college life makes these papers especially timely, and will secure for them unusual attention.

OLD NEW YORK.

Elegantly illustrated articles on Old New-York, by John F. Mines, will appear at once, and will attract the attention of all, in city or country, who mark with interest the development of the great metropolis, and affectionately remember the quaint peculiarities of its older time.

Every number is profusely illustrated, thus enabling us to give to our descriptive and narrative articles, an interest and permanent value never attained in a non illustrated periodical. Under its accustomed management the magazine will in the future be devoted, as it has been in the past, to sound literature and Christian progress.

The Editorial Departments occupy over twenty pages of each number and contain Dr. Holland's rigorous and timely editorials, as well as Reviews of the latest works in Art, Literature, and Science.

TERMS:

$4.00 A YEAR, in advance; 35 cents a Number.

Daily Chronicle.

—The remains of Perry's flagship are a queer-looking mass. The port side has been cut down nearly to the keel, planking having been torn off and ribs sawed off by those who thought it was no harm to steal a piece of wood off the Lawrence, and this has been kept up until at least a third of her bottom has gone. The Lawrence lay on her starboard side, and that side is, therefore, tolerably whole to her deck beams (upper works all gone years ago,) and the timber is, in general, sound and in good condition, but is a purple black—the result of the action of the water. Of the twenty-seven killed in that naval engagement, twenty-two were killed on the Lawrence, on board of which was the intrepid Perry, whose monument ornaments our public square. The Lawrence was one hundred feet long, twenty-eight feet beam, and nine feet depth of hold. In her time she was a model war vessel, but in these days of iron-clads, monitor rams and heavy armament she would not last as long in an engagement as a yawl boat in a hurricane. She fulfilled her mission, however, and gave our English cousins cause to remember her contemporary and Perry's famous victory.— Cleveland Plain-dealer.

—It is commonly supposed that women are unfitted by nature and training for the hardships of travel in new and wild regions. But those who read the wonderful adventures of Sir Samuel Baker, an African exploration, will find occasion to modify their opinions. Mrs. Baker was as good a traveller as Sir Samuel himself, and her patience and cheerfulness kept up the spirits of the party when they were at the last stages of despair. She seemed essential to the success of the enterprise, for she was not only the nurse of the sick and wounded, and the helper of the weak, but her forethought provided for many great emergencies. On one occasion the whole party might have died of hunger but for her foresight. Finding that the kings and chiefs were growing hostile, and bringing in few provisions, she laid by, unknown even to her husband, twelve bushels of flour for a time of need. The need was speedy and urgent; for soon after, the party, being obliged to fight their way back to Fowera, could neither buy provisions nor forage for them. Their supply gave out, and starvation seemed imminent, when Lady Baker produced her flour, and the whole company were jubilant over their deliverance, and full of wonder at her forethought.

—As Mr. Peter Cudlip of Chicago was dozing in his sitting-room, recently, he was suddenly aroused by a fearful crash of glass at the back of the house and a tremendous tug at the front door bell. Answering it in person and a rage he discovered a small boy, who would have been much smaller had he been washed, grasping the bell-pull and about a fathom of wire in his hand. Round the corner could be seen the heads of about seven other boys, prepared to return or to run, as occasion might dictate. The small boy said: "Please, mister, they had three men on bases, and four to tie, and the striker he hit a bot one to third, and third muffed it, and she's in your greenhouse. Lemme go'n get her, 'cause this is the decidin' game," and, while Mr. Cudlip was speechless, he slipped past and out into the back premises. After tramping over, through, and about all of Mr. Cudlip's horticultural products, the boy returned, and remarking, "She's in the next yard, cully," departed gratefully.

—Don Piatt writes to the Capitol:

We met a friend from Trouville, the fashionable summer resort here, who gave us not a bad item. The landlord of the hotel said to our friend:

"I have a distinguished American lady in my house."

"Ah, indeed! exclaimed our friend, "and what is her name?"

"Madame Mansfield," was the enthusiastic reply; "and she is very distinguished. She receives earls, dukes and princes."

Our friend put on this thinking-cap. He turned over all the Mansfields he had ever heard of. At last he cried:

"Josie Mansfield!"

"Ah! you know her?"

"By reputation only."

"She is very extravagant—ah! very extravagant. She changes her dress four and five times in twenty-four hours, dines in her room a la carte, and has broiled chicken every day."

—In Ceylon large apes are regularly employed to pull cocoanuts. These animals are imported from Acheen, and are marched round the plantations by their owners, who let them out on hire. A line is first attached to each of these peculiar laborers, and he is then sent up a tree, where he is said to select suitable fruit with great discrimination, and to twist the nut round until it falls to the ground. Each successive fall of a nut is hailed by the hairy worker above with a jump and a chuckle of satisfaction.

500,000 ACRES

OF MICHIGAN LANDS,

FOR SALE!

The Lands of the Jackson, Lansing & Saginaw Railroad Company are now Offered For Sale.

They are situated along its railroad and contain large tracts of excellent FARMING and PINE Lands. The farming lands include some of the most fertile and well-watered hardwood lands in the State. They are timbered mainly with hard-maple and beech; soil black, sandy loam, and abound in springs of purest water. Michigan is one of the less indebted and most prosperous State in the Union, and its farmers have a greater variety of crops and resources than any Western state. While some of the Prairie States may produce corn in great abundance, they have no other resource, and when this crop fails destitution follows, as has been the case the past year in Kansas and Nebraska. One Box Dr. Quain's Condition Pills "Nearly Cured Where All Else Failed."

LOWELL, MASS, July 20th, 1874.

T. W. LANE:—I have used one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, am glad to state in my case they have proved all that you claim for them. I have been troubled with Bad Blood and all its consequent diseases, and have tried several kinds of Bitters without receiving much benefit, until I tried the CONDITION PILLS, and they have nearly cured where all else failed. Please send me another package as soon as convenient.

Yours, very truly,
J. D. WHITAKER.

Testimony of a Clergyman---Liver and Kidney Troubles.

EAST TILTON, N. H., April 14, 1875.

MR. LANE.—Dear Sir:—DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS are not only the best, but the very best I ever used. My wife has been troubled with Kidney Complaint many years; one half of a pack age has cured her, so that she feels as well as ever. I have been troubled with Liver Complaint for many years; one-half of a package has done me more good than all the Pills I ever took. One of my neighbors took them, who has been troubled with Liver Complaint for many years: three Pills have helped him. Your Pills, where used, commend their virtues. Please send to my address one package.

REV. JOHN DAVIS.

Liver Compaint and Rheumatism so that he Could not Sleep Nights.

I was born and always lived in Pittsfield, N. H.; am now 50 years old; been troubled with Liver Complaint for 30 years, and Rheumatism for 20 years, sometimes so I could not sleep nights. I have taken one package of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, and they have done me more good and relieved more suffering than all the medicine I have taken during my life.

S. S. RING.
Pittsfield, N. H., Dec. 17, 1874.

Fever and Ague.

NEW BOSTON, N. H., Feb. 1, 1875.

T. W. LANE.—Six month I used to pay for a package of DR. QUAIN'S PILLS. I had tried five so-called ague cures, and I received more benefit from five of your pills than from all the "Cures" "Cholagogues," "Quinine," &c., that I have taken in two years. I cannot recommend it too highly for diseases resulting from long standing Fever and Ague.

Yours, most respectfully,
MRS. C. GARLAND.

Scaly Humor Cured by One Package---Liver Complaint Helped.

NORTH SALEM, N. H., Jan. 5, 1875.

MR. LANE.—Dear Sir:—Your Pills are all they are recommended. I was troubled with a Scaly Humor on my legs; I took one package and my legs are quite smooth. My wife was troubled with Liver Complaint; she took one package and they helped her greatly.

Yours, with respect,
JOHN H. BLAKE.

From a Leading Citizen of Rindge.

WEST RINDGE, Cheshire Co., N. H., November 17, 1874.

THOS. W. LANE:—After taking three packages of DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, I am prepared to say they are the very best, for I have tried a great many kinds, and faithfully too, believing they would help me, to no effect.—These I do believe are the very best ever made; just the kind a man needs. May they be spread all over the wide world, and Dr. Quain's name a household word.

Yours truly,
ASA STICKNEY.

Felt Better, Stronger and Gained Flesh in One Week,

AFTER TAKING DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS.

ROLLINSFORD, N. H.

THOS. W. LANE:—I commenced to take DR. QUAIN'S CONDITION PILLS, and in one week I was heavier, felt better, and was stronger than before, and my one troubled with BAD BLOOD can find sure remedy in these Pills.

Nov. 3, 1874. L. M. YEATON.

CHESTER, N. H., Feb. 24, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have been out of health for some time, and I took a very bad cold and it left my lungs in a very weak state. I received Dr. Quain's Condition Pills and took them according to the directions, and my lungs are some better. I can recommend them to any one who is troubled with weak lungs, for they have done me good, and I think another package will cure me. Dr. Quain's Pills ought to be known throughout the world. Please send me another package as soon as convenient.

Yours, &c., CYRUS LANE.

HILLSBORO BRIDGE, Feb. 25, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—Dr. Quain's Condition Pills are the best I ever used for lameness and pain. The first dose I took removed the pain and lameness that I have been troubled with for several years. Others have used quite a number of the pills besides myself. Please send another package by return of mail.

MRS. DANIEL KIMBALL.

GILMANTON I. W., N. H., Feb. 25, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have been taking Dr. Quain's Condition Pills, and can recommend them as far ahead of common pills for constipation of the bowels; they do not have the debilitating effect of common purgatives I have taken.

MRS. J. B. GOODWIN.

NORTHWOOD CENTRE, March 1, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I saw Dr. Quain's Condition Pills highly recommended, and sent for a package, and I feel that they have done more for me than all the medicine I have taken for years, and can freely recommend them to others, as a good and sure medicine. Please send me another package as soon as possible.

MARTHA NORCROSS.

BRISTOL, N. H., Feb. 27, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE:—I have made a fair trial of those Condition Pills, and liked them very much. I think they are all they are recommended. They are a good Liver invigorator.

N. F. DANFORTH.

SALEM DEPOT, N. H., March 8, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE:—I think these pills (Dr. Quain's Condition Pills) are all they claim to be; my wife and I are both victims of Liver and Kidney Complaint, and general debility. We have taken about half that package you sent me, and find a marked improvement in our health. I want four packages to give away in the north part of Vermont, to friends up there. I enclose $2.00, and if you can, send me four Packages. ROYAL SCOTT.

SOUTH PLATTSBURGH, N. Y., March 11, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE:—I have given Dr. Quain's Condition Pills a trial, and find I can honestly recommend them, they have given me improved health, soreness and lameness with which I have been afflicted since getting upon my feet after the Paralysis of left side that I suffered last October. Please send you to send me another package as soon as convenient, as I am anxious to continue their use. Though not now a resident of New England, I have lived in Central Maine fifty years, and I know, and feel that Dr. Quain's Pills will not long be new in that section.

MOSES SHELDON.

THOS. W. LANE:—I have been troubled with Biliousness, Headache, and Dizziness, for a long time, and had the Dyspepsia so bad there were but few kinds of food my stomach would bear at all. I commenced taking your pills, have taken most of one package, and now enjoy eating as well as I ever did, am not troubled with dizziness unless by taking cold, and have been greatly benefited by the use of them.

A. L. PAGE.

FRANCESTOWN, March 13, 1875.

THOS. W. LANE:—I have found Dr. Quain's Condition Pills to be all you claim for them in Kidney Complaint, poor blood, and weak nerves. May they be circulated over the land and found in every household where medicine is needed. I enclose 50 cts. for another package as soon as convenient.

JOHN T. FELCH.

Better Health than for 10 Years.

CHESTER, N. H., Oct. 17, 1874.

LOCAL AGENTS WANTED.

An Agent Wanted for Each Town and County in the United States.

Parties desiring to act as agents must accompany their application by a letter of recommendation as to character and responsibility from and signed by the Editor of a newspaper published in the town or county for which the agent proposes to act. The agency is to sell the bonds of the Industrial Exhibition Company.

BONDS, $20 EACH.
HALF BONDS, $10 EACH.
QUARTER BONDS, $5 EACH.

The Industrial Exhibition Company will furnish agents with circulars, etc., etc.

Each newspaper published in the town where an agent is located will, as soon as the agency is established, be given an advertisement, advertising such agency and the Company, and fully explaining the plans, purposes and objects of the Company. Such advertisement will continue in such papers as long as an agency is successfully conducted.

The Industrial Exhibition Company is the first to adopt the plan so long in use by the European governments of issuing bonds when the principal is made secure and not risked, but where there is a chance for a large premium, an investment of $20 is sure to return to the investor $21—one dollar more than cost—and the holder of a $20 Bond may obtain a premium either of $50, $100, $200, $500, $1,000, $5,000, $5,000, $10,000, $25,000 or $100,000. The interest, which is ordinarily distributed to all the bondholders pro rata, is in this loan distributed by chance. The purchaser of a bond knows he will receive back his investment, with a small rate of interest, he has a chance in the above named premiums, which are simply the distribution of interest on the whole loan.

Each bond participates in four drawings each year, until it has drawn a premium, when it is surrendered, the premium paid, and the bond cancelled. The Industrial Exhibition Company, under a special charter granted by the State of New York, is given authority to issue these bonds. The Legislature of the State, realizing the great benefits which will arise from the success of this enterprise, have exempted all the real estate and property of the Company from taxation and assessments for five years, and has also conferred other great privileges.

Every American who understands the purposes of this Company will, of a necessity, feel a pride in aiding it to a successful termination.

Each individual who buys a bond becomes an owner and an interested party, and when he views the structure erected with his money can say, "I aided to erect in our country the most magnificent building the world has ever seen, a palace which, in truth, represents the industry, energy and mechanical genius of the American people."

The manufacturers and the inventors of America are peculiarly interested in the success of this enterprise, for the reason that it is to be their home, where all their inventions and manufactures can be exhibited and sold.

The building will contain 5,320,000 square feet of space.

Purchasers desiring Bonds before an agency is established where they reside, will communicate direct with this office, from where they can be supplied.

Parties desiring to act as Agents or to purchase bonds will address

PULMOCINE.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung trying climate of New England,

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

USE

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

A CHANCE FOR ALL!

$100,000

GIVEN AWAY!

The Union Pocket Book Co.

having secured by cash purchase the entire bankrupt stock of Messrs H. Morgond & Co., consisting of 400,000 Portmonies,

(POCKET BOOKS,)

of the best manufacture and superb quality, each pocket-book being made of Real Morocco Leather, to effect a speedy clearance sale and having in view the old motto of the house, Certain Profits with Quick Returns, the company have decided on giving each individual purchaser the full benefit of this remunerative bargain by giving away One Hundred Thousand Dollars, in

2818 MONEY PRIZES!

THE FIRST PRIZE BEING $20,000 CASH.
" SECOND " " $10,000 "
" THIRD " " $5,000 "
and 2815 other money prizes as follows, viz.:

25 PRIZES OF $1000 CASH, EACH.
40 " " 500 " "
50 " " 100 " "
100 " " 50 " "
200 " " 20 " "
400 " " 10 " "
2000 " " 1 " "

The above prizes with the cost of advertising and other incidental expenses, giving the purchasers two-thirds of the profits that accrue on the entire sale, and to enable every one to have an equal share in the profits, with the certainty of receiving treble the value for their small investment and the further opportunity of not only gaining a share in the distribution of $100,000, and this too by the riskless outlay of $1 only.

The Union Pocket Book Co. will deliver free to any address on receipt of One Dollar, a GENUINE MOROCCO LEATHER POCKET BOOK, together with a COUPON TICKET, entitling and giving the holder a share in the drawing of 2818 CASH PRIZES, of the aggregate value of ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS CURRENCY. The Company guarantee to return to each purchaser at least treble the value for his money.

How can this be accomplished? is a question many will doubtless ask themselves, and foreseeing this we offer the following lucid explanation.

The Trade assignee, anxious to dispose of and realize on the entire stock of the bankrupts in one sale, accepted our offer of $ 40,000 cash for the lot; after advertising same for sale for one month, and not receiving a single offer, which in the present depression of business and almost total stagnation of trade is not to be wondered at; notwithstanding that our offer was one third less than the actual cost of the manufacture of the Pocket Books. The assignee having to at once realize the effects of the bankrupts, in the interests of the creditors he had no alternative but to accept this offer and sell us the lot at our own price, thereby enabling us to distribute in prizes $100,000 amongst the purchasers, and at the same time retain a fair marginal profit for ourselves; thus you obtain fully double the value of the amount you forward us and it depends on your luck what amount you gain of the One Hundred Thousand Dollar Money Prizes.

THE SALE WILL POSITIVELY CLOSE ON

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 22, 1875,

and orders for pocket books should therefore be forwarded to us at once—no application by letter after Saturday, November 20th, can be entertained.

1000 of the Pocket Books are of the patented manufacture, superior in value to the remainder, the retail price of the same being $8, and these will be forwarded to early purchasers until disposed of.

Therefore those who send immediate orders will reap the advantage of receiving a superior article.

Remittances can be sent us either for one or any number of pocket books by draft, post office orders, or greenbacks in registered letter by express, etc.

Post Office orders and drafts to be made payable in favor of Frank Stewart, the company's Manager; Post Office orders to be drawn on General Post Office, Philadelphia, and drafts on the First National Bank.

The Drawing of Prizes will take place at the Company's Principal Offices, 530 Locust Street, Philadelphia, in the State of Pennsylvania, on and the winning numbers will be advertised in this Journal and the principal Philadelphia and New York newspapers of saturday, November 27th.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 24,1875

The Prizes will be forwarded by drafts, greenbacks or by post office order per registered letter by Monday's morning mails, November 29th, or if preferred prizes can be sent by express, or in any other manner purchasers may select, providing same be signified by them when forwarding orders for pocket books.

Remember this is no lottery, but a bona fide business system founded on a true financial basis which enables the Company to convert into money an otherwise surplus stock, and this too with a good profit to both the purchasers and Company, effecting a speedy clearance stock which in the present dull times is the great desiderata that in no other way can be successfully attained.

We guarantee each pocket book to be of the best manufacture; of pure morocco leather and intrinsically worth in retail trade at the lowest rate of from $3 to $4.

This is an opportunity that should not be let pass by; one and all should embrace this chance; We afford every one an opportunity of realizing a share in $100,000 at the insignificant outlay of $1 (one dollar) for which they receive value three fold and those who let this fortunate chance escape them will have only themselves to blame.

All letters replied to same day as received. We advise intending purchasers to forward orders immediately which will prevent disappointment and receive prompt attention.

Remember, every one who sends ONE DOLLAR before November 20th, 1875, receives A MOROCCO LEATHER POCKET BOOK of the value of from $3 to $4 and a COUPON, giving them a share in the drawing of $100,000.

ADDRESS ALL ORDERS, LETTERS, ETC., TO

The Union Pocket Book Company,

SOUTH-EAST CORNER 6TH AND LOCUST STREETS,

PHILADELPHIA, PENN.

P. S.—Drawing absolute on Wednesday, November 24th. No postponement in the remote contingency of any number of the pocket books remaining unsold; a slight reduction not exceeding $5000 may be made proportionately from the prizes. inov16

SCRIBNERS' MONTHLY FOR 1876.

The publishers invite attention to the following list of some of the attractive articles secured for Scribner's Monthly, for the coming year. In the field of fiction, besides numerous novelettes and shorter stories, there will be

TWO REMARKABLE SERIAL STORIES,

By American Authors.

The first of these, now complete in our hands,

"GABRIEL CONROY,"

By BRET HARTE,

Begins in the November number, and will run for twelve months. This is Mr. Harte's first extended work. The scenes and characters, which the author has chosen from his favorite field, California, are painted with characteristic vividness and power; and the work is without doubt the most graphic record of California life that has yet appeared.

We shall also begin in the January number,

"PHILIP NOLAN'S FRIENDS,

OR, SHOW YOUR PASSPORTS,"

By EDWARD EVERETT HALE.

The scene of this story is laid in the Southwestern territory, now forming the States of Louisiana and Texas, at the time of Aaron Burr's treason. The characters lived in a section which was now American, now French, and now Spanish, and this record of their adventurous lives makes a story of intense and unflagging interest throughout.

A SECOND "FARMER'S VACATION,"

By Col. GEO. E. WARING, Jr.

Col. Waring is now in Europe, visiting, in a row-boat ride of two hundred and fifty miles, one of the most fertile and interesting of the vine growing valleys of Europe. This second series of papers promises to be even more interesting than that with which our readers are already familiar.

CENTENNIAL LETTERS,

Edited by John Vance Cheney.

A rare collection of Revolutionary Letters, mainly from stores in the hands of the descendants of Col. Joseph Ward. They are full of interest, and will be read with a rare relish in connection with the Centennial celebration of the year.

BRILLIANTLY ILLUSTRATED ARTICLES ON

AMERICAN COLLEGES,

Written respectively by their friends, will appear during the year. The revived interest in college life makes these papers especially timely, and will secure for them unusual attention.

OLD NEW YORK.

Elegantly illustrated articles on Old New-York, by John F. Mines, will appear at once, and will attract the attention of all, in city or country, who mark with interest the development of the great metropolis, and reflectively remember the quaint peculiarities of its olden time.

Every number is profusely illustrated, thus enabling us to give to our descriptive and narrative articles, an interest and permanent value never attained in a non illustrated periodical. Under its accustomed management the magazine will in the future, as it has been in the past, to sound literature and Christian progress.

The Editorial Departments occupy over twenty pages of each number and contain Dr. Holland's vigorous and timely editorials, as well as Reviews of the latest works in Art, Literature, and science.

TERMS:

Portsmouth Chronicle.

Letter From California.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 5.

Your valuable paper comes as ever filled with the chronicles of home news, to keep our hearts sated with the good things that transpire around the old hearthstones. We love to note the political phases of old Portsmouth, but hope that the democracy will not always have so large a share in public affairs as is now held by them in city and State. The republicans of California, from blind issues, were defeated, and it will take much time to repair the loss sustained by them at the last election. So then it behooves us to stand together like our revolutionary sires, if we would still perpetuate the freedom of these United States.

Our city and State have in the last two months passed through a financial crisis, that no city this side of the "Hub" could so well have overcome. A gold and silver currency is a sure foundation on which all banks can rest in safety. The "Bank of California," after a brief suspension, resumed on Oct. 2d. When the doors were thrown open, it was a handsome sight to see the trays of golden twenties and any quantity of silver coin piled upon the counters. The business of the day was truly Californian; the bank had nearly $4,000,000, in its vaults when opening and at one o'clock, the paying teller had passed over the counters $254,000, while the receiving deposits amounted to $1,130,000, thus increasing the funds of the bank over half a million in three hours. The utmost confidence prevails. The syndicate is composed of our best men, and its fund of $7,865,000, will surely be paid in, and all the bank liabilities (some $9,113,015.17,) will be paid in smaller sums on demand and all others in three, six, and nine months. It is worthy of note to state that of the 65 names signed to the guarantee fund, four, namely—D. O. Mills, Wm. Sharon, J. R. Keene, E. J. Baldwin—subscribed one million each. Thus you can judge, in whose hands, this important matter rests that the trusty gold coin inflates nothing, unless its shining notes are seen and felt.

The mining interests of the Sierra, on either slope have been greatly augmented by the great bonanza developments on the Comstock Lode. Hon. H. R. Linderman, director of Mints, has recently visited this lode, and has investigated the bonanza portion particularly; he gives his opinion that the yield of both gold and silver will average $4,000,000, per month, for several years to come. The new Nevada Bank just started in this city, will handle the greatest bulk of the bullion of the Comstock mines, namely the Consolidated Virginia and the California, which it is expected will produce $3,000,100,000, per month. The unusual developments of the Comstock Lode have given a great impetus, to the working of several hundred other mines, located in California, Nevada, Idaho, and Utah, and it is not improbable that great discoveries will yet be made in one or all of the States enumerated above. We feel proud of the future of the Pacific States, both in mineral and agricultural developments. The population is steadily on the increase. The millions of unoccupied acres of the finest farming land in the world are yet waiting the coming of the immigrant. The consolidation of the Granges is very opportune, for new arrivals, as it affords a social convocation, where all can learn the best methods of working the virgin soil, and how to produce the greatest crops with the least amount of labor. Nowhere else do the new implements of husbandry apply so well as on our valley lands, some of which on large ranches will open one continuous furrow only, or if gang-plows are used, will require a day's journey to cross them.

The city of San Francisco is rapidly filling up with a very desirable population, and in consequence, house building has been quite brisk of late; all classes of residences, varying from $1,000 to $100,000 in value, are in process of erection. The Palace Hotel has just commenced to take in its palatial residents, and many of them are millionaires. The Palace is 350 by 275 feet in size and covers 96,250 square feet of land. It is seven stories high, most substantially built, and is fire proof in all essential points. The lower story is 25 feet high, the others 14 and 16 feet. All walls and partitions throughout the hotel are built of stone and brick, laid in cement and banded with iron. There are three inner courts, the centre one being 144 by 84, covered with glass at height of building, with carriage and promenade entries from the street of 44 feet in width, and having a circle driveway of 54 feet in diameter, that being surrounded by a marbled promenade and a tropical garden, having exotic plants, statuary and fountains. Fronting the centre court, from every story and upon its entire boundary, there are verandas, 12 feet wide, illuminated by standard lights, at each pillared section, and from the garden leading to the veranda of the second story floor is an elegant staircase, ornamented at its various landings with statuary and flower vases. Midway up this staircase is the approach to the music pavilion for the instrumental band. The hotel office is 55 by 65 feet, as also entrance to breakfast room 110 by 55 feet; dining room 150 by 55; ball and music room, 65 by 55; ladies' reception room, 40 by 40; reading room 40 by 40. The second floor has a ladies' drawing room 84 by 40; also childrens' dining hall and private ditto. All the outer rooms have big bay windows and every room a fire place, a clothes closet, a toilet room; and to every two rooms there is a bath room. The total number of rooms in the Palace, above the garden floor, exclusively for the use of the guests, are 755. Each floor has its own annunciator, with its special service in attendance, as also a tube receptacle for letters for Post Office. There is a pneumatic dispatch tube, by which parcels can be sent to each floor. The hotel has four artesian wells, a reservoir under the garden plot—holding capacity being 630,000 gallons, steam engines and pumps, and a supply of 14,570 feet of hose, with fire apparatus complete, located on each floor of the building. In every room and passageway there is a thermostatic bulb, by which any extra degree of heat existing will be announced at the general office, upon a dial stating the exact locality, making thereby a complete fire alarm. There are five elevators and seven stairways, leading from garden floor to the upper story. There is a solid iron staircase, enclosed by brick, which leads from basement to upper story, having openings only on each floor. The elevators are worked by hydraulic power, and while the most desirable speed is attained they are securely safe and noiseless, and in every way free from all objections that have heretofore prevailed with similar conveyances. As our climate is salubrious, the thermometer at San Francisco, in Summer, ranging from 60 to 70 degres Fahrenheit and in Winter from 50 to 60 degrees, travellers will find the Palace Hotel to fully harmonize with it in its attractive features, by combining the comforts and conveniences of American and European Hotels with the greatly prized luxuries of Oriental life. J. E. W. C.

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 19, 1875.

The Arctic Expedition.

The Arctic exploring steamer Pandora arrived at Portsmouth, England, on Saturday. She left Disco on the 7th of August, and Uppernavick on the 13th, crossing Melville Bay without mishap. At Carey Islands no signs of the Government exploring expedition were visible. Capt. Young decided to steer for Lancaster Sound, where he encountered the first ice-floes. With great difficulty the Pandora forced her way; despite the ice she succeeded in travelling the entire length of Barrow Strait, reaching Beechy Island Aug. 25th; she there found the yacht Mary, which had been drawn upon the beach in 1850 by Capt. Ross. The yacht was still standing with her masts upright. The storehouse built for the benefit of sailors or cast-aways or ice-bound vessels was found in a state of terrible confusion. The destruction was accomplished by polar bears, as tracks of these animals were visible in every direction. The head boards over the graves of Sir John Franklin's men buried there were still in a good state of preservation. On the 25th the Pandora steamed for Peel Strait, and encountered vast fields of pack ice, which made the passage a most difficult and dangerous one. The Pandora steadily worked her way onward and soon passed the furthest point reached by the Fox when McClintock was in search of Franklin relics. Soon after reaching that point the Pandora passed King William's Land, thus navigating a sea which no ship ever traversed before except perhaps that of Franklin. The Pandora steamed down the coast of Prince of Wales Land and encountered most delicious weather; the atmosphere was soft and refreshing and the bitter cold of the Arctic zone replaced by warm air currents and an expanse of water. Intense excitement prevailed among the officers and men of the expedition as it was expected important results were at hand. On reaching Poquette Island, saw the edge of a solid pack of ice which extended across the strait from side to side in one unbroken expanse. This pack blocked the entrance to Bellot's Strait. The Pandora stayed at this point until the 7th of September, when, finding no further progress possible, it was decided useless to go into Winter quarters, and far better to return next year. The return journey was full of difficulties, as the ice was rapidly forming, and the passage of the Pandora was a constant series of exciting scenes and narrow escapes from moving ice-floes. Finally escaping through Peel Strait, the ice rapidly forming and accumulating, the steamer at length reached Carey Islands in safety. From Melville Bay the homeward voyage was almost uneventful. Capt. Young reports that from the prevalence of north winds there is abundant promise that Capt. Nares will prove successful. The Pandora only lost two topgallant yards and two jibbooms during the entire voyage.

News and Notes

The New York Sun, which is as partisan a democratic sheet as any paper in the United States, and has been anti-republican ever since President Grant refused to make its owner and editor Secretary of War, is afraid lest the Presidential election next year shall result in another republican triumph. It calls lustily for more vigor in the democratic ranks, points to the fact that republicans are electrified because Ohio has reversed the 17,000 democratic majority of last year to 5000 republican this year, and that Iowa has given a republican majority greatly in excess of that cast last year,—and predicts that if in November, Pennsylvania, New York and Massachusetts, or any two of them, shall repudiate their verdict of last year, "it would certainly cover the Presidential chances of the democracy with a dark cloud." Just so.

A wealthy family of seven persons in St. Pierre, a French colony in British North America, have been murdered by robbers. Francois de L'Escale, the father of the family, was a millionaire.

The tramp supposed to be insane seen lurking about the woods of Pembroke was seen again last week by Joseph Hope, who was considerably frightened. He claims that he was getting water at a spring when the tramp came out of the woods and immediately disappeared. Officer Hildreth has been searching the woods, but discovered nothing more than a deserted shanty, some three miles from the scene where the murder was committed. Wm. Drew, who was released from custody last week, is quite sick. It is reported that he has the typhoid fever.

Nearly every horse in town has the epizootic.

It looks as if the perpetrators of the outrage on Charles G. Kelsey, who was tarred and feathered, mutilated, and believed to have been murdered, on the night of Nov. 4, 1872, in the village of Huntington, L. I., are to escape punishment. The jury, before whom Dr. Banks and Royal Sammis have been on trial at Riverhead three days for participating in the crime, rendered a verdict of not guilty. As this was a test case, it is very doubtful whether the indictments for murder against the accused will ever be brought to trial unless unrelenting efforts are made by friends of the victim and law-abiding citizens to press the matter.

Hopkinton has typhoid fever.

At Senatobia, Miss., Saturday night, a fatal affray occurred between Col. J. H. Cocke and J. H. McHenry. Several shots were fired by both, McHenry firing the first one, which seriously if not mortally wounded Col. Cocke, who then drew a knife and cut McHenry several times, killing him almost instantly. The cause of the difficulty was a political difference.

At Hackettstown, N. J., Saturday morning, James Riper shot and killed his two sons, aged 6 and 10, and shot at his wife, but missed his aim. He then shot himself in the head, but the wound is not serious. Riper was arrested. Domestic troubles led to the crime.

Gen. Rutherford B. Hayes, Governor elect of Ohio, is a native of that State. He was educated at Kenyon college, studied law at Cambridge, and settled at Cincinnati, where he joined Rosecrans' regiment as major in 1861. He was severely wounded at Antietam, but happily recovered without permanent injury, and went home at the end of the war with the rank of brigadier general. He served in Congress for four years after the war; was then elected governor for two terms; and after an intermission of two years has been recalled to public life. He was nominated for Congress while still with his regiment, and when the district committee urged him to go home and attend to the canvass, replied, "I have other business. Any man who would leave the army now to electioneer for Congress or any other place ought to be scalped."

Jottings.

Members of the Portsmouth Music Society are requested to meet at Mercantile Hall this Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock.

The Circuit Court commences its session in this city to-day.

We clip from one of our exchanges the following recipe for a compound which is said to be successful in giving relief in cases of epizootic among horses: One ounce of pulverized elecampane root, one ounce of Peruvian bark, one quarter of an ounce of antimony, one ounce of ginger. This is to be given three times a day, in doses of one table spoonful, mixed in shorts. Great care should be taken in regard to the food given to the animals, and grass or cabbage leaves should not be given them, as they create gas in the stomach. Onions and new potatoes may be given them, and chloride of lime sprinkled in the stall will have a beneficial effect. Care should be taken that the blanket used in the stall is in accordance with the weather.

There will be no drill of the new Artillery company this evening, the ward room being occupied for other purposes.
